THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

PUTTING THE ROSES TO SLEEP

"The inexorable decree of nature," says the writer of this article, "is that plants must have a period of rest. A complete rest is essential to life. No halfway measures will suffice." And the writer proceeds to show how nature's methods should be imitated in lulling the roses to sleep.

OF US must sleep, as rest in the form of sleep is essential to the continued physical and mental welfare of the human race. It is nature's method of repairing the tissues worn by exertion during the hours of wakeful activity, and of replenishing the system's store of vitality.

Without sleep, physical and mental exhaustion would ensue and decay result.

Vegetable bodies, being similar to animal bodies as far as the vital force called life is concerned, must likewise be able to secure for themselves a period of rest of sufficient duration to permit a complete rejuvenation of their vital parts.

By CHARLES N. COTTER, of Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y.

Mother Nature's Methods.

Under natural conditions Mother Nature, with her capable assistants, Autumn and Winter, sees that all her children, large or small, are lulled to sleep at the proper time, and takes measures to prevent their awakening before the proper time.

Plants that are cultivated for their commercial utility under artificial conditions, by gross man, do not always receive the amount of rest that is necessary for their future well-being. This dereliction is caused either by a lack of knowledge concerning the rest requirements of the various plants, or by a mercenary desire to enjoy a longer period of productivity, or, worst of all, by downright carelessness and indifference. But, whatever the cause, that unpardonable crime, once committed against nature, must be expiated and the penalty will be decreased vigor and consequent decreased productivity.

The Period of Rest.

Of all the plants cultivated under artificial conditions, and carried over from year to year, the rose is the most exacting in regard to a period of rest of sufficient duration following a period of activity. If it is denied rest and the benefits to be derived therefrom, its future activity will be more or less unsatisfactory.

What is the best method to follow in resting roses preparatory to another season of activity? That is a question that perplexes the minds of some growers. The only satisfactory answer is, rest them as thoroughly as Mother Nature rests their less pampered relatives, that dwell amid natural conditions. That is, rest them until they are entirely defoliated, or as nearly so as possible; until, in the natural course of nature, their buds show signs of expansion.

But how shall I proceed to bring my plants to such a condition? That is the question that will follow the answer to the first. Again the answer is, emulate Mother Nature. In the temperate zone, autumn, with its cooler weather and frosts, is accompanied by a marvelous change in vegetation. Vegetative growths begin to die down gradually to the crown of the plants. Trees and shrubs show a wonderful change of color in their leaves.

This change of color is followed by a gradual but steady loss of foliage, until in a short time their branches are entirely defoliated and stand bare before the cold winds of late autumn and early winter.

A Gradual Awakening.

They have gone to sleep and will remain asleep until Spring, with her warm breezes and gentle rain, gradually awakens them, and, eager to please her, they rapidly don their new, glistening green garments and so signify their readiness to resume the duties which the great Architect of the universe intended them to perform.

From observation of natural conditions it can be seen that a period of rest must follow a period of activity if continuity of life is to be had. Leaves, as the organs of respiration, digestion and assimilation, can perform their functions for so long and no longer. Provisions must be made for their replenishment, or life must cease. And Nature, in her divine wisdom, does not intend to permit life to cease while there is a possible chance to prevent it. So she lulls her children to sleep, and, while they are going to sleep and also while they are sleeping, she provides the means for a new garment to cover their nakedness. So quietly and effectively does Nature do her work.

One interpretation of her method is as follows: The leaves, like the stomach of man after a certain amount of digestion and assimilation has taken place, contain a residue of waste material which must be removed. If it is not removed, improper functioning will be the result and eventually death. It would seem that the maximum capacity of the leaves to take care of waste matter is for six months. After that length of time assistance must be given. In the natural scheme of life, spring and summer, with their congenial atmospheres, are the periods in which vegetative life expands to its utmost capacity and discharges all of its obligations to man. Then the great cleansing of the system must take place. Autumn comes to the rescue. Cold supplants the heat of summer. The soil in which the roots of plants reside is affected. The chill decreases the ability of the roots to imbibe sufficient moisture to nourish the cells of the leaves. A general contraction and withdrawal of the vital elements takes place, for nature is economical and will not allow the organized compounds in the leaf cells to be wasted. The escape of moisture by transpiration through the leaves is greater than the intake, with the result that protoplasm and all stored up organized materials contained in the leaves are withdrawn to the stems and branches, leaving nothing but waste material in the cells of the leaves, which subsequently fall and thereby consummate the cleansing.

Wholesome and Adequate Rest.

The materials withdrawn from the leaves are concentrated at the points from which expansion will take place under the beneficial influences of spring environment, and so the continuity of life is provided for.

That is the program that must be followed by the grower of roses if he desires to secure maximum success from carried-over plants. No halfway measures will be acceptable to nature, even if proof of their efficacy is offered by growers who have derived a measure of success from their application. The inexorable decree of nature is, that plants must have a period of rest. Differences as to individual interpretation of that law will not obtain. Rest is essential to life and a complete rest must be had. There is as much difference between partial rest and complete rest in plants, when results are considered, as there is between a fretful, nervous sleep, indulged in sometimes by man, and the wholesome, 8-hour, tissue-repairing sleep he should have. As the man will arise from the fretful sleep in a fatigued condition, so will the plant awaken from a partial rest.

Under Artificial Conditions.

Let us in fancy apply nature's method to rose plants which are grown under artificial conditions in greenhouses, and which are to be carried over for another season. In outside plants the maximum degree of growth is achieved just prior to autumn. Therefore roses in greenhouses should be in full crop prior to the drying off. The foliage should be abundant and entirely free from mildew and red spider. In outside plants the sleep or drying off is produced by a decrease in the moisture imbibition of the roots. Likewise in greenhouse-grown plants moisture must be gradually withheld from the roots. This decrease in moisture supply in both cases will cause a withdrawal of the vital contents of leaf cells to the points where eyes are located on stem and branches, where future growth will spring forth. Defoliation will follow these changes in both cases, and, when the plants are thoroughly rested, activity will commence again of its own accord. In outside plants this resumption of activity is timed to occur in the spring, while in greenhouse-grown roses it will occur after sufficient rest. Ample moisture in the root regions must then be afforded, and forthwith growth will start off with great vigor.

To supplement the foregoing natural methods, a rose grower adhering to the following program, with only necessary deviations to meet local exigencies, will be sure to be successful in carrying roses over from year to year.

Ripening the Wood.

When starting to dry off the plants about the beginning of June, decrease the water applications to once a week for the first two weeks. After that, do not water again for ten or twelve days, and then not again for two weeks; after that, not again until right before pruning, unless local conditions demand it. By this time defoliation should be rapidly taking place and the wood slowly ripening. Great watchfulness should at all times be exercised to guard against too rapid drying. This condition may be discerned by a withering of the bark of the flower stems and a burning of the foliage. Water should be applied to spots where the plants are showing tendencies to become so afflicted, and care should be taken that the condition is ameliorated, for, if it is allowed to become general, great damage to the plants will result.

The time required for a proper drying is from six to eight weeks, and at the end of that time the plants should be almost entirely defoliated and the eyes should be swelling. If such is the case, they are now ready to be pruned and awakened. If all details have been properly carried out, the plants will rapidly respond to increased water applications and will give, in return for the care exercised, maximum productivity and disease resistance.

LIABILITY OF TELEPHONE CO.

The florist who looks to efficient telephone service as a means of bringing business to his establishment will be interested to hear that a Nebraska court has decided that a telephone company is liable for loss sustained by a subscriber through its omission of his name and number from the telephone directory. Although the case is a novel one as to facts, so far as court records go, the legal principle upon which it rests is old—the principle that one who breaks a business contract is liable for all damages sustained by the other party as a natural consequence of the breach. The ordinary telephone service contract binds the telephone company to maintain the subscriber's name and address in directories issued by the company, and breach of such obligation certainly is a serious matter to a florist, especially in a large city, where extensive business depends upon representation in a telephone directory.

SMALL'S NEW NEW YORK STORE.

J. H. Small & Sons, for twenty-four years on Broadway, have just completed the remodeling of the old Vanderbilt property at Fifty-second street and Madison avenue, which they have converted into one of the finest flower stores in America. The accompanying illustrations are reproduced from photographs made a few days ago, at the time of the opening.

The idea is to maintain the semblance of a miniature sunken garden rather than the appearance of a typical salesroom. In the center of the room there is an Italian art fountain. On the Madison avenue front there is an exquisite reception and writing room. A mezzanine gallery affords an opportunity to look down upon the garden, while a broad stairway leading up to a porch-like effect, with doors and windows, represents the exterior of a dwelling, and makes the garden seem as real as if it were outdoors.

In one of the illustrations J. Henry Small, of Washington, is seen, with C. Albert Small, the partner resident in New York. J. H. Small, 3d, recently has joined the firm, after two years spent in Europe following completion of the course at Cornell. Landscape gardening is his specialty and Small & Sons now will develop this department of the business, making it one of the leading features.

J. H. Small, 1st, established the business in Washington in 1855. The New York branch was started almost a quarter of a century ago. The firm has been for years widely known, especially for its decorations; it has done six inaugural balls, as well as many other famous ones.

That Small & Sons never do anything by halves is shown by the pictures of the new store, but another evidence is that, though not advertisers in the general sense, they took the whole first page of one section of the Herald, May 7, for an illustrated "Special Notice" of their new establishment and business history.

CONTROL OF THE ROSE-CHAFER.

The rose-chafer, one of the most widely distributed and troublesome insects with which the florist or gardener has to contend, is the subject of a new Farmers' Bulletin (No. 721) of the Department of Agriculture, by F. H. Chittenden and A. L. Quaintance. The insects appear as long-legged beetles of a yellowish brown color, usually in the month of June. They strip all kinds of vegetables, fruits and flowers of blossoms and foliage, and where especially plentiful do great damage. In from four to six weeks after their first appearance they leave as suddenly as they came. Roses and grape vines especially suffer from attacks of the insects, but the beetles are almost equally destructive to fruit, shade and other trees and shrubs. When the rose-chafers are especially numerous they attack nearly all garden fruits and vegetables.

A thoroughly effective remedy against this insect is yet to be discovered. Any application that may be made is unsuccessful unless applied almost continuously, for as often as the beetles on a plant are killed, others arise from the ground or from neighboring fields to take their place. Many so-called "sure" remedies, including compounds of copper, lime, kerosene and tobacco, have failed to give results when put to a rigid test. Whatever practice of a remedial nature is undertaken, whether collecting or spraying, it should be begun at the first onset of the insects' attack and continued until they disappear.

Ornamental plants that are hardy may possibly be protected by a heavy application of arsenate of lead, using four or five pounds to fifty gallons of either water or Bordeaux mixture. Thorough applications should be made when the insects first appear, and repeated applications should be made as found necessary.

The rose-chafer is extremely sensitive to disturbance when it is in the pupal stage in the soil. Numbers may be destroyed by simply stirring the breeding grounds at the proper time to a depth of three or more inches. In northern Ohio the most favorable time for the application of this remedy is from May 25 to June 10. In the south the operation should be commenced earlier. All ground which might serve as a breeding place should be plowed and harrowed at the proper time. The least possible light sandy soil should be left in sod, only the heaviest land being used for grass.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

HE SHOULD SELL ROSES.

As I see that the wholesale florists intend to raise the price of carnations to $7 per hundred, it seems to me that Mothers' day was put up for their benefit and not for the people or for the retailer. I think I will go to my congressman and to the newspapers and get them after the flower trust, for surely it is against the Sherman act to freeze the people out. I do not like to be soaked and there are many poor people who have mothers to remember. You may say I am foolish to write like this, but if all retailers would put up in the movies and in their ads, "Cut out flowers; buy something else," then where would the wholesalers be?

Charles Helm.

SYSTEM IN THE OFFICE.

The letter of the Livingston Seed Co. in the issue of The Review for May 4, setting forth the errors often attending the settlement of F. T. D. orders, owing to a lack of proper billing and accounting, and requesting The Review to open its columns to a discussion regarding better methods for handling this class of business, is a step in the right direction; an exchange of ideas and a frank discussion on any subject will prove beneficial.

It is to be presumed that no florist would willfully make such blunders as were referred to, but many firms, and some of the larger ones, seem to give the accounting end of their business little thought toward improvement and evidently deem it of minor importance, when in fact small leaks here and there, directly and indirectly, occasioned by an inadequate system of bookkeeping, will make a big hole in the net profits in the course of a year's business. This is an age of advancement and improvement in all departments of the florists' business and the accounting department should be given as careful attention and consideration as any other.

When an F. T. D. or mail order is received it should be carefully filled and promptly delivered as specified, a proper entry made charging same and an invoice mailed as soon as delivery has been made; always being particularly careful to make the charge against the firm ordering, and not against the person whose card was enclosed, as was done in the case cited. In sending an order, the telegram or letter should be specific and a copy of it should be retained and filed under a special index. When an invoice or statement of bill is received it should be remitted for promptly and copy of the order stamped "Paid," and refiled.

Frequent errors in accounts are annoying to customers and have a tendency to lead them to expect the same methods to be employed in the filling of their orders, so naturally their business will eventually go to the ones who have an established reputation for efficient service.

The maintenance of a reliable system of accounting does not necessitate a cost disproportionate to its value, but is a live asset to any business, large or small.

Owing to its wide circulation, The Review is an excellent medium for an exchange of ideas and methods employed by different florists throughout the country, and a general discussion along these lines will tend to establish a more uniform system of handling orders and accounts and will prove beneficial to all concerned.

R. E. Cardwell.

THE IMPORT SITUATION.

As is remarked in The Review, issue of May 4, the importing game becomes more and more bothersome and difficult and we are one of the wholesalers seriously thinking of discontinuing business until more opportune times.

The ocean freight, insurance and additional costs on account of lost papers (we have not seen consular invoice or bill of lading on our last four or five shipments) increase the cost of importing to a great extent, while the florist has been educated up to buying f. o. b. an American port.

It seems to be impossible to get this extra expense out of the florist, as competition has increased noticeably since the beginning of the European war. This is due, of course, to a decreased consumption of bulbs in Europe.

Whether or not we will fill fall, 1916, orders depends on conditions existing in July.

It would be interesting to try to find out what the consequences would be should no Dutch bulbs be imported next fall. It spells big money for somebody. Who will be the lucky dog? Carnation or rose grower? Or perhaps the plant specialist? Give us your views in your valued paper, please.

Lechner Bros.

The Review is of the opinion that there will be plenty of Holland bulbs in the autumn. There is a prospect that the British market will be closed by act of the government there and that the Hollanders will have to look elsewhere for a market for about twice as many bulbs as come to America.

The only difficulty in shipping to America will be because of the reduced and irregular service of the Holland-America line and the freight congestion that has resulted. But the line values the bulb business too highly to fail to take care of it as long as its boats are running.

Should the Holland-America line suspend sailings, which now seems unlikely, The Review predicts that the Dutch Bulb Exporters' Association will find a means of putting at least one large shipment into this country.

London, England.—Insurance brokers now are writing government policies covering greenhouse damage resulting from air raids by German zeppelins.

London, England.—The trade conference on which hopes are based has been set for May 24, the second day of the Chelsea show, and will be held at the Windsor hotel. A special committee of the Horticultural Trades' Association has been formed to arrange the program and draft a series of proposals, formed to advance and protect the interest of the trade now and after the war, which will form the ground of discussion at the conference.

Rotterdam, Holland.—American importers of plants and bulbs will be interested to note that the annual report of the Holland-America line for 1915 shows a total revenue for the year of 22,841,533 florins, as compared with 7,253,806 in 1914. The dividend is fixed at fifty per cent. The report mentions that the company made every endeavor to carry out its agreement with the Netherlands Overseas Trust and the British government, but in spite of this its ships experienced considerable delays in British waters on the homeward as well as on the outward voyage, and this caused some prejudice to the company's business. The space available to shippers has been reduced by the loss or damage of several steamers by submarines or mines.

London, England.—The Horticultural Trades' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, seeking to compromise the contention with the Dutch Bulb Exporters' Association growing out of the agreement to charge for cases and packing, has officially suggested that a definite and reasonable scale of these charges be drawn up and agreed upon, so that the amount of the charges be uniform to all buyers and known in advance. The British association advises its members to insist that terms be f. o. b. steamer.

Orpington, England.—The Carnation Yearbook for 1916, edited by J. S. Brunton, of Burnley, recently made its appearance, published by the secretary, T. A. Weston, of this place. The volume, with its records of work accomplished by the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society during 1915, makes its appearance at a time when Europe is still engaged in warfare. According to the preface, "the depleted roll of members is partly accounted for through many members and carnation growers being actively engaged with the forces of His Majesty at home and in foreign lands, and partly on account of the stress of the times in which we live. Nevertheless, considering all circumstances, the society's records are praiseworthy, and the determination to carry on amply justified by the measure of success attained." The organization has 410 members.

SWEET POTATOES.

Kindly inform me what will make canvas turn water. I wish to cover a sweet potato hotbed with this material. Also, how many bushels of seed sweet potatoes will be needed for a bed 4x16 feet, and how many slips can be taken from the seed sweets every other day? Any information will be appreciated. C. E. H.—Ill.

Draw the canvas taut over the frame of your sweet potato hotbed and apply warm linseed oil with a paint brush. One bushel of medium-sized seed sweet potatoes will cover sixteen square feet, or four bushels will be needed for a bed 4x16 feet.

The Yellow Nansemond and Yellow Jersey varieties average about 3,000 plants to the bushel. The Big Stem Jersey, Early Golden and Nancy Hall varieties are not so productive, and we consider 2,500 plants from a bushel of seeds a good yield. About seventy-five per cent of the plants usually are ready for drawing in six weeks after bedding, and the balance ten days later.

WANTS LARGER TOMATOES.

In The Review for April 13, on page 50, there appeared an article under the heading "Tomatoes Under Glass," by F. E. B. The method of artificial pollination described certainly is the proper one, as it never fails to set the fruit, but there are several questions I would like to have F. E. B. answer. Here they are:

What variety of tomatoes do you grow? I have mostly grown the Comet, but I find that the fruit, while it sets well, is small; it averages about six or seven to the pound. My market wants about four or five tomatoes to the pound.

How far apart do you set the plants? I plant two rows in a bench three feet six inches wide, and set the plants fourteen inches apart in the rows.

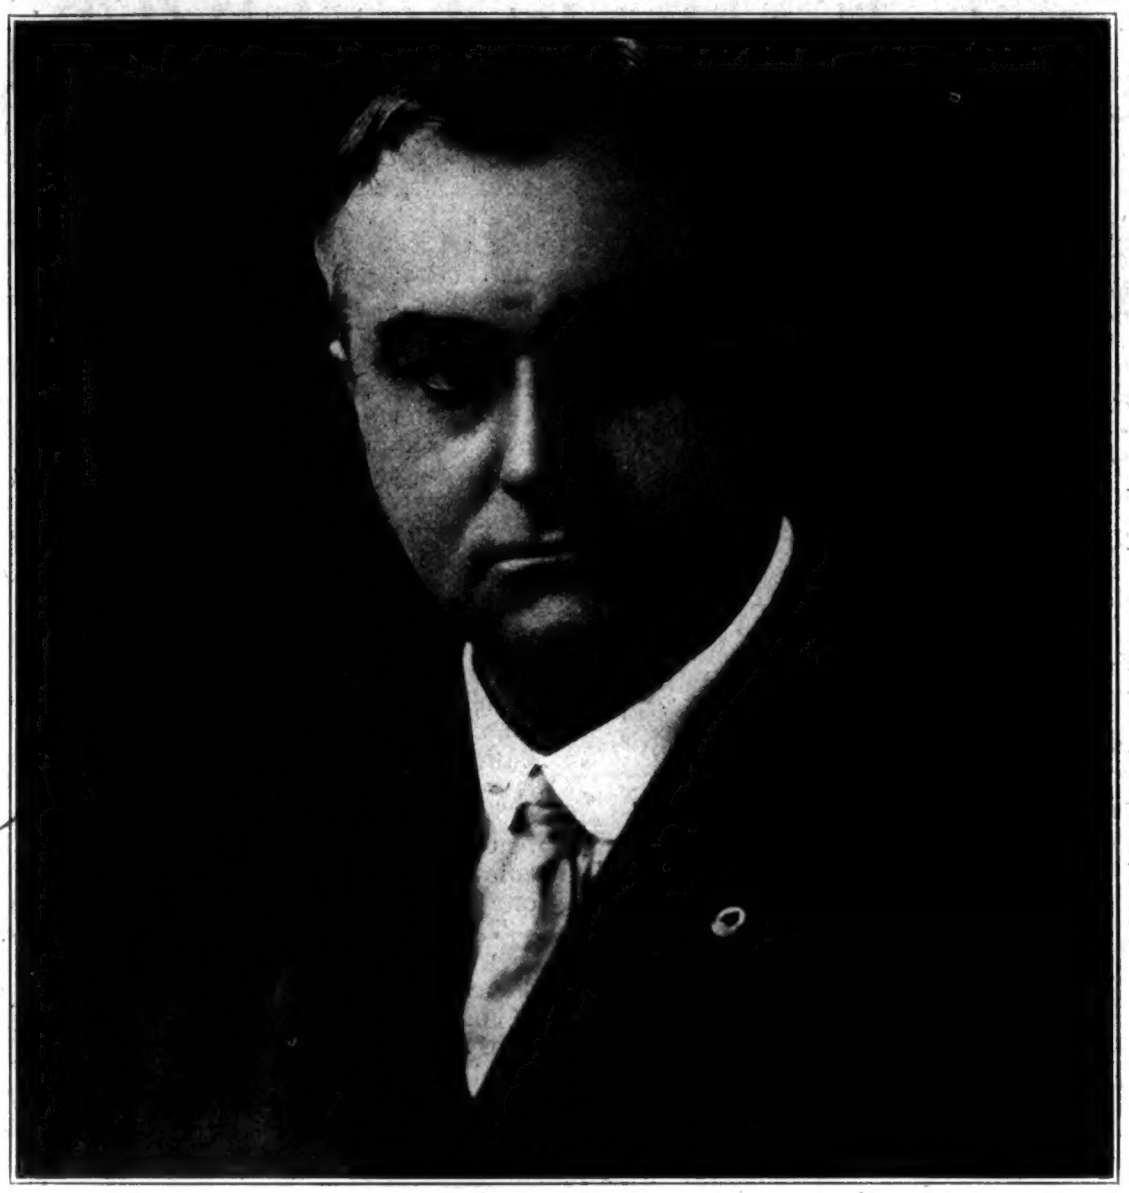
How often and what do you feed the plants? I mix four pounds of nitrate of soda with eight pounds of sulphate of potash and twelve pounds of superphosphate. I feed two ounces of this to the square yard, one application each week. When I first plant I use a little more soda and less potash. My fruit is always of excellent flavor.

When do you stop your plants? I generally allow mine to grow about seven feet. The plants have seven to nine fruit bunches.

Do you have any trouble in obtaining large tomatoes? This is my greatest trouble. My blossoms set well, but they will not swell to a good size. This year they are better, but still not so large as I want them. If I fed the plants more, would I obtain better results? C. D. O.—Cal.

I grow the variety known as Balch's Fillbasket. It is a smooth variety and produces four or five tomatoes to the pound. Also, it is the earliest variety I know. I am sending you a little of the seed. My house is 25x200 feet; the output is seven tons of fruit.

The distance between the plants should be at least eighteen inches. If grown too close the plants come drawn and weak, and carry poor fruit.



Your feeding is quite wrong. Never mix nitrate of soda with acid phosphates or sulphate of ammonia. The mixing of superphosphate with nitrate of soda liberates the free nitric acid. The use of large quantities of nitrate of soda on the tomato plant before it is balanced would give you excessive growth at the expense of the fruit. A larger quantity of phosphate or bone flour would be infinitely better. The potash is all right and would give you quality and flavor.

The question of when to stop the plants depends on how you want the fruit. If you require an early crop, stop the plants at the third bunch, one leaf above the bunch of fruit. Remove the leading lateral bud and take up the lateral bud below the top bunch of fruit. To have a full crop, run the plants to the roof and then lay in all side growths.

When the tomato commences to swell you should begin to feed—never give a young horse corn. Possibly the best you could use for this purpose would be fish or blood fertilizer. Both are organic and contain fourteen to sixteen per cent of ammonia. A liberal dressing once a week, with an occasional soaking of cow manure liquid, would be about right. Never feed a tomato plant with nitrogenous manures until it is balanced and fruiting.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

JOHN POEHLMANN.

IT would be a fine thing for the trade if there were more men in it held in the esteem accorded John W. Poehlmann. Everyone acquainted with trade history knows the outline of Mr. Poehlmann's business career; how as young men from Milwaukee three brothers started, in 1890, a greenhouse business at Morton Grove, Ill., on a combined cash capital of $80; how today the corporation that eventuated has the largest investment in greenhouses and equipment to be found anywhere in the United States, its assets being appraised above a million. John Poehlmann, the eldest of the brothers, is president and in charge of the Chicago wholesale store. He is a man of few words, but with a keen sense of humor and his advice frequently is sought by outsiders, because of his well known conservatism. Mr. Poehlmann recently has not been in good health and has freed himself of business details, with the result that he has had time to keep in still closer touch with trade affairs in general.

HOW TO FIGHT THE RED SPIDER

A SCIENTIST'S ADVICE.

[The following is a paper by Parker Thayer Barnes, assistant zoölogist of the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa., read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club May 2.]

The red spider is a pesky pest, with which everyone who grows plants under glass has a tussle sooner or later, usually sooner. It also at times gives much trouble to shade trees and even to fruit trees. There really seems to be no limit to the extent of its ramifications.

The red spiders are mites. They belong to the great class of arachnida, to which spiders, scorpions and the daddy-long-legs belong. They bear to the more highly developed and complex insects, such as the moths and flies, a position somewhat similar to that of the ferns to flowering plants, although this is rather a poor simile.

The red spider is not a new insect in any way one may look at it. New species are being found from time to time, but that is because but few specialists have worked in this branch of the animal kingdom, and they are so much alike that it is really hard to distinguish them. They have four pairs of legs—only three when born, but the other pair develops while they are young.

Habits of the Red Spider.

They winter outside under stones, in leaves and other rubbish, and when warm weather returns, about the time the leaves appear, they climb into the trees and plants and start laying eggs. Each female can lay from five to ten eggs a day for a period of eight to twelve days. In five days they become adults. Brood after brood is produced all summer, unless the weather interferes. Much the same conditions exist in the greenhouse, except that the spiders do not hibernate, because it is warm there the year around.

The mites do not travel fast except when disturbed; ordinarily they move slowly, and for a greater portion of the time they are stationary, sucking the sap from the leaf on which they are resting. The removal of the sap from the cell causes the cell to dry out and die, which gives the leaf that peculiar look always associated with a severe attack. A similar appearance is caused in the fruit trees sometimes by a little leaf hopper.

By Its Web It is Known.

The genus of mites that includes the common red spider is tetranychus, and all the members of this genus spin a fine thread. In severe attacks these threads are so abundant as to form a web, either upon the upper or lower surface of the leaves or covering the branch or a number of leaves. I have seen this occur in greenhouses where things were allowed to run in a haphazard way. The use of this web nobody seems to understand. It affords no protection to the mites. Dr. Baules suggests that its chief use is to hold the eggs, while another scientist suggests that it keeps the eggs from falling off the plant while they are molting. Experiments have proven that it does not in any way serve to aid their progress.

The spinning organs that produce this web are supposed to be situated in the spider's head, the threads coming out through the palpi or feelers, but some delicate dissection work under a high-powered microscope still is necessary in order to locate the red spider's spinning mill.

The Greenhouse Species.

The common species of the greenhouse is T. bimaculatus. They are supposed to be red in color, but anyone who has ever examined them under a hand lens knows that some of them have a washed-out color, much like the crushed strawberry-colored shirt that has gone through the laundry. But the color does not vary in a colony; all of one colony are the same shade of color.

This species is by no means confined to greenhouses, as I have already intimated, nor to our northern climate. It is common in the south, at first on violets, but it now has spread from this humble plant to the cotton plant. On this it works such damage that it has been necessary for the federal bureau of entomology to detail men to learn how it can be easily and cheaply combated. In California it has threatened the hop crop and again the government has come to the aid of the beer drinkers and saved the backbone of their staple beverage. From this you can see that the grower of plants under glass is not the only sufferer from the mites or red spiders.

The orange groves of Florida and California are infested with a couple of species. It was a serious pest as far back as 1889, for the report of the entomologist of the United States Department of Agriculture of that year said it was a menace to the crop.

Others of the Tribe.

A pale greenish species, T. pratensis, is abundant in the west on alfalfa and other crops. A bright red species, T. opuntiæ, plays hide-and-seek on the prickly pears of Texas. A short-legged, short-haired European species is found on the spruce trees of Canada. Another species is common on the leaves of the oak and chestnut, and a comparatively recent arrival from Europe is T. pilosus, which much prefers the fruit trees of our orchards. The European plum seems to be the favorite food plant of this species.

The array of species is no doubt uninteresting and to the average person a red spider is a red spider and just as much of a pest as Elias Butler Parker's guinea pigs of "Pigs Is Pigs" fame.

How are we to get rid of them? That is the question, and I suppose it was upon this point that our friend Watson hung the word explosion—"A Red Spider Explosion." He thought that maybe I would blast all your preconceived ideas about the subject of red spiders.

TWO LIVELY CLUB MEETINGS

CHICAGO CLUB MEETS.

President Gets Gavel.

The notable feature of the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, May 4, at the Morrison hotel, was the expedition with which it was conducted when once started. The start, however, owing to the dilatory arrival of many of the members, was deferred until the evening was fairly well advanced. The attendance, though not large, was good considering the fact that there was no fixed program.

When the usual routine of business was disposed of, a package was handed to President Henderson, together with a letter. Both were from Anton Then. The letter set forth that as every commander of an army must have a sword, so every president of a club should have a gavel. And having the utmost faith in Mr. Henderson's abilities and capabilities, he took pleasure in sending the accompanying package. This contained a most unique and artistic gavel, ingeniously contrived out of a wild smilax root from Magnolia Springs, Ala. Inscribed on it are the words, "To the president of the Chicago Florists' Club. A strong root will grow to be a strong plant. A. Then." After trying it out, Mr. Henderson passed it around the room for examination. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Then for the gift.

Friedman's Show Plan.

O. J. Friedman took advantage of the opportunity to express himself relative to the annual Easter flower sale at the Congress hotel for the benefit of the Home for Destitute Crippled Children. He has conferred with George Marcey, president of the board of directors of the home, and is now in position to state that the directors of the home, as well as the society women who support it, are willing to waive the sale providing the Chicago Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of Chicago will coöperate with them during the annual flower show. Briefly stated, the tentative plan suggested by Mr. Friedman to both Mr. Marcey and the club is that the presidents of all three institutions confer on the matter as a committee; that the club and the society agree to give all the net receipts of the 1916 flower show to the home for crippled children in return for the active and hearty coöperation of the society women of Chicago and the directors of the home in the sale of the flowers exhibited as soon as they are judged; that the directors of the home appoint all auditors, cashiers and ticket sellers; that Mr. Marcey be authorized to have some wealthy citizen or citizens send tickets of admission to all public school pupils of Chicago, good for admission on Saturday morning only, and that 10 cents be paid for each ticket taken up at the door; that, in case the plan proved profitable, the triple alliance be made perpetual. The suggestions, which were made in writing, together with a list of questions propounded to the club by Mr. Marcey, were placed on file, and Mr. Friedman put his suggestion, that A. Henderson and W. N. Rudd be appointed a committee to confer with George Marcey, in the form of a motion, which was carried without opposition.

Miscellaneous Business.

Secretary French read a communication from Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, urging the florists throughout the country to show in some substantial way their appreciation of the work done by Miss Anna Jarvis, founder of Mothers' day. After some discussion, the club voted that the secretary write to Mr. Kift assuring him that the Chicago florists are willing to do their part, and asking for a statement as to the action, if any, being taken by other clubs.

The following applications for membership were made during the evening: W. E. O'Morrow, 558 Fulton street; Chester P. Guion, 2730 North California avenue, and Carl Eismann, Maywood, Ill.

Guy French talked entertainingly about the Philadelphia and New York shows.

Among the guests of the club were Walter Mott, of Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y., and Charles R. Dewey, of the soil improvement committee of the National Fertilizer Association.

NEW YORK CLUB MEETS.

Mr. Guttman Reads Essay.

The feature of the meeting of the New York Florists' Club May 8 was a lengthy paper prepared with great care by A. J. Guttman. The title was "A Review of the Economic Conditions in Our Business," but it was in fact an exposition of the speaker's views on life in general, with extended comment on the recent flower show as it appeared to Mr. Guttman. It was well understood that Mr. Guttman's criticisms were voiced in the most friendly spirit and in the discussion which followed several of those closely identified with the management agreed that many of his points were well taken, although means to achieve some highly desirable and well recognized ends are not easily found. The address and discussion were so highly enjoyed that, on motion of C. B. Weathered, Mr. Guttman was given a vote of thanks.

Frey's Freesias at Montebello, Cal.

A. L. Miller gave details of New York day at the National Flower Show and P. O'Mara, W. H. Siebrecht, C. H. Totty and F. H. Traendly spoke of the many friendships cemented by the undertaking. Chairman Miller and his committee were given a vote of thanks.

T. B. De Forest made a highly satisfactory report for the din-dan committee, especially crediting Walter Sheridan for efforts in its behalf. P. O'Mara and A. L. Miller spoke of the success of the affair. Thanks were voted the Lord & Burnham Co. for the silver cups donated as prizes for the best dancers, and Charles Schenck, winner, invited the members to his home to test the cup's capacity. Donors of decorations were thanked.

Secretary Young read the names of those who donated prizes for the spring show, the total value exceeding $1,400, and Chairman A. L. Miller stated a complete report on the show will be ready for the June meeting, the last of the season. An interesting discussion as to the date and other details of the next show was participated in by Messrs. Traendly, Manda, Miller, Burns, O'Mara, Totty and others. Mr. Totty especially was strong in his commendation of the management of the recent show and the wisdom of harmonious coöperation with the Horticultural Society. A vote to this effect was carried unanimously. The president was authorized to appoint the necessary committees, and the decision to have a flower show in 1917 was carried with enthusiasm.

Miscellaneous Business.

W. H. Siebrecht addressed the club on the risks of importers of bulbs and said the leading exporters will not insure the bulbs unless the club appoints a competent committee to report accurately upon their condition on arrival, thereby preventing law suits and dissatisfaction. The chair was authorized to appoint the necessary committee, also a transportation committee for the S. A. F. Houston convention. C. H. Totty referred to the invitation contemplated for the S. A. F. convention for 1917 and progress was reported in its behalf.

Albert Lahodney, Brookville, L. I.; Cecil Davis, Flushing, N. Y.; A. Brundage, Rockville Center, N. Y.; John R. Walsh, Dennis Kenna, George Jenkins and Charles Brandt, all of New York, were elected to membership. Applications were received from George Cohen and Peter Butterbach.

Preceding the club meeting there was a meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society at the office of Traendly & Schenck and a dinner for members of the Ex-Presidents' Association.

FREY'S FIELD OF FREESIAS.

There have been several references in The Review to the freesia-growing of Alois Frey, of Crown Point, Ind., at Montebello, Cal., the plantation adjoining the H. W. Turner greenhouses being shown in the accompanying illustration. When Mr. Frey had worked up his stock of colored freesias to the point where his greenhouses at Crown Point would no longer suffice, he made a trip to the S. A. F. convention at San Francisco, later visiting the freesia-growing districts and picking out a suitable piece of land at Montebello, where one of his men from Crown Point has been in charge of operations ever since. Mr. Frey himself recently returned from another trip to Montebello to inspect the crop in bloom.

Springfield, Ill.—A. C. Brown was represented in the industrial parade May 6 by a decorated car that was a breath of spring: Butterflies, beautiful girls, hawthorn, wild crab apple, roses, snaps, iris and carnations. It was the work of John L. Bryant, who commented: "I am frank to say this was my first attempt on a car and I would rather handle a big wedding any time."

Aberdeen, S. D.—April 12 Benjamin F. Siebrecht was united in wedlock at Mankato, Minn., the other contracting party being one of Mankato's society belles. The ceremony was a fitting climax to the brilliant prenuptial parties tendered the couple by their friends. The scene of the wedding, Mankato's Lutheran church, was elaborately decorated. The groom came to Aberdeen in August of last year, from his home town, Winona, and started a florists' business. So successful has he been that three houses, each 22x150 feet, and one 20x150, are being erected on the 5-acre plot east of the city. The A. Dietsch Co., of Chicago, is the builder. Louis Voigt, formerly of Missoula, Mont., will have charge of the growing end of the business.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Memorial Day Crops.

The weather during the present year has been quite erratic. In spite of the late date of Easter, many growers failed to flower many of their lilies and other plants on time, and it will need close attention from now on to time Memorial day crops properly. Gladioli can be cut when the first flowers show color and held in a good, cold cellar for eight or ten days.

Spiræas, or astilbes, will stand much heat, and if at all late should have it now. They can scarcely be overwatered. Double feverfew will advance rapidly if given a brisk heat, and candytuft can be similarly forwarded. Stocks are an important Memorial day crop. They can be kept cool and shaded well if sufficiently advanced. Failing this, give them more heat at once. It is important to attend to these crops now. They net excellent money if they can be had for the holiday, but are largely unsalable when it is passed.

Outdoor Pests.

Outdoor pests will soon give considerable trouble. Green or black aphis can be easily controlled by the use of whale oil soap, kerosene emulsion, Aphine or one of the nicotine extracts. On fruit trees Black Leaf 40, a highly concentrated form of nicotine, proves more effectual than any other remedy. The lace-wing fly will soon appear on the under sides of the leaves of rhododendrons. To properly control it several sprayings will be necessary and the spray must be directed below the foliage. Aphine, Imp soap spray and whale oil soap are all good for the lacewing fly.

Cutworms have already appeared. A good poisoned mash is the best remedy for them. Take one-half bushel of fresh shorts and mix one pound of Paris green through it thoroughly. Squeeze the juice of three lemons over the mixture and cut pulp and rind fine and add to it. Then add a couple of quarts of molasses and three and one-half gallons of water. Add the two last quite gradually, while stirring. Lay this mixture around the haunts of the cutworms towards evening, so that it will be nice and fresh for these night marauders.

Window Boxes.

The use of window boxes increases yearly and florists can further boom this branch of their spring trade by filling one or two sample boxes and having them on exhibition at their store or greenhouses. Try to secure orders for these and do the filling now. Even a few days in a greenhouse will wonderfully improve them. Be sure you use a generous compost. If there are plenty of drainage holes, you need no regular drainage. A layer of well decayed manure should be placed in every box and let the balance of the compost contain some well rotted manure and fine bone.

Remember that these plants will have but a limited root run and will be expected to grow, flower and thrive the whole summer. A great quantity of plants is available for window boxes, but, as a general rule, geraniums of one variety look and succeed best. For drooping plants variegated and green vincas and English ivy are the most satisfactory.

Sowing Hardy Annuals.

Quite a few of the hardier annuals should have been sown before now, especially mignonette, lupines, sweet peas and bachelor's buttons. Many other varieties should be sown at once, such as larkspurs, Gypsophila elegans, hunnemannias, salpiglossis, sweet sultans, nemesias, Shirley and other poppies, scabious, coreopsis, everlastings in variety, annual sunflowers and celosias. Be sure the soil is well pulverized where these annuals are to be sown and do not sow too thickly, or, if you do, be sure to thin them judiciously. Two or more sowings should be made of Gypsophila elegans and Shirley poppies if a succession of flowers is wanted.

Lily of the Valley Outdoors.

Lily of the valley is at present in somewhat short supply in the markets. It is one of our most popular flowers and every small country florist should at least have a bed of it outdoors, even if he does not force any of it. In the more northerly states it is usually in good condition outdoors for Memorial day. The ground should be deeply spaded and well manured for a bed of valley, as it must stay undisturbed for five or six years after planting.

If you can procure Fortin's variety, you have the best for outdoor culture, the bells being larger than those of the ordinary Berlin variety. It is not too late to plant a bed or row now, and once planted it needs no more attention than to be kept clean and given a mulch of decayed manure each fall. Valley succeeds well in the open, but does better where it can have a little shade from overhanging trees and where it is fairly moist at the roots.

Cleveland, O.—Cleveland's voters, in an avalanche of public approval, in the April election passed the $2,500,000 bond issue for the erection of a magnificent convention hall seating 15,000. Cleveland's mayor has promised to use every effort to get the work started at once and M. A. Vinson, secretary of the Cleveland flower show, believes the building will be finished in time for the next National Flower Show in the spring of 1918.

Springfield, Ill.—The T. P. A. had a large parade September 6, in which about eighty-five decorated automobiles participated. The car decorated by Hembreiker & Cole was awarded first prize. The body of the car was covered with ferns, over which were Easter lilies and Ophelia roses. On the fenders of the car were three large baskets of roses, while rising above the engine was a large vase filled with lilies. In the back of the car stood two large vases of Ophelia roses and two baskets of lilies. William Hembreiker and Iles Cole were much pleased at their success. The local papers published illustrations of the decorated car, constituting altogether an excellent advertisement.

Atkinson, N. H.—Harry B. Tuttle has started work on a large greenhouse.

Bristol, Conn.—Paul M. Hubbard & Son have opened a flower store in the Gwillim block.

South Manchester, Conn.—The Bon Ton Flower Shop has been purchased by P. A. Reese.

Braintree, Mass.—John Streiferd & Son were the successful bidders for a 6,000-plant order last month.

Cambridge, Mass.—George F. Osgood, formerly in business at Everett, Mass., expects to start a greenhouse business here about June 1.

Hartford, Conn.—At the recent meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, Fred Boss, of Elizabeth park, exhibited a fine collection of calceolarias, for which he was awarded a certificate of merit. W. S. Mason showed Eupatorium ianthinum of excellent growth. There were lively discussions on grafting and pruning, led by Mr. Boss and F. Roulier.

Lynn, Mass.—F. Predeaux is erecting greenhouses on the old Phillips farm, on Eastern avenue.

Revere, Mass.—A smart flower store has been opened at 167 Sherly avenue by Miss D. A. Chase.

Exeter, N. H.—John R. Perkins has purchased the greenhouse establishment of W. S. Perkins, who has conducted the business successfully for twenty years and considers himself entitled to a vacation.

Newport, R. I.—The Gibson property on Malbone road, comprising 23,124 square feet of land, several greenhouses, a small cottage and outbuildings, was sold a few days ago by Duncan A. Hazard, commissioner, to Joseph and John W. Gibson, for $7,000. The sale grew out of a decree of the Superior court in the equity suit of Margaret E. Gibson against Joseph Gibson, by which a commissioner was appointed to dispose of the property. The land is now occupied by the purchasers under the name of Gibson Bros.

OBITUARY

Alfred Mitting.

From San Jose, Cal., comes word of the death there, April 30, of Alfred Mitting, known to florists, seedsmen and nurserymen the country over through the extent and diversified character of his business dealings.

Mr. Mitting, a native of England, was 58 years of age. He first became known to the trade when he conducted a greenhouse establishment at Morris, Ill., specializing on young stock for growing on, in which line he was one of the pioneers. Removing to California, he located at Santa Cruz, where he quickly built up a large business in bulbs, especially callas and gladioli, shipping great quantities to the trade in the east. Encountering what he considered a favorable opportunity to capitalize the results of his efforts, he sold out and removed to Holland, Mich., where he did business in the nursery line under the title of the Berrydale Experiment Gardens. Returning to California after a few years, he again started in business at Santa Cruz, this time with his son. This venture, however, was short-lived and the family removed to San Jose, where an effort was being made to resuscitate the family fortunes.

Mr. Mitting had some loyal friends in the east. He is survived by his wife and two children, Ernest De Roo Mitting and Flora Birdie Mitting.

Robert Haentze.

Robert Haentze, mayor of Fond du Lac, Wis., "a big friend of the people" and head of the E. Haentze Co., died at his home in Fond du Lac on the morning of May 5, after an illness of nine weeks from kidney disease. When Mr. Haentze was elected Fond du Lac's mayor, the first executive to put into effect the commission form of city government, he relinquished active management of the E. Haentze Co. It is said the sudden change of occupation, from hard work at the greenhouses to the office of mayor of Fond du Lac, in which position he was unable to exercise sufficiently, was instrumental in making the disease more acute.

The deceased was born in Fond du Lac, February 29, 1868, a son of Ernest Haentze, one of the pioneer florists of Wisconsin. He attended the public schools until he attained the age of 14 years, when he laid aside his books and assisted his father in the florists' business. The work proved so interesting to the young man that he decided to make it his vocation. Upon the retirement of his father some years ago, he became manager of the business, and through his untiring skill and zeal the business prospered greatly.

In 1892 Mr. Haentze married Mary J. Binning. It was not until 1906 that he became interested in politics. In the spring of that year he was made alderman and subsequently served on several important city boards and council committees. In 1911 he became Republican candidate for the office of mayor, but was defeated. Four years later, however, the people having by popular vote approved the commission form of government, Mr. Haentze was urged to run for office again as an advocate of the new form of municipal management. After a whirlwind campaign Mr. Haentze was elected by a good majority.

Mr. Haentze at the very start of his term won the respect and friendship of the people he served, by his thoroughness, his honorable practices and fair dealings. So popular did he become during his brief period of office that his illness of nine weeks was watched with almost a personal interest by everyone.

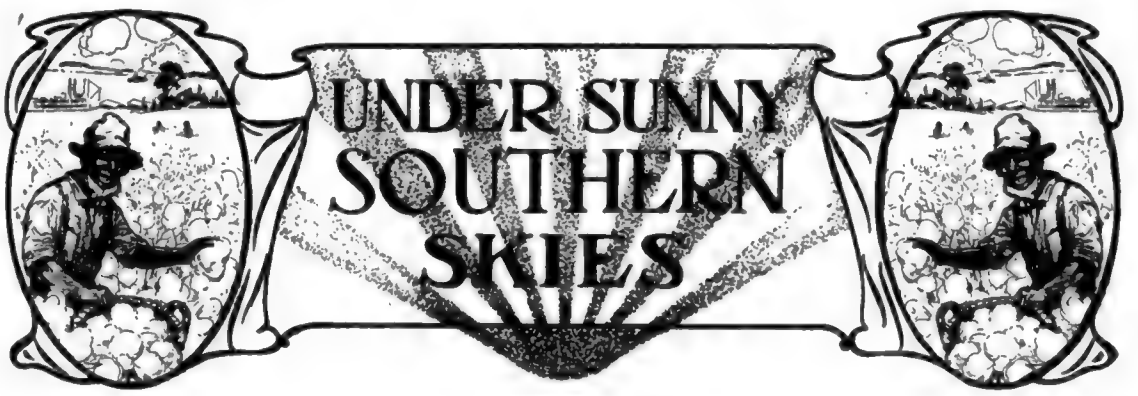
The funeral was held May 8 and was one of the largest attended ever held in the city—the entire city participated.

Fraternally Mr. Haentze was identified with the B. P. O. E., the I. O. O. F. and the L. O. O. M. Besides his wife, he is survived by his father, one sister and four brothers, Edward, Charles, Richard and Ernest.

Herman Newbold Bradshaw.

Herman Bradshaw, of Ossining, N. Y., who for forty years wholesaled his stock in New York city, died last week. He was born at Madison, N. J., and learned the business with his father, who died in 1902. Mr. Bradshaw specialized in lilies.

LAWN BARE IN SPOTS.



We have a good customer whose lawn is dying out in a great many places. It is located on fairly high ground and there is not enough shade to keep the grass from growing. The grass does not seem to turn yellow, but there are a great many bare spots. What can be done for this? Manure was put on the lawn over winter, but did not seem to help any. F. & F.—Wis.

Laying manure on lawns is poor policy. It furnishes some nutrition, but at the same time fills the lawns full of noxious weeds. It is also unsightly and unsanitary. If there is a fair body of soil on the lawn, I would simply dig up the bare spots and reseed them at once. You will find Kentucky blue grass a splendid grass to use. Add a little fancy redtop and Rhode Island bent to it. The fact that the lawn burns out in spots may be due to thin soil at these particular places, or to rocks coming near the surface. Occasionally white grubs, the larvæ of the May beetle, attack lawns, eating the roots of the grasses and making the lawns perfectly bare in spots. Frequent rolling with a heavy roller will kill many of these, as they come quite near the surface. Feed the lawn well, using a mixture of fine bone and wood ashes, or pulverized sheep manure. Each of these is cleanly and an excellent grass fertilizer. C. W.

GLADIOLUS SHOW SCHEDULE.

The greatest gladiolus show in the history of the trade in America and quite possibly the largest exhibition of the flower ever staged anywhere in the world, will take place at Boston August 11 to 13, when the American Gladiolus Society will join with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in demonstrating the wonderful advance the gladiolus has made in recent years. It will be the seventh annual exhibition of the national organization. A preliminary premium list has been issued. Intending exhibitors may obtain copies by addressing H. Youell, secretary, 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y.

Utica, N. Y.—The first thing E. T. McQuivey did after leasing a branch store for Easter week was to call at the newspaper offices and order good display ads telling of the arrangement. Mr. McQuivey believes in keeping his own customers as well as his competitor's customers posted as to his doings.

Fort Worth, Tex.—A florists' business has been established at 413 Hemphill street by Mrs. M. B. Jones.

Mount Sterling, Ky.—David Harris, who left several months ago to take charge of a large greenhouse at Jackson, Tenn., has returned to town with his smile to stay.

Memphis, Tenn.—Johnson & Son, Memphis, have placed an order with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, for two houses 35x125 feet and four 20x75 feet, of pipe-frame construction.

Asheville, N. C.—Allison's Flower Shop will hereafter market home-grown stock, for it has secured the West Asheville Greenhouses and the services of Shelby Griffith, formerly of Pittsburgh, who will be in charge of the houses. Work has been begun on a number of improvements to the property and repairs and additions will be made.

Blackwell, Okla.—Paul Winkler, formerly with Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., and A. J. Burt, of Spokane, Wash., expects to go into business for himself here about June 1.

Paducah, Ky.—Inasmuch as William Lydon supplies gravestones of granite and marble for cemeteries, he may as well supply plants and flowers for the graves. This occurred to Mr. Lydon last winter, and now there is a greenhouse near his stoneyard well filled with stock for Memorial day business.

Lexington, Ky.—J. F. Keller, president and manager of the John A. Keller Co., is chairman of the florists' division of the Board of Commerce and recently gave a talk before the association on the extent of the florists' business in Lexington, in Kentucky and in the United States. His facts and figures gave many of the local business men a quite new idea of the importance of the trade.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE value of Mothers' day again is demonstrated by the fact that the supply of cut flowers is the largest of the current season.

IF collections are not good, the reason is that credit has been extended unwisely or else debtor and creditor have been so busy selling that office detail has been neglected.

BUSINESS in retail flower stores never is of the best during the week that first lets the people into their gardens; this is the turn of the florist who has something to go into the soil.

THE neatest Mothers' day ad of the many that have come to The Review is the little booklet received from E. P. Kreimer, of the Duluth Floral Co., written by Charles Henry Mackintosh.

PRICES of paint have been advancing steadily for several months and the market now has reached a condition that has necessitated the withdrawal of quotations. Prices now quoted are from day to day only.

LETTERS have been sent out by many of the leading box manufacturers to the effect that the cost of paper boxes has advanced fifty per cent. Quotations on orders not in the mails prior to May 4 were canceled.

TAKING it by and large, it can be said the trade never has had a better season. Business has been good ever since the early autumn and there have been only brief and relatively unimportant gluts, so that average prices have been excellent.

OPHELIA is easily the most popular rose on the markets today, Hadley the most talked of.

THE cost of glass is nearly 100 per cent greater than a year ago and steel, now an important item in greenhouse construction, has advanced about as much. But cypress has not gone up a great deal and the material mills are securing great economies by standardization and large volume, so that a complete greenhouse can be had for only five to ten per cent more than a year ago.

NO, YOU CAN NOT BEAT IT!

Under the head, "Can You Beat It?" there have appeared in this column a large number of letters from users of The Review, telling of the profitable results obtained, either through reading The Review or through advertising in it. Here is one in the same line, but a little different:

Those three little lines sold out my stock and we have had some orders we could not fill. The Review not only has proven a good advertising medium for me, but the best; in fact, the only one that has paid me.—C. D. Otis, Lake Charles, La., May 2, 1916.

The advertisement that sold out Mr. Otis' stock cost 90 cents.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

REVERSING THE CURRENT.

Since the beginning in this trade, as probably in most others, the general direction of the movement of merchandise has been from east to west. This has been specially true of cut flowers, many of which have gone west from eastern markets and few of which have moved far in an easterly direction. But a current from west to east has been set up through the enterprise of certain California shippers and the coöperation of the express companies. Last autumn large quantities of mums moved east from Los Angeles and San Francisco, during the winter greens and violets have been shipped and now freesia and many other flowers are being shipped. A San Francisco grower is sending Mlle. Cecile Brunner roses regularly to New York, although as a general rule the California flowers do not yet cross the Mississippi in any important numbers.

The enterprising Californians have had the assistance of both the American and Wells-Fargo express companies, which have established regular through refrigerator car service from coast to coast.

THE CONVENTION GARDEN.

The spring months step lively and before we are aware of it midsummer and the Houston convention will be upon us. And surely no one knows this better than C. L. Brock, the man responsible for the big convention garden, at Sam Houston park, Houston, Tex. Mr. Brock has been working hard whipping things into shape at the garden and it is said there will be some real surprises for the visitors. Everything is being taken care of and nothing forgotten—a winning way the efficient Texans have. Just one of the little features of the garden will be the greetings of Houston to the visitors, made of blooming and foliage plants, on a hillside at the entrance to the gardens, saying, "Welcome, American Florists."

Although most of the space for exhibits in the garden has been allotted, there still is room for a few more exhibitors and the Texans really will not be completely satisfied until all the space has been parceled out. Vice-president R. C. Kerr, under date of May 6, writes as follows:

I wish to call the attention of the trade to the fact that it is not too late to arrange for exhibits in the convention garden at Houston. Our garden now is an assured success. We have a great many substantial exhibits. The members of the trade should avail themselves of this opportunity of putting their stock before the florists of the south. Remember that we will have a record-breaking attendance from the south.

The southern florists are heavy buyers, and this is possibly the richest field for the wholesale of any sections of the country. The space charge for shrubs, evergreens, etc., is 5 cents per square foot; blooming plants 10 cents per square foot. A plot 150 to 250 square feet will make an attractive medium-sized exhibit.

Make shipment of exhibition material to C. L. Brock, park superintendent, at Houston, Tex. Remember the florists of the south expect your co-operation.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Chicago market conditions since Easter would seem to indicate that the trade is about to enter a period of unequaled activity. Not but what there will be periods of inactivity, for these at times are seasonable, but business on the whole seems to be on a broader and firmer foundation of popular demand. Last week showed no abatement of business—only a change of direction. Demand everywhere was for short and the cheaper grades of stock. This, however, has reference only to the demand for present consumption. As early as the end of last week Mothers' day orders began to bulk large in the mail of every wholesaler who caters to the shipping trade. So great is the demand for carnations in these advance orders that many of the wholesalers have declined to accept further orders for them. And everyone with the interests of the trade in mind is recommending the use of other flowers as the only solution of an otherwise hopeless situation.

Only the shorter-stemmed Beauties find a ready sale, and, as a result, it requires no little effort to move those in the other grades. Practically the same thing may be said of all other varieties of roses. Short stock is not sufficient to fill requirements, while long-stemmed stock is inclined to hang.

YOU CAN GET GOOD BEAUTIES HERE

BECAUSE you hear a lot about certain large growers dropping Beauties, don't get it into your head good Beauties are hard to obtain. It isn't so. Send your order to Amling and you will get perfectly satisfactory Beauties, all you want of them, any length; our supply is as large as ever.

Four Roses You Need

How can you run an up-to-date store without a daily supply of Russell, Milady, Ophelia and Killarney Brilliant? But it's needless to try. Just order of us.

Peas

The largest and finest supply of Spencer Sweet Peas in the west.

Iris

We can furnish all colors in any quantity; choice, clean stock.

Up to June 15, we can furnish ORANGE BLOSSOMS on one day's notice.

Snapdragon

This is long, straight-stemmed stock, not to be compared with the kind ordinarily seen. Specially strong on Pink and Yellow.

Carnations

Now comes the time of year you must be careful where you order Carnations. Nothing but the best will do.

MEMORIAL DAY

We are ready to book your orders for Memorial day, when most Florists will need more stock than any other day in the year. Our supply will be so large, we can assure you our prices will be no more than you will gladly pay for good stock.

Quality is generally good. It is not easy to say which varieties lead, though it may be said the newer ones are moved with much greater ease.

Carnations, as a matter of course, are far, far short of the demand. Peonies, however, are beginning to arrive on the market in ever-increasing numbers. The chief arrivals are Old Red, Festiva and Queen Victoria. As usual, valley may be depended upon to be short. The last week has managed to do away with the surplus of Easter lilies. The Easter crop is about done for and the next crop is not yet ready. Callas are plentiful, a fact which does not facilitate their movement. Cattleyas continue unusually scarce and prices are accordingly high. Popular favor still focuses on the sweet peas for corsage use and places this item on the short side of the market as far as first-class stock is concerned. A good supply of snapdragon clears daily. Daisies are plentiful enough, but meet with a fickle demand. Calendulas and mignonette are available in moderate quantities. Jonquils are about done for and daffodils are singing their swan song. Gardenias of excellent quality are in the market and they meet with a ready demand. Always popular, Spanish iris is not in sufficient supply to meet the demand. The supply of gladioli is not large, and this fact, coupled with the general excellence of the stock received, results in regular clearings. Pansies are selling well. The lilac supply is so erratic this spring that no dependence can be placed on it.

The situation in greens is little altered. Smilax is again on the short side.

Where to Buy your Peonies--- and Why

Quality Cuts from Kennicott's

It is possible that the market might be flooded with Peonies, but they would be the back-yard variety. You don't go to a farmer to purchase your Roses and Carnations, do you?

No, you buy stock that is grown by experts who produce better stock than ever grew wild.

Why buy wild Peonies?

Kennicott's Quality Cuts are not just planted and expected to take care of themselves—they are carefully tended by men who have studied the Peony for years. These experts know just what to do and why it is done. In fact, it is a business with them to know how to grow Quality Peonies.

Buy Kennicott's Quality Cuts, cut from the best of stock properly planted, and taken care of according to the up-to-date methods of Horticulture and Floriculture. They are bound to ship well and last after the man you sell to gets them.

Do not waste good money on the back-yard stock, buy Kennicott's Quality Cuts.

bottom up. Mr. Amling's second daughter, Miss Gertrude Amling, also has business ideas and is studying shorthand, typewriting and bookkeeping with the intention of becoming a regular assistant in the office.

Two temporary stores now are being conducted by George Perdikas, in addition to his regular stand at 407 South Wabash avenue. One is in the neighboring store at Van Buren and Wabash, the other at Jackson and Plymouth place, both too large rooms for regular flower store use.

All the carnation plants at the Wietor establishment have gone into the field, except those that are to be grown indoors all summer, a method that meets with steadily increased favor in the eyes of these growers.

The chain of stores operated by Johnson & Chronis now numbers four: Forty-seventh street, the Alpha, the department at The Fair, and the store at Des Moines. But Andrew Chronis is quoted as having stated the Des Moines store will be disposed of because of the illness of the partner in charge there.

All the old Beauty plants have been jettisoned at the Peter Reinberg establishment, reports Felix Reichling, and the 1-year Beauties are being rested. The space gained has been planted principally to Russell, Ophelia, Maryland and Champ Weiland.

Another man in the person of Jack Byers has been added to the floor force in the cut flower department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co.

With every trip to California Fritz Bahr gains enthusiasm for the coast. He has an interest in a property there to which he has planned to retire in a few years and since his spring trip he has found the intervening period looks longer each day instead of shorter.

According to Manager Paul Klingsporn, the Chicago Flower Growers' Association did forty per cent more business in April than it did during the same month a year ago.

Miss Erna Teegen, daughter of William Teegen, of Kroeger & Teegen, Morton Grove, Ill., is the latest victim of the scarlet fever epidemic. Fortunately, there are no complications and the young lady is doing nicely.

In speaking of the after-Easter business, Miss O. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. The Market.

Business continued to be brisk last week. Weddings and funerals created a lively demand for flowers and Tuesday a large banquet called for numerous table decorations and corsages. The latter part of the week the weather became hot and orders came in thick and fast for boxwoods, shrubs, etc. Cut flowers are in plentiful supply. Roses in all grades are in full supply and the warm weather is expected to increase the supply greatly. Carnations are in good supply and prices hold up well, with Mothers' day almost here. Local growers say they will have a good crop of carnations for May 14. American Beauties are scarce and hard to obtain, but the demand is light. Orchids are short. Valley was in better supply than the week previous, the demand being good. Snapdragons continue plentiful and are used in decorative work and funeral sprays. Sweet peas are in large supply in the Spencer varieties and sell extremely well. Bulbous stock is of the past for this season. Spanish iris is not plentiful as yet and is cleaned up each day. Violets are over for the season. Daisies and marguerites are plentiful, as well as pansies and forget-me-nots. Easter lilies and callas still come into the market in large quantities.

The demand for Mothers' day is expected to be good, as florists have advertised the day. Business for the month of April exceeded all expectations. Although the weather was decidedly unfavorable, it seemed to have little effect on the florists' business, either before or after Easter, while the Easter holiday business was the best of years.

Various Notes.

The Roebuck Greenhouses, southwest of the city, on the Bluffton road, are sending some fine Spencer sweet peas to the local market.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey report business good since Easter. They are cutting some splendid orchids and Shawyer, Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney and Richmond roses, but have not nearly enough to supply the demand. They have orders that were booked at Christmas time for Mothers' day by patrons who ordered too late last year. Will J. Vesey, Jr., has returned from southern Indiana cities and Indianapolis, where he attended the May meeting of the Indiana State Florists. Judge W. J. Vesey has purchased a handsome 7-passenger limousine.

The Flick Floral Co. executed a handsome casket blanket eight feet long last week. It was composed of lilies and Killarney roses. They also had numerous pieces for the same funeral and decorations for weddings.

Mrs. Richard Blossom, of the Flick Floral Co., has been appointed on the committee of entertainment for the Women's building during the Indiana centennial, which will be celebrated in this city June 6 to 9. R. F.

Springfield, O.—Calvin H. Cox says business is on the hum with all in the trade in this vicinity; everyone seems to feel good over the business now being done and over the prospect for future business. Mr. Cox has enlarged his facilities by one-third this spring and plans still further extension. Heretofore he has devoted most of his energies to the garden plant business, but of late has been giving increased attention to flowering pot plants for the holidays.

McCray Florists' Refrigerators

The McCRAY construction keeps flowers cool and fresh longer than by any other system of refrigeration. It provides an even temperature of the correct degree for cut flowers and stops the great waste and profit loss that is caused by imperfect refrigeration.

The various compartments in a McCRAY are of different sizes to accommodate the different lengths of cut flower stems and your flowers are given an inviting display.

For interior linings you have your choice of either handsome bevel plate mirror or beautiful white enamel, which are very easy to clean. The exterior may be of any finish desired to match the interior of your store woodwork or other fixtures.

Invest in a McCRAY. Make it a partner in your business. You will value it more highly than its mere intrinsic dollar-and-cents value. Investigate anyway!

The Market

There was no market during the week ending May 10. The growers will agree with this statement when they read their returns. They will say Phil believes in calling a spade a spade and they will kick or grin and bear it as seems best to each and every one. The retailers most likely will object to such a sweeping statement, calling attention to the stock purchased during the week. But when these orders were picked out they made such a little, such a very little impression on the avalanche that swept down on the wholesalers, filling their iceboxes and piling their counters mountain high with flowers, that it seemed there was no business. But what became of those flowers? People want to know—they ought to know. They are not salted away, kept for a season of demand, as the daily papers so frequently assert. They are gotten out of the way at some price, no matter what, as quickly as possible. When this is not possible they are lost. The wholesalers work like beavers to prevent waste. That is their sole aim at such a time, when, with a full crop on, the bottom drops out of the market, as it did during this terrible week.

With the regular channels closed or partly closed, new channels became necessary. These are made by a class of buyers who come into the market only on such extreme occasions. They will use hundreds, nay thousands, of bunches of sweet peas or carnations and unheard-of numbers of roses, provided the price is right. They load their purchases on wagons chartered for the occasion, usually a Friday or a Saturday, and haul them to certain favored districts, thickly populated, where they are distributed right from the wagon. Kensington, Ridge avenue, in front of Baldwin's on pay afternoon, these are some of the favored spots where the street men have been known to unload so large a number of flowers in a couple of hours, that, were I to name the number, you would undoubtedly consider me a full-fledged member of the Ananias and Sapphira Club. The prices that the street men pay for this stock depends, as Robert Kift once aptly expressed it, on the abilities of buyer and seller, but the seller is fearfully handicapped by the mountain of flowers behind him and the open door in front, through which the buyer may at any moment vanish and drive off. So the price is low and the work is hard.

This is a true picture of the worst week that the cut flower market in this city has experienced this season. George Aeugle assures me that it is the worst week the market has ever experienced. Be that as it may, there are signs of an improvement. Let us hope that the street gentry will not again have things so completely their own way.

A Confession.

When Parker Thayer Barnes read his carefully prepared paper on the red spider before the Florists' Club's May meeting, he scored a decided success. Perhaps this success would have seemed to Mr. Barnes more pronounced had he known that he faced at least one member who had planned a little surprise that did not come off. That member had, in the breast pocket of his coat, a panacea or cure for red spider that he proposed springing upon the meeting. "Gentlemen," he had planned to say, "here is a sure cure for red spider in the greenhouse. All you have to do is to put it at regular intervals at the end of your hose, turn on a 40-pound water pressure and don't be afraid to stoop." The Rainbow syringe was to have been held aloft, but it wasn't. Mr. Barnes seemed so serious, so thorough in his exhaustive analysis, that it seemed that such action might be misconstrued into poking fun at a scholar and a gentleman. This would be such abominable taste that the member decided to allow the Rainbow syringe to remain quietly in its resting place. Instead of presenting it he heartily applauded Mr. Barnes and then kept still. Don't you think it was better?

Various Notes.

The Joseph G. Neidinger Co. opened a branch store at 257 Devonshire street, Boston, May 1. George S. Hampton is in charge, with a full line of stock.

Charles Glaser has retired from the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange. The business will be carried on as now, by William A. Leonard and John Deutscher. John Cunningham commenced work with the P. W. F. E. May 8. The business will be transferred from 1625 Ranstead street to finer quarters at 1615 Ranstead street, June 1.

Mrs. M. A. Garrett, a well known and widely respected florist on Germantown avenue, below Lehigh avenue, died recently. She had been thirty years in business, coming originally from Germantown. The business will be carried on by her daughter, Mrs. Mary Nicholson, under the name of M. A. Garrett. Mrs. Nicholson will be assisted by two able employees of long standing, Miss Sally Martin and James Malin, a son-in-law.

The Market.

As usual, there has come the reaction that makes stock worth only what the buyer chooses to offer. All kinds of flowers, with the exception of orchids and valley, are present in such abundance that they completely strangle the market. Prices have receded far below actual worth, quality considered.

Gardenias are for sale on the streets at 10 cents each, and in some cases at three for 25 cents. Of course, the best stock is bringing $2 per dozen, but the people content themselves with patronizing the fakers. Orchids are worth their weight in gold; the price continues high, often $1.25 each at wholesale. The scarcity of valley is marked, and scrawny, small outdoor stock sold well last week at $3 per hundred; last year it went begging at 50 cents. Indoor valley, what there is of it, moves rapidly at $6. One nearby grower has cut his consignment forty per cent.

American Beauty roses that brought $10 per dozen half a month ago now may be had in hundred lots at that price, and still there is little sale. Roses ordinarily worth $12 and $15 per hundred hang fire at $2. Last week carnations slumped to $15 and $20 per thousand. Calla lilies, which with Easter lilies are being thrown away by the hundreds, are expected to be in good demand the end of this week for church decorations incident to Mothers' day. Early orders find the quotations at $12.50 per hundred.

Snapdragon is as good as has ever been seen here. America and Augusta gladioli are exceptionally fine and are selling well at $8 and $10 per hundred. Some good irises are also offered. Lupines, white and yellow daisies, cowslips and other spring flowers are in fair demand. Sweet peas are so plentiful that fakers refuse to buy them at $2 per thousand. Lilacs and fruit blossoms are further demoralizing the market. An unusual feature of the market is the continued availability of violets and daffodils.

Club Meeting.

Mothers' day was the principal topic of discussion at the May meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C. It was declared by several speakers that the requirement of a white carnation in memory of mothers should be modified so that any white flowers would be appropriate for the occasion.

The question of a testimonial to Miss Anna Jarvis, founder of Mothers' day, was brought before the club members in a letter from Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, asking the local men to contribute to a fund for that purpose. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., that some suitable recognition should be made on behalf of Miss Anna Jarvis on account of the idea advanced, and the labor and effort expended by her in the promotion of Mothers' day, which has already proven beneficial to all of the florists of the country, and that the subject is one which should receive the attention of the S. A. F. to the end that this object may be accomplished.

Harry Ley exhibited a handsome pot of pink rambler roses, as yet unnamed. He told the members that these came in a couple of weeks before Lady Gay. The blooms are scented and the plants are excellent for outdoor use. The pot exhibited, he explained, had been grown under adverse conditions, in the same house with ferns. It was excellent and well worthy of mention.

The initial action was taken by the club looking to the holding of an outing in the near future. President Jenkins reserved the announcement of the personnel of the outing committee until a later date.

Various Notes.

A large number of salesmen have been seen at the stores during the month. Those from Philadelphia included Sidney H. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co.; I. Rosnosky, representing the H. F. Michell Co.; Joseph

J. Goudy, representing H. A. Dreer, Inc.

Z. D. Blackistone has added a fine display case to the equipment at his store, Fourteenth and H streets, northwest. The top, one side and the ends are of plate glass, while the woodwork is finished in French gray and white. The case is about twelve feet long and is divided into three sections, the central one being for ice. In this is stored the surplus stocks of orchids and other expensive flowers. The other two can be utilized for the display of other stock. Formerly orchids were kept on a shelf at the rear of the icebox, where they were hard to reach.

Albert Goldenson, formerly with George C. Shaffer and at one time with Z. D. Blackistone, is again in Los Angeles, where his brother, Morris Goldenson, is engaged in the florists' business. Mr. Goldenson had to leave Washington because of the illness of his mother, who lives in the California city. He is expected to return to Washington in the fall to his position with Mr. Shaffer.

George C. Shaffer had a number of attractive dinner decorations last week, in which he used to good advantage the small flowers now in the market. Mr. Shaffer also reports a good business in funeral designs. C. L. L.

The reaction that invariably follows Easter arrived last week, a little later than customary. It was an unsatisfactory week indeed, and it culminated Saturday in midsummer temperature and midsummer prices. Especially was this true of roses, the lower grades of these falling to $5 per thousand. At this figure a general assortment in all sizes was obtainable. The big buyers were masters of the situation. cents each and less. Hadley and Brunner roses fell to the same level, as well as Prima Donna; in fact, the high figures were only for the few selects—$5 per hundred was the average top price for nearly all the novelties—and new varieties, and from that on down to 50 cents per hundred. It is not often roses fall to a level below that of carnations. The veterans last week said we would see even lower prices, until the influence of Mothers' day was felt. Some were prophesying $5 per hundred for white carnations before May 13 and $3 per hundred for the other colors.

There was an exceedingly large surplus of carnations May 6. In large lots $10 per thousand was the figure at which they were offered, and for anything mediocre or sleepy 50 cents per hundred was not refused. Orchids held their heads high during the week, but the best of them receded in price to 40 cents. Valley has joined the general price retreat, and $3 per hundred is high, except for some of exceptional size.

There is nothing encouraging to tell of the gardenia. The corner merchants offer it to the public at 5 cents and even lower. Longiflorum lilies are on every counter and in every icebox—splendid stock. but selling down to $4 and even $3 per hundred. Better things are looked for as Memorial day approaches. Violets have bid us farewell for the season. They held on wonderfully and were in great demand for funeral work during their last week. One leading florist used more than 50,000 in a day. The supply of sweet peas May 6 was large. And the wholesalers said: "Aside from the Spencers, you cannot give them away."

BAYERSDORFER WINS CASE.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals has upheld the contentions of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., in their appeal from the assessment of duty on immortelles, dried and dyed, and wreaths composed of immortelles, but having straw frames. Duty was assessed on immortelles at the rate of sixty per cent ad valorem under paragraph 347 of the Tariff Act of 1913, as ornamental flowers, and as wreaths wholly or in chief value thereof. This assessment was upheld by the Board of United States General Appraisers. They were claimed by the importers, however, to be dutiable under paragraph 210 as cut flowers, preserved or fresh, either directly or by similitude, or as unenumerated articles under paragraph 385. In the higher court the importers relied chiefly on paragraph 210. It was conceded that immortelles are ornamental but not artificial.

The real question was whether the term "artificial and ornamental flowers," in paragraph 347, requires flowers classifiable thereunder to be artificial and ornamental, the contention of the importers being that both characteristics are indispensable to such classification, while the government insisted that the word "and" was used in the sense of "or," and that the possession of either characteristic only was requisite.

After a lengthy discussion of the case the court stated as follows, in an opinion handed down by Judge Barber: "We have no hesitation in concluding that these dyed immortelles are properly classifiable by similitude as preserved cut flowers.

"As to the wreaths composed of such dried and dyed immortelles, the evidence is that the straw frame is of little value as compared with that of the flowers composing the wreaths and the wreaths themselves are without doubt unenumerated manufactured articles." This places immortelle wreaths in the same classification as the immortelles themselves for duty purposes.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

The early morning of May 1 found John Van Bochove, of Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich., enjoying the relaxation of tempting the speckled beauties, but with only fair success. "Fishing is a game of chance," he remarked, looking over a batch of statements in anticipation of more satisfactory returns.

A run out to the Dunlop range at Richmond Hill, Toronto, found everything in order, nothing lacking in detail, and construction and heating carefully planned with a view to expansion. "We are 700 feet above the level of the city," observed J. H. Dunlop, "have splendid soil, an abundance of light and water and," looking towards the clouds, "plenty of wind. This estate of some thirty acres, with the old homestead and orchard, appealed to me as an ideal spot, and we made no mistake in locating here. Stock ably grown under such favorable conditions is of the highest grade." The carnations grown are Matchless, Good Cheer, Sensation, Champion, Rosette and Enchantress Supreme. Roses, both grafted and on own roots, are Mrs. Russell, Shawyer, Lady Alice Stanley, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty, all much at home. Hadley produces too much blind wood to be regarded as a profitable commercial sort. There are some seedlings of great promise, among them a real red Russell. Ophelia, budded on Antoine Rivoire, is another surprise, an innovation in grafting in that, when planted deep, three sets of roots are obtained, so that, while slow in taking hold, the plant makes a strong growth and, consequently, a more vigorous bush. Snapdragon Dorothy, growing with the Ramsburg variety, shows itself to be fully twice the size in plant and flower, which is of a delicate shade of pink. Mr. Dunlop, like most growers of seedlings, is strong on pedigree and has looked up his own. He traced his lineage back to the time of William the Conqueror. The coat of arms has been emblazoned on the windows of the Dunlop store and is rather nifty. Locally he is known as the squire of Richmond Hill.

Philip Breitmeyer, of J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, in commenting on the abnormally good business conditions existing in Detroit, of which the trade appears to be enjoying a full share, predicted a continuance, for a time at least, of these flourishing times. "We are continuing along the highest plane; consequently we expect to retain and increase the high-class patronage we now enjoy," said Mr. Breitmeyer.

Albert Pochelon, of Detroit and the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, remarked that, although the wires were working nicely and even the wireless was producing results, there were some who at the start were a little shy of the pretty houses built for birds. Now the bird houses are so popular that the Bemb Floral Co. is busy filling orders coming from all directions.

William Dilger, Detroit's landscape architect and geologist, recently discovered some rare specimens of the stone age. They will be used in the construction of a fine rockery for a leading Detroiter. Mr. Dilger was expecting Philip Foley, of Chicago, to accompany him on one of his periodic tours across the border.

Harry Balsley, of Detroit, says his slogan is " 'Rah for Peace!" The initials stand for his red flower pots and every pot is intended for a flower or olive branch, as it were.

Hugo Schroeter, of Detroit, says the storekeeper must enlarge his lines nowadays to keep pace with the many changes. He is adding a line of fertilizers and insecticides, having many calls from out-of-town patrons.

M. Bloy, another Detroiter, believes this season will find the plant men extremely busy. His experience with short help is being shared by others. With stock so abundant and of superior quality, it is to be hoped everyone will be able to get in his best work in good time.

Charles Plumb, of Detroit, has decided to give up growing roses in town. Ferns have been a specialty with him many years, in addition to a general line for retail trade.

Joseph Streit is the latest addition to the plant growers in Detroit. He takes over the G. Taepke newer range June 1 and expects to grow pot plants exclusively.

The Thomas Mansfield estate, at Lockport, has decided to hold for another year the stock of its two seedling geraniums, one a clear, brilliant orange and the other a rose-pink, both entirely distinct and extremely striking. The habit of growth and freedom of bloom are all one could wish. W. M.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

All the growers are as busy as bees preparing for Memorial day; large stocks of plants in fine condition are to be found in all the greenhouses. It is a custom here to place vases filled with plants in the cemeteries Decoration day. This item requires a large quantity of high-grade plants. Phœnixes and dracænas are used in the centers, hydrangeas, geraniums, fuchsias, marguerites, begonias, petunias, heliotropes, cannas, coleus and crotons for filling. This class of work calls for the best stock.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has an immense stock of all kinds of bedding and window box plants. The French hydrangeas are especially handsome and comprise all the leading varieties. This concern expects extra heavy work in funeral orders, both local and out-of-town.

Thomas Hall has been hustling with funeral orders. His spring stock is in fine shape and he looks forward to an increased business.

The L. S. Donaldson Co. intends to discontinue growing and will tear down the remainder of its greenhouses.

There is a keen cut-price competition among the Greek florists, of whom there are many in this city. As a Saturday special one store was quoting roses at 60 cents per dozen; a block away another store offered them at 75 cents per dozen. What a pity!

The Dayton Flower Store has been carrying a fine variety of stock. This establishment has been in operation nearly a year and is rapidly extending trade.

The contracts of the Minneapolis Civic and Commercial Association for the filling of plant boxes on 300 electric standards now may be bid on.

The New York Florists had a nice display of rhododendrons and azaleas in bloom. The background was of palms and Boston ferns. The effect was excellent.

been unusually busy with decorative pieces and corsage work.

The Lake Street Florist Shop has made alterations in the store. A new icebox has been installed and the counter shifted to a more advantageous position.

J. West, on Fourth avenue, had a fine display of flowers and plants. He carries a fine side line of goldfishes. Mr. West recently invested in a delivery van. He applies the same push and energy to his business that he displayed when in charge of Powers' floral department.

The window displays last week were splendid. The Mazey Floral Co. had a good showing of spring flowers.

The Sunshine Florists gave an attractive display. Here the bright spring colors predominated.

usual, a mark of good taste. Here one always finds the most elaborate creations in vases and other receptacles, which contain the finest grades of flowers. Last week a large basket of pink gladioli stood out finely against a backing of greens.

Miss H. B. Whitted's two stores were charmingly decorated. Much of Miss Whitted's time last week was devoted to entertaining friends who were in Minneapolis in connection with an exposition at the National Guard Armory. Business at the two stores is good.

Northrup, King & Co. are extremely busy. The warm weather has made people consider their flower gardens. The seedsmen in all parts of the city are busy night and day.

The Hiawatha Gardens are doing well. Business is good in all lines.

The Market.

The market last week was in an excellent condition. Cut stock accumulated and clearances were not easily made. The quality of the stock was affected to a great extent by several exceedingly warm days. The demand was far from rushing and it was only on Friday and Saturday that stock was cleared. The bulk of the week's business was funeral work. Light-colored stock was in excellent demand. Easter lilies and callas were abundant all week and the prices obtained hardly averaged 4 cents.

Carnations will be in great demand for Mothers' day and prices are expected to double those of last week. Sweet peas are becoming poorer daily and the supply is falling off rapidly. Roses are in good supply and not high in price. Some excellent stock of Russell, Ophelia, Richmond and Killarney roses was seen. Valley, daisies, mignonette, pansies, forget-me-nots, snapdragons, tulips and calendulas are seen daily and have a good demand. Asparagus, smilax and ferns are the greens in good demand.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its monthly meeting and annual election of officers May 3, at the Eleven Mile House, President F. W. Ude, Jr., presiding. A general review of the Easter business was made and discussed. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, William Winter; vice-president, Thomas Kirkwood; treasurer, Hugo Gross; secretary, Joseph Deutschmann, reëlected. The next meeting will take place June 7.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club held the monthly conference at the home of W. A. Rowe, in Kirkwood, May 5. An interesting program for this week's meeting was prepared.

Charles Young, president of the Retail Florists' Association, says he expects the entire membership to be present at the meeting May 15, in Mission Inn Garden, as there will be some important business transacted that will need the counsel of every member.

The Henry Shaw memorial flower sermon will be given at the Christ church this month. The floral decoration will be sent from the Missouri Botanical Garden, of which Mr. Shaw was the founder.

Fred H. Meinhardt, state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern Missouri, is a busy man at present, as the planting-out season now is in full swing. Mr. Meinhardt will be busy with the duties of his office after the planting season and hopes to bring a good representation to the meeting at Houston.

Edward Buechel, secretary and treasurer of the Riessen Floral Co., says he had a busy week of funeral work. The new members of the recently reorganized company have added considerable strength to the concern with new and good business.

The Shackelford Nursery Co. disposed of a cut of 30,000 Darwin tulips last week to local buyers. There were also large shipments sent to the Chicago wholesale market. The Shackelford daisies, which are great sellers, will follow at the rate of several thousand daily.

David Geddis, manager of Vandervoort's floral department, reports an exceptionally large business since Easter. Adolph Steidle, who has been with him for some time, has resigned and will hereafter be with his father, John Steidle, at Olivette.

Hugo Schaff has started a big force of men planting at the various school grounds. Mr. Schaff is head of this department for the board of education and says he has his hands full at present.

W. S. Wells, who has charge of the grounds at the Washington University, reports that the university will build a large greenhouse this summer. Mr. Wells has a force of men working on the grounds.

Joseph Hauser will start planting 20,000 of his new single red dahlia May 20. He says he will be cutting thousands of blooms by the end of June. Mr. Hauser's dahlia farm, at Webster Groves, Mo., is an interesting place to visit.

A visit to Ostertag Bros. found all hands busy at work on a funeral order, for several large pieces. This concern has rented two vacant stores for the plant and rustic-work sales during the next two months.

Fehr, H. Emunds and the St. Clair Floral Co., leading Belleville florists, are at present in the throes of the busy plant season. All report a big demand.

A heavy demand is expected for Mothers' day, as much publicity has been given the day this year. Many advance orders have been booked.

Thomas Carr, at the Union Market, experienced a heavy plant trade last week. Miss Marie, who has charge of the cut flower department, says the demand is quite satisfactory. Frank Gutgesell has charge of the plant stands.

Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., says they have had a busy season in nursery stock. Mr. Weber is looking for a large St. Louis representation at the annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen at Milwaukee next month.

Carl Doerflinger, private gardener for Mr. Keller at the Overland park, says he will have a large pick of tomatoes soon, as some are already ripening. Some additional glass will be built here this summer.

Visitors last week included Walter Garbett, of the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co., Los Angeles, Cal.; Guy Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; Frank Farney, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, and M. Le Vine, of Lion & Co., New York.

J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Commencing May 3, the market went to pieces completely. Warmer weather sent in a flood of flowers and the demand was not at all robust. As a consequence there was an all-around slump in prices, which lasted until May 9, when conditions improved somewhat, particularly in the case of carnations. Roses had a hard week and clearances were hard to make, and then at almost unquotable prices. The best sellers continue to be Hadley, Ophelia, Russell, Francis Scott Key, Stanley and Beauty, but prices are now unstable. The slump was not unexpected, as there had been a long, uninterrupted spell of good prices. Carnations sold poorly last week, but braced in anticipation of Mothers' day, whites especially having a tendency to soar. Violets, except for small lots of doubles, are done. Sweet peas, after selling finely for several weeks, went to pieces on heavy shipments and the prices came down with a dull thud. Flowers which had been making $1 per hundred slumped to 25 cents. All grades suffered in like ratio and returns to shippers must have been discouraging.

Callas are a drug, fine flowers going as low as 40 and 50 cents per dozen. Easter lilies are in the same position; so are snapdragons, which are in overwhelming supply at last. Even yellow marguerites have fallen heavily in value. Spanish iris is abundant and of superb quality, but does not sell as it should. Gladiolus nanus is in larger supply and quite a few of the large-flowered section have appeared, principally America. Of indoor tulips and narcissi the supplies will finish this week, but plenty of these are now obtainable outdoors. Darwin tulips from outdoors are late and will not be in good condition for at least ten days.

Gardenias are abundant but of poorer quality. Cattleyas are much more abundant; some gigas as well as Mossiæ now are obtainable. Lily of the valley is not abundant. Asparagus continues to sell well. The bedding plant trade is just commencing. Owing to the cool, damp season, the demand has started much later than usual. Hydrangeas and ramblers, which usually have been in heavy demand early in May, are moving slowly as yet.

Various Notes.

The big May exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which is being staged as these notes are written, promises to be the finest of its kind ever held in Boston. The unusually cold and late season has made it impossible to flower some plants on time, but the display of orchids, azaleas, rhododendrons, wistarias, pelargoniums, campanulas, fuchsias, heliotropes, calceolarias, roses, carnations, sweet peas, bulbous flowers, etc., promises to be the best ever seen in Boston. The show comes at a most strenuous period for all horticulturists, but large attendances are certain May 10 to 14, while the show continues. Governor Samuel W. McCall formally opened the exhibition on the evening of May 10.

to 40,000 sweet peas daily at his stand in the wholesale market. Two of his largest shippers are John Marshall, of the Fruit Hill Greenhouses, Providence, R. I., and A. B. Hanson, of South Royalston, Mass.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, is sending in quantities of fine Spanish irises. His Hydrangea Otaksa is splendidly grown.

A large attendance is anticipated for the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, to be held May 15, at the estate of General S. M. Weld, of Dedham. Members and friends are asked to take a train for Dedham, leaving South station at 2 p. m., or take elevated trains to Forest Hills and transfer there to a Dedham car. All should endeavor to reach Dedham as near 2:30 p. m. as possible. Barges will convey passengers from Dedham to General Weld's estate. The beautiful rock gardens will be in splendid condition.

I am glad to report that George Cartwright, the genial treasurer of the Boston Flower Exchange, who has been at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital for ten days, is much improved in health. An operation was not considered necessary.

Harry Quint has opened a temporary store at 34 Bromfield street, where he has a large force of men busy making up Memorial day wreaths, which he will make on a larger scale this year than ever. He has planted a neat privet hedge around the garden fronting his Boylston street store and continues to make attractive bulbous displays there. Business is good.

The salesmen and growers connected with the several wholesale markets contributed to a common fund for advertising flowers for Mothers' day in the Boston dailies.

William Hannan & Son, of Dorchester, have 50,000 spiræas coming along in beds for Memorial day. They also have 15,000 roses, mostly Dorothy Perkins.

The wholesale store of the Welch Bros. Co. is a scene of activity at any time, but particularly in the morning. They handle an immense number of flowers, and now when prices are low and flowers unusually abundant they seem able to dispose of great quantities. They anticipate a record Memorial day trade.

Francis Scott Key, Hadley, Ophelia, d'Arenberg, Russell and a deep sport from Sunburst are specially fine now with the Budlong Rose Co. The daily cut now averages 35,000 to 40,000 blooms.

At Penn's business continues good. They are making big preparations for Memorial day and now have forty-three men on the staff. They are making a fine exhibit at the big Boston show this week.

Robert T. McGorum, of Natick, is growing Ophelia rose remarkably well. He has excellent success with Hadley, Russell and Sunburst, all grafted stock.

J. Koppelman & Son, of Providence, R. I., and F. W. Holbrow, of Dorchester, are in the market with excellent America gladioli.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. is specializing in dormant deciduous shrubs, in addition to cut flowers and plants. This concern is among the exhibitors at the Boston show this week.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 16, Thomas Coles, head gardener to General S. M. Weld, of Dedham, will lecture on rock gardening. Mr. Coles is an expert on this fascinating branch of horticulture, which is becoming popular here, and he undoubtedly will have a large audience.

William R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, now has a heavy cut of roses. His principal varieties are Ophelia, Hadley, Killarney, White Killarney, Ward and Richmond.

Ellery Briggs, of Dighton, has had splendid success with Yarrawa sweet peas this season. His other varieties are equally good.

W. B. Southworth, of West Stoughton, has Spanish irises of grand quality. The stems are remarkable, some being forty inches in length. He also has success with Spencer peas.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, finished their season with tulips and narcissi from indoors this week. They have sold uniformly well right through the season.

Morning Glow carnation, which Edward Winkler decided not to introduce this season, has become one of the most popular carnations in the Boston market, and his decision to hold the stock himself undoubtedly was a wise one.

Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum, who has been confined to the house for about three weeks, now is much improved. In the Arboretum the forsythias are now at their best; cerasus and pyrus are also attractive. The malus and lilac displays promise to be unusually fine later.

The season here is a somewhat belated one. The ground has been so wet from frequent rains that carnation specialists are later than usual in planting out their stock, but most of the growers are getting out their plants this week. W. N. C.

The monthly magazine published by the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., Boston, devotes more than three pages of the May number to a description of the electrical refrigerating apparatus in the new Penn store.

Mrs. Francis King, of Alma, Mich., for whom the gladiolus was named, is president of the Women's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association, which will hold a conference at Horticultural hall May 18 to 20. In charge of an exhibition of members' work are Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy and Mrs. W. W. Edgar. The program appeared in The Review for April 27.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

San Francisco, Cal.—The final premium list has been issued for the "Great San Francisco Sweet Pea Exhibition" to be held under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society, in the concert room of the Palace hotel June 9 and 10. There are twelve classes, with another special class for florists to be added later, with liberal premiums in each class. Copies of the schedule or other information can be had by addressing Frank G. Cuthbertson, assistant secretary, 749 Front street, San Francisco.

Stockton, Cal.—The bad check man, with a new line of talk, operated in this city several days ago and counted among his victims the Valley Floral Co. and the California Florist. After buying the flowers the man would speak of several San Francisco florists, with whom he appeared to be personally acquainted. This surprised the local men, who also were acquainted with those of whom he talked. Finally the customer brought up the subject of pay for the flowers, and agreed to have it charged, unless the florist would care to cash a check. Well, the forged checks were cashed in both stores, each for $20.50.

Tacoma, Wash.—The Tacoma Dahlia Society has decided not to accept the offer of the National Dahlia Society to hold this year's show at Tacoma. "We're not knocking the national body, but the fact of the matter is our Tacoma show is more satisfactory," President Love said. "There is a membership fee of $5 and an entrance fee of $1 for the national show, which would keep out many of the small exhibitors who help to make our own Tacoma show a big one." It was decided to hold the show in the roof garden of Rhodes Bros., the dates to be fixed later. No admission will be charged. Only members may exhibit.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles, Feb. 25, 1916. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Contrary to expectations, business has continued good since Easter, not only in funeral work but also in decorations. Weddings and other social functions have cleaned up stock finely. The gladioli now coming in are extra fine; America still holds its own as a good standby in pinks and the hybrids also are popular. The comparatively cool weather of last week helped all outdoor stock, and roses, carnations and hardy flowers generally are arriving in good shape. The delphiniums are showy and good, and there is quite a demand for the scarlet Transvaal daisy.

During the early part of the week the stores were crowded with left-over lilies, cut and in pots, but these are gone and most of the growers are far from satisfied. Ferns are selling well and there is a certain demand for palms. All greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The L. A. Floral Co. says that the extra call for stock from out-of-town points has cleaned up everything daily, and, from the inquiries that come in for Mothers' day and now for Decoration day it looks as if the clean-up will continue.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was postponed from May 2 to May 3 on account of election day. There was only a moderate attendance to hear Theodore Payne lecture on wild flowers, but everyone who came was well repaid. Mr. Payne has a wide knowledge of native plants and he sent in a large number of specimens from Exposition park, where he has charge of some experiments along the line of educating the public to the beauties of nature. Why a flat, uninteresting tract like this park was selected for the purpose, when we have so many hundreds of acres of more suitable mountain parks, is hard to say, but city officials in their wisdom are not like the common clay.

H. W. Turner certainly has landed another coup with his baby roses. A demand has already appeared for these beautiful varieties and Mr. Turner is already there with the stock. Many thousands of all the popular varieties and many novelties are here. Some benches of light pink Shawyer plants this season are making a wonderful growth; in fact, Mr. Turner's place never looked better than now.

Charles Lewis has left the Freeman-Lewis Co. He intends making a trip east before settling down to business again.

The Market.

At the stores business last week was no more than normal. Several bright, warm days brought on heavy cuts of roses and for the first time this year there were enough roses to meet all demands. There were plenty of lilies, irises, stocks, Darwin tulips, sweet peas, carnations and snapdragons.

Funeral work was a little slack, but social events and counter trade took enough stock to prevent any waste. The advent of clean-up week, a campaign covering the entire city, stimulated the movement of bedding stock, and all hands were busy handling porch and lawn decorations.

The Market.

Preparations for Mothers' day demanded the attention of the florists last week and there was evidence on every side that this comparatively new flower day would receive wider recognition than heretofore. The observance of Mothers' day started in the east and western florists were a little slow to take it up, but last year it was exploited with considerable success and this year it promises to get a stronger foothold.

Business is seasonably good, but there is such an abundance of flowers that it is difficult to clean up everything. Roses are plentiful and the quality is excellent. Beauties are particularly fine, bringing $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Other good roses can be had for 25 to 75 cents per dozen. Ulrich Brunner roses show up well and are to be seen everywhere. Fine Irish Elegance roses find a ready outlet. Carnations are too plentiful to maintain firmness in prices, but fancy stock is in the minority and sells well at rather high prices. There are enough sweet peas for all requirements, the quality averaging fair; otherwise they would be a drug on the market.

Gladioli are coming in quite freely, there being many of the small varieties and a fair offering of the large specimens. There is a heavy cut of Spanish irises and Easter lilies continue in ample supply. A few good scabiosas appear and there are large quantities of gypsophilas, statice, straw daisies, sweet williams, mignonette, cornflowers, coreopsis, marigolds, stocks, etc. Peonies are plentiful. Potted stock has been rather scarce since Easter, nearly all of it having been cleaned up closely at that time. A few late wistarias appear, as well as a few ramblers, a limited supply of French hydrangeas and some hawthorn. Spiræa is the only thing that is really plentiful in the line of flowering plants. Orchids continue plentiful and of excellent quality.

The Fairmont Floral Co., which was succeeded by the MacRorie-McLaren Co., has filed an application for voluntary dissolution. The hearing will be held June 1.

B. M. Joseph has returned from a week's automobile trip down the San Joaquin valley, combining business and pleasure. He says the florists he visited seem to be doing a normal business. Mr. Joseph planned to exploit Mothers' day more extensively this year than last.

Frank D. Pelicano has been confined to his home for two weeks with rheumatism and expects to go to the springs as soon as he is able.

The rear of the basement of the California Flower Market building, on Bush street, is being fitted up as an annex to the present market. The addition will accommodate a number of growers who have been selling flowers on the sidewalk.

John R. Fotheringham is expected soon with his usual large line of florists' supplies.

The E. W. McLellan Co. still is bringing in a fine cut of Beauties, averaging sixty or seventy dozen per day. J. A. Axell says they are having success with the Ulrich Brunner rose.

Podesta & Baldocchi are featuring American Beauties at their store on Grant avenue and are using about twenty-five dozen a day. They had a special display of them last week.

The Magnificent Lavender Freesia

THE only commercial colored Freesia in the world. A truly wonderful novelty that took many years to produce. The above cut will give some idea of its beauty. It represents a bunch of only twelve sprays photographed side by side with my new GIANT WHITE. One glance will satisfy anyone of its wonderful commercial merit, and no words are necessary to describe it except to say that the bunches figured measure nearly three feet tall, not including the vase. It is much larger and stronger in every way than Purity, one of its parents; has the same fine habit of growth and is very fragrant.

I offer it in two shades of color, a bluish lavender and a reddish lavender. Only good-sized, flowering bulbs sold

TO THE SEED TRADE:

This is to advise that I have sold my seed growing farms, buildings and equipment to The Everett B. Clark Seed Company, of Milford, Conn.

In retiring from the seed growing business I wish, while expressing my appreciation of the patronage with which you have favored me during the past many years, to bespeak for The Everett B. Clark Seed Company, as my successors, a continuance of your patronage.

Very truly yours,

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

S. M. ISBELL, founder of S. M. Isbell & Co., Inc., Jackson, Mich., is seriously ill.

MEMBERS of the seed trade, especially those who handle California callas, will pause to note the passing of Alfred Mitting, recorded in this week's obituary column.

WHILE seed corn of the 1915 crop has been unreliable, there appears to have been enough good stock of the 1914 crop on hand so that none who was willing to meet the sellers' views as to price has been compelled to do without. And some of the 1914 crop still is on offer.

REPORT has come of the death in action of Lieut. Eric G. Sutton, second son of Leonard Sutton, of Sutton & Sons, Reading, England. The young man was known personally by many American seedsmen, as he made a tour of this country a few years ago, just before he entered his father's firm.

ACCORDING to A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, members of the trade are already making reservations in the Sherman hotel for June 20 to 22, the dates of the thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association. As the convention will be held in this hotel, it behooves those who anticipate attending to take immediate action.

THE Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn., announces the purchase of two adjacent establishments, including farms, buildings and equipment, of Albertus N. Clark and Clifford E. Clark, seed growers of long standing. The two properties are so located between the original Everett B. Clark farms and the Fenn farm purchased a year ago that the purchase makes one property of the four.

THE ST. REMY SEED GROWERS.

Further particulars are to hand through British sources respecting the accusations of enemy trading made against certain seed growers at St. Remy, France.

Jacques Hasslach, as already reported, has been fined 30,000 francs and sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Marius Lombard has been fined 20,000 francs and sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

J. M. Laplanche has been fined 10,000 francs.

SNAPS for FALL

The month of May is the proper time to sow seed of snapdragons for fall blooming. Plants started now from seed will be ready to bench in July. We strongly advise growing your own seedlings, as plants do not ship well in hot weather. We list the good ones as follows:

Seed of our famous Silver Pink (the 5-to-1 variety), at $1.00 per pkt., 3 for $2.50, 7 for $5 00.

Seed of Melrose, Garnet, Yellow, Buxton, Phelps' White and fancy mixed, at 35c per pkt., 8 for $1.00.

All orders cash. Free cultural directions. No plants to offer.

Stock is arriving for our new patented square dirt bands and pots. As soon as we can get our machinery by the freight embargoes we will be ready with samples. In the meantime we can furnish any size square plain band.

IF ENGLAND BARS BULB IMPORTS.

There has been a report in England that the importation of bulbs will be forbidden this season. The secretary of the Horticultural Trades' Association made inquiry of the government and was promised a definite reply at an early date, indicating that the matter at least is under consideration.

The importance of the matter to the trade in America lies in the fact that this country will, in such an event, afford the only open market for that part of all the world's crop of bulbs usually used in the British isles. Germany has not yet placed any restrictions on the importation of bulbs, but has done so with flowers and decorative materials, so that it is not to be expected the authorities there will permit their people to take up any considerable part

RAINBOW FREESIAS

WONDERFUL NEW RACE of COLORED FREESIA INTRODUCED LAST YEAR for the FIRST TIME

¶ Grown and hybridized for a number of years by Mr. A. Frey, of Crown Point, Ind. The colors are varied and include several shades of yellow, orange, lavender and pink, all, however, harmonizing with each other, even when bunched together.

¶ Habit of plant is branching, each bulb giving two to three flowers with stems long enough for all floral purposes.

¶ Bulbs offered are of good blooming size and in a mixture of colors. Separate colors cannot be offered as yet.

Delivery in July, as soon as bulbs are harvested and cured.

Price-$5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000; $187.50 for 5000 of England's supply of bulbs. Considering only the Holland bulbs, the latest figures available show that in the one month of September, 1914, Holland sent the following quantities to the various countries:

Country—	Kilogram
United States	1,599,100
Great Britain	2,829,300
Sweden	1,076,000
Denmark	156,200
Norway	90,600
Germany-Austria	2,306,900
Belgium-France	48,900
Russia	None
All other countries	33,100
Totals	8,140,100

With a quantity of bulbs equal to twice what America uses thrown unexpectedly on the market, only the strongest kind of organization among the Holland, French, Japanese and other exporters can prevent price cutting and demoralization.

TENERIFFE-BERMUDA ONION.

Owing to the lack of rains this winter in the Canary Islands, a considerable part of the onion seed crop has been irretrievably lost and what remains of it is in a rather precarious condition.

On the other hand, the fact that the yield of Bermuda onions in Texas has been smaller than expected, and the difficulties in transporting the Egyptian onions, will have the effect, so I anticipate, of maintaining satisfactory prices in northern and eastern markets of the Union and as a consequence the demand for our seed will be brisker than usual.

With our little crop we will not be able to face half of the demand from different countries.

Once more the Texas Bermuda onion

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming Giant Pansies

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and their unusual hardiness. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March, or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. Seed ready July 1.

WINTER FLOWERING ORCHID TYPE

MRS. A. A. SKACH—Shell Pink—keeps well and retains color.

MRS. JOE MANDA—Light Shell Pink—extra long stems, flowers very ruffled, deeper in color after cutting.

PINK and WHITE—Contains some fine varieties, as Mrs. Jos. Manda, Mrs. M. Spanolin, etc.

WHITE ORCHID—The well known true white.

BRIDAL VEIL—Pure white; more ruffled than above.

MRS. M. SPANOLIN—Black seeded, of purest white; sometimes has a slightly pink spot on spring blossoms. Won many first prizes.

VENUS—White, blushed with Pink—probably best shaped of all Orchid types.

ORCHID MIXTURE—Mixed—all the best commercial varieties; many colors for little money.

ORCHID BEAUTY — Dark Rose, blushed with Orange.

WOODROW WILSON—Magenta Rose—a good producer.

WINTER FLOWERING GRANDIFLORA

ZVOLANEK PINK—Light Shell Pink—the well known extra large commercial variety for greenhouse or outdoors.

CHRISTMAS PINK—Pink and White.

MRS. WM. SIM—Salmon — a well known old-timer.

WATCHUNG—The earliest White.

WHITE NORA—Large White.

PINK BEAUTY—Rose Pink.

ORANGE BIRD — Orange-Salmon—very well known.

WALLACEA—The best Lavender.

MRS. CHAS. H. TOTTY—Sky Blue.

BLUE JAY—Bright Blue.

CHIPS

A carpenter is known by his chips—a bulb house by its trade. Among the customers of this house are the largest and most progressive and prosperous growers in the world. Real, permanent success is founded on knowledge, and not on haphazard vagaries of chance. The few who succeed by accident are ever in peril of reaching failure by the same route. Large growers buy Ward's lily bulbs because they know from years of experience that it pays them best to do so. This is because Ward's lily bulbs average more flowers per thousand bulbs than other brands. And the reason for that is due to a thorough knowledge of the lily bulb growing business in Japan by an organization of lily growers of long experience and proven reliability. If you grow lily bulbs, no matter what kind, no matter how small or large the amount is, it will pay you to get Ward's lily bulbs for many reasons.

Not how cheap but how good.

RALPH M. WARD & CO.
THE LILY HOUSE
71 Murray Street

crop has baffled the expectations of the growers. Damage has been done to the extent of forty per cent and, as usual, the poor thrips and the much abused weather conditions have got the blame for it. Next to this, the blame for the ultimate bad result of the sales because of the onions arriving at distant points in a "wasty" condition will be eventually shifted to the shoulders of the railroad company, the steamship company, or the negligence of the broker who sold the onions. But the fact is that a considerable quantity of the commercial seed bought and distributed by the majority of dealers in America is mainly responsible for the damage continuously observed in the last four or five years. These dealers are involuntarily killing this industry at both ends and doing a real harm and injury to the growers and to their own country at large, by importing, unawares, badly degenerated seed.

Commercial seed is degenerated seed and, although cheap to the American dealers, it comes out terribly expensive to the onion growers, in view of the considerable loss it brings about. Such seed is no good anywhere and cannot produce good keeping onions. Hence the great number of cars which arrive in a bad condition at northern points.

American seedsmen and dealers have introduced in Teneriffe such a chaotic state of affairs, establishing the keenest competition among the dealers and so-called growers here, from bankers and general provision merchants down to barbers and tailors, in order to get the seed at cheap prices, with the natural increase in their profits, that the real victim is the onion grower in the United States.

I am positive that the shortage of our onion seed will give rise to the same ridiculous position of the market over here that happened for similar reasons in 1912, when everybody in the trade lost unnecessarily heaps of dollars.

To avoid the recurrence of such things, I have devised a common-sense, practical business plan whereby I hope seedsmen and dealers in the United States will secure the seed at moderate prices under the abnormal circumstances of the present fall.

Federico C. Varela.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

THE demise of Alfred Mitting, who at one time traded as the Berrydale Experiment Gardens, Holland, Mich., and under other titles in California, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

THE large wholesale nurserymen are beginning to get their breath again. With frost, embargo, car shortages, freight embargo, labor shortage and an unusual number of reorders, it has been a strenuous season.

THE British authorities have placed restrictions upon the exportation of jute from British territory. Bagging may hereafter be exported only when each exportation is specially licensed. The Textile Alliance, Inc., has made arrangements with the British authorities whereby licenses will be granted for shipments from British territory consigned to or for account of the Textile Alliance when destined for recipients who have received the approval of the British Embassy at Washington. A meeting of dealers in burlap and manufacturers of bags was held at New York May 5 to discuss the details and put the plan into operation.

SHIPPING PAPERS PASS FIRST.

Lord Robert Cecil, minister of war trade of Great Britain, May 6, 1916, made the important announcement of certain orders in council in the nature of concessions to neutral trade, among which is the following order:

"Business documents from shippers to and from neutral countries will be placed in a separate bag, which will receive immediate examination, and will proceed on the ship on which it was originally mailed. No guarantee will be given that this bag will not be opened, but shippers will be assured that there will be no delay."

This is a confirmation of the agreement made at a conference between Sir Richard Crawford, of the British embassy at Washington, D. C., with

STARK VERSUS STARK.

A bill was filed in the Court of Common Pleas at Louisiana, Mo., by Stark Bros.' Nurseries & Orchards Co., against the Wm. P. Stark Nurseries, of Neosho, asking that they be restrained from using alleged unfair methods of competition, alleged misleading advertising and the use of certain trademarks. It also is asked that a referee be named to hear the case in the St. Louis Court of Appeals.

The grievances mentioned have been considered by associated advertising clubs of the world. They are contained in the following statement by Stark Bros.:

"1. That the defendants be ordered to cease their present methods of competition against Stark Bros., of Louisiana, Mo.

"2. Stark Bros. state that W. P. Stark, while still in the employ of Stark Bros.' Co., attempted to build up a new business started by his son at the expense of the Stark Bros.' Co., and that W. P. Stark remained with the Stark Bros.' Co. for some months after his son's new nursery was started, in order to secure information which would be to the benefit of his and his son's new nursery company.

"3. The Stark Bros.' Co. asks for an injunction and asks the court to appoint a referee to adjust the damages. They also ask the court to enjoin Wm. P. Stark and Wm. H. Stark from advertising their name in such a manner as There's Still a Chance to Get These Three Canna Novelties...

It's not too late for you to secure your share of our three most distinctive and popular Cannas.

City of Portland

(3½ feet)

The color is a beautiful glowing pink. It is an early and continuous bloomer; blooming freely in hot or cold weather. The foliage is an attractive shade of green, thick and leathery in substance. Canna experts who saw this variety on our grounds last season were quick to pronounce it the finest all-around Pink Canna to date.

Panama

(3 feet)

The color is unusual, being an attractive rich orange red, with a well defined edge of bright golden yellow. The flowers are very large, with an immense spread of individual blooms.

Wintzer's Colossal

(5 feet) (Orchid Flowering)

This is without doubt the largest flowered Canna in commerce. The color is a strikingly vivid scarlet that retains its brilliancy. It is the most prolific of its class.

These three head-liners reflect the quality that won Gold Medals for Swasteeka Cannas at both the San Francisco and San Diego Expositions.

PRICES	Roots, Per 100	Plants, Per 100
City of Portland	$15.00	$20.00
Panama	15 00	20.00

Belle Washburn THE BEST RED CARNATION

Plants in 2½-inch pots, ready for bench or field

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; also of Silver Medal of S. A. F. and O. H., at St. Louis, 1916. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family.

Price of 2½-inch plants is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate

MORE TROUBLE.

The Ryndam, of the Holland-America line, which sailed from Rotterdam April 15, did not reach New York until May 3. The trip was made around Scotland, instead of through the English Channel, marking a new departure for boats of this line. Twice her progress was arrested by the British warships and at Kirkwall the mails were removed, which put more trouble on the shoulders of importers, who will have to wait no one knows how long for the arrival of shipping papers. Because of the length of time which had elapsed since the previous sailing, the trade had an unusually large quantity of stock on the Ryndam, totaling 1,988 cases of nursery stock and 540 cases of bulbs. The consignees were as follows:

American Express Co., 2 cases plants.
American Shipping Co., 35 cases trees.
Baldwin & Co., 5 cases bulbs.
B. F. Bankert, 7 cases trees.
Elliott Auction Co., 102 packages trees.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Flowers are abundant and cheap, though some kinds hold at a fair price for this time of the year. Roses, which have been high this spring, are much cheaper. The ordinary grades can be had at $4 per hundred, the extra quality blooms at $5 and $6 and the best at $7. Southern lilacs arrived in larger quantities last week and found a ready sale. The many tulips, hyacinths, jonquils, etc., in bloom outdoors have resulted in a smaller demand for the florists' bulbous stock. The flood of pansy plants in baskets for transplanting is rising higher and there is an increasing demand for them, but dozens of grocery stores, tea stores, etc., are selling them. The pansies are generally of good quality. Valley is good and in considerable demand.

A few potted geraniums are appearing here and there, but most of the growers are saving them for the Memorial day trade, which, it is believed, will be large this year. Stocks are of extremely good quality. Spiræa continues to sell well.

There have been several large decorative orders and considerable funeral work of late. General business conditions continue to improve and this probably means that florists may look forward to at least a normal business.

Various Notes.

Fred P. Wolfinger has enlarged his office. Last week he was busy with decorations for several large weddings.

Philips Bros. report that business has been good since Easter.

The store of Peter Penek last week was decorated with the American and celebration colors, for the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Newark.

The window of the store of August Begerow was trimmed with the Newark anniversary colors last week. These colors are orange and black. On an orange background Mr. Begerow displayed a fine line of black vases, baskets, etc. In the center was a crow with an orange bow tied around its neck.

GRAFTED ROSES

NEW ROSE "CLEVELAND"

The true Rose-pink; a color that positively glows under artificial light. It is well to be cautious in buying new Roses, but it is easily possible to be too cautious and let the "other fellow" buy the cream, while you are waiting to be sure the "newcomer" will sell. A new Rose with merit always makes its own market. Cleveland won two Silver Medals last fall and the Silver Medal at the International Flower Show in New York last spring, as the best new Rose. It has petalage enough to make it an all-year Rose, a valuable consideration when you want a pink that will stand the summer sun as well as open freely in midwinter. Our stock is limited this year. We have only to sell, so get aboard early and get your stock. Price, $35.00 per 100; $300.00 per 1000 for first-class 3-inch plants. When these plants are gone we will not have any more to sell for another year, as I refuse to injure the vitality of a variety by overpropagation.

All other standard varieties, except Double Pink and Double White Killarney: $15.00 per 100; $125.00 per 1000.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

a few days ago that measured about six feet high and six feet wide, and had 300 sprays averaging two feet in length, in full flower to the bottom.

Frank T. Schlotzhauer, of the Francis Floral Co., says business has been particularly good since Easter. He has been using the vacant store next door to increase his display facilities.

The Misses Rothschild and Cohn, who operate as the Bellevue Florists, in the Bellevue hotel building, anticipate a good summer business. Already, they say, many tourists from the east and middle west, who were here during the exposition last year, are beginning to arrive for the summer, and this is bound to help the florists.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. did much to widen the observance of Mothers' day in this vicinity. This year they sent out a neat folder to customers, advocating flowers for Mothers' day.

As evidence of the strong appeal of the sentiment of Mothers' day and what a little publicity can do is the following incident: About three months ago, "K. C. B.," who writes Ye Towne Gossip in one of the local daily papers, made a mistake in announcing the date of Mothers' day. The public responded so generously that florists had an unusually large day's business.

C. Kooyman brought in the first of his greenhouse-grown gladioli last week. He has about 10,000 Francis King, America and Halley.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has moved its wholesale offices to its retail establishment on Powell street and will shortly be comfortably settled in the new place. Improvements are now being made in the packing room at the rear of the store.

The San Rafael Armory has been selected as the flower show house during the Marin Flower Pageant in San Rafael, Cal., May 18 to 21. A flower parade will be held May 20.

The florists of Sacramento, Cal., participated in the big celebration there this week, commemorating the completion of a 3-mile concrete causeway, uniting the east and west sides of Sacramento valley. The carnival lasted four days and an elaborate program was carried out, a feature of which was a floral parade.

LAGER & HURRELL, Summit, New Jersey

Local florists have commended the new service recently inaugurated by the Western Union Telegraph Co., namely, the execution by wire of small commissions, such as the purchase and delivery of flowers, candy, etc., for the accommodation of its patrons. While the business received by the florists on such commissions has not as yet reached any proportions, some see possibilities of working it to advantage. S. H. G.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Stock is plentiful in all seasonable lines. The demand is fair. Advance orders for blooms for Mothers' day are unusually heavy this year.

Roses of all kinds, including American Beauties, are in good supply. Carnation receipts easily can take care of all present needs. Easter lilies are too plentiful, if anything, and have accumulated. Sweet peas continue to be abundant. Both orchids and valley again are in good supply. Snapdragon has a fair market.

New southern ferns and wild smilax are having a heavy call.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been having an excellent demand for southern smilax.

Advance orders for Mothers' day at the W. Murphy Co. establishment were the heaviest ever had for that day.

Recent visitors included M. Anderson, of Dayton, O.; Milton Alexander, representing Schloss Bros., New York.

Mrs. Fannie D. Kyrk, the mother of Miss Edith F. Kyrk and stepmother of Louis H. Kyrk, died May 5, at the home of her daughter. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon. The floral tributes were many and of exceptional beauty. C. H. H.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The warm weather last week brought out an extra large supply of cut flowers and, other than funeral work, little business was done in this line. Consequently the market was oversupplied and prices reached the low level of the season. Roses in particular were too plentiful and at the close of the week the street boys had innumerable quantities. Lilacs are in their prime and are to be had on every street corner. Lilies, both calla and Easter, were hard to move at any price. Some good Darwin tulips are coming in. Peas have shortened in stem and dropped in price, and keep poorly. Sales of bedding stock are increasing daily and those who handle this line are busy.

Various Notes.

Edward Kress is proudly exhibiting the silver medal awarded him by the American Rose Society for his red outdoor rose, Defiance, which scored eighty-five points at the Hartford test garden.

Isaac H. Moss reports an extraordinarily busy season in shrubs and has extra men working to keep up with the orders.

Fred C. Bauer had a house full of garden roses in pots, but he has moved them all at this early date.

Word was received here of the death of William B. Sands, Jr., which occurred at the ranch at Haswell, Colo., May 6. Mr. Sands was the son of the late William B. and Florence M. Sands, and formerly was in business with his father near Lakeside. After the death of his father, a few years ago, Mr. Sands attempted to carry on the business, but his health failed him and he was compelled to give it up and seek a more favorable climate. He was born in Baltimore. He is survived by his wife, three brothers and one sister.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held May 8, President Hamilton in the chair. The night was warm and the attendance light. No business of importance was transacted. W. F. E.

Altoona, Pa.—During Easter week Myers Bros. rented a vacant hotel and cleverly arranged each room with one kind of plants. There was a rose room, a tulip and narcissus room, etc., all of which pleased the people and helped greatly to move the stock.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

Sixty thousand geraniums and an equal number of ferns, besides thousands of other plants, now are ready for shipment from the greenhouses of John Walker, of Youngstown, O.

The Park Flower Shop, of Cleveland, has opened a store at 7 West Federal street, Youngstown.

Maiden Lane, No. 35, is the location of the new home of the Kay-Dimond Co., Youngstown. Ample floor space and a spacious window permit a better display of plants.

Heepe's Sons, of Akron, O., had a display of rose bushes and hydrangeas in their window last week. If more of the florists devoted some time to their windows, more sales would be made of the higher class of plants.

The owners of the North Hill Greenhouses, of Akron, have finished building a new house 30x100 feet. This will be devoted to bedding stock for the present season.

The McFarlands, of Akron, have had quite a rush of funeral work and business has held up well since Easter, which was one of the largest this concern has enjoyed.

W. H. Hutchings, of the Akron Flower Shop, Akron, had a good display of potted plants in his store last week. A truck has been added to the delivery equipment.

The Imperial Greenhouses, of Akron, report an unusually busy season following Easter.

Williams Bros., of Lorain, O., have given up their store on Broadway and will conduct all business from the greenhouses.

After twenty-five years of business at Oberlin, O., V. E. Rice has retired. Ill health and a desire to "see America first" was the reason. He will shortly visit his son in the west and perhaps later on make his home there. W. Humm and P. Wainright have taken over Mr. Rice's greenhouses and will conduct them under the name of Humm-Wainright Floral Co. Paul Wainright formerly was with W. Scott, of Lisbon, O. As for William Humm, this is his first venture as a florist, but it looks as though he will make things hum.

How we handle Hybrid Roses for Spring Planting

All our roses are 3-year-old, strong, field-grown

After two or three hard freezings, they are lifted, potted and plunged in cold-frames for the winter. They make good root action all winter and are ready to do business in the spring. They should be shipped in pots. They should now carry safely by freight. We bring in quite a lot for Decoration Day.

THE COAL MARKET.

Since the settlement of the anthracite wage controversy, which occurred about the time the last issue of The Review went to press, the market has been in a more tranquil condition. There is still an abnormal degree of uncertainty about prices, but the tension is relieved. Watchful waiting is now the policy of a large proportion of the buyers.

According to the terms of the new anthracite agreement, which will continue in force for four years, the day workers receive an increase of three per cent in wages, and the contract workers an increase of seven per cent. An 8-hour day also is granted. On the other hand, the miners waived their demands for the check-off and the closed shop. In the new bill of expenses, certain boosts in freight rates must also be included.

For a short period, at least, while the sages among the coal men are estimating the additional cost of operation and transportation, and are deciding as to the wisest way of distributing the increased burden, the present prices are likely to remain unchanged. Then—but prophecy at present is especially hazardous.

It is expected, of course, that the future rise in the cost of anthracite, which is already so high-priced that the name "black diamonds" is no misfit, will result in an enlarged use of bituminous coal, with a consequent upward trend in the price of the latter fuel, in accordance with the law of supply and demand. As yet, however, there are no signs of change in the soft coal market. As to smokeless coal, it is said that some off-grade lots have been sold at prices ranging from $1.10 up, but that the true mine-run smokeless is not sold much below the circular figures, $1.35 f. o. b. the mines and $3.40 f. o. b. MORE ABOUT OIL AS FUEL.

Neither a desire to argue the case, nor to defend my statements concerning the use of oil as fuel, prompts me to answer R. W. Kersey's letter in The Review of April 20, page 78, in which he took issue with my reply to C. F. B. That his letter might easily lead others into difficulties is my chief reason for "talking back."

I challenge Mr. Kersey to point out a single statement made by me that

The Edgar Establishment, Waverley, Mass. Famed for Quality Entire Plant Heated by Kroeschell Boilers

"Regarding the Kroeschell, it is the best we have ever had and satisfactory beyond our expectations. It heats up especially quick and has saved us considerable already in the price of fuel. When we are in need of another boiler, we will give the Kroeschell the first consideration."

(Signed) WM. W. EDGAR CO., Waverley, Mass.

The KROESCHELL has replaced hundreds of cast iron boilers. In every case higher temperatures are secured with the KROESCHELL with the same piping and with less fuel.

The KROESCHELL is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Our boilers were installed to heat 2,304,450 sq. ft. glass in 1914. Florists who have used other makes are constantly giving the KROESCHELL the highest praise.

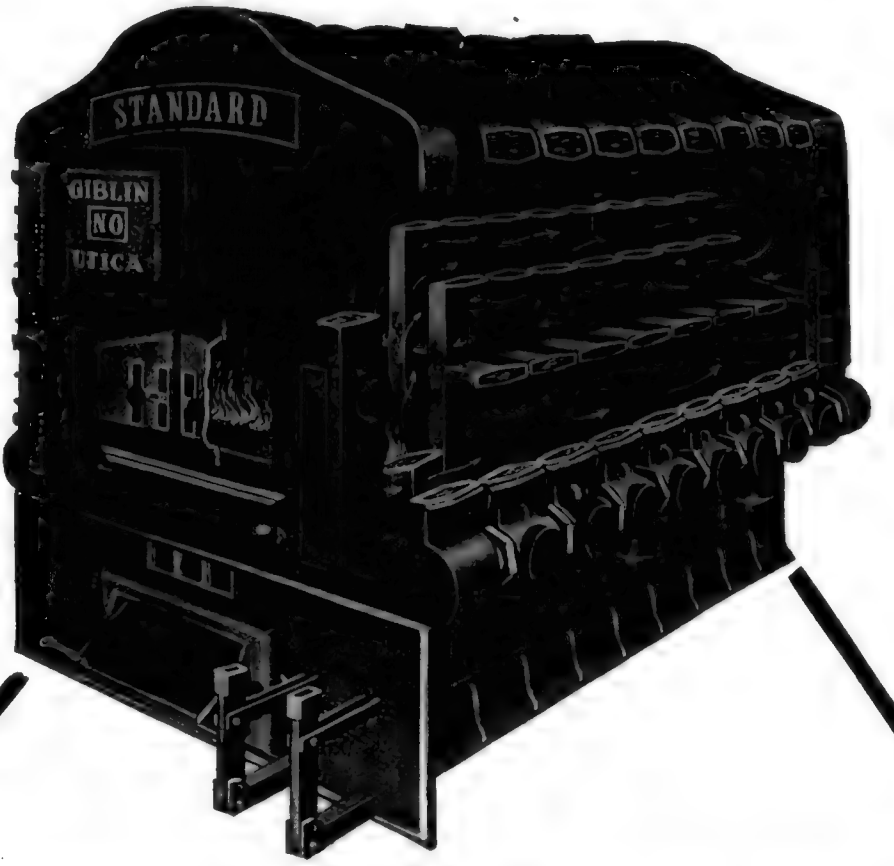
conflicts in any manner with his own experience. It is evident he did not understand me. C. F. B. asked about "fuel oil"; my answer concerned fuel oil only.



Mr. Kersey says he is burning "crude oil." Crude oil may mean anything from a heavy lubricating oil, which could not be burned, to a light oil that would run seventy-five per cent or more kerosene and gasoline. It is undoubtedly this light crude to which he refers. I have two burners in my scrap pile, with either of which he could operate his boiler—provided he has a strong draft—and discard his motor, blower and pump, thereby eliminating three sources of probable trouble. In fact, I had in mind practically the same burner he is using when I mentioned burning distillate, the lowest grade of which is almost as cheap as fuel oil.

Fuel oil, proper, is the residue of any or all crude oil after all the commercial oils have been extracted, and at 40 degrees most of it is about as thick as common axle grease, besides having more or less dirt and fine particles of coke in it. Now, just imagine forcing this stuff through a pinhole at the rate of three quarts per hour!

His statement as to the quantity of oil he burns is indefinite, but if we suppose he means the standard oil barrel of forty-two gallons, then he is heating 6,000 feet of glass in zero weather with less than a gallon of oil per hour, or about the equivalent of twelve pounds of good coal. Perhaps I would understand better if I could see his plant.

I must admit that my meaning might be obscure in the way I used the term "too hot," but by the time Mr. Kersey ruins two or three boilers with his oil fire he will understand exactly. We know well that few, if any, manufacturers would be willing to admit it, but the fact remains that any internally fired boiler, regardless of make,

Giblin Green-house Heaters

SUPPOSE every morning during the cold season you entered your greenhouse, you found a nice, clean, new TWO DOLLAR BILL on the bench, and it was yours to keep,

HOW WOULD YOU FEEL?

The cold season would probably have 150 mornings.
THEN you would have 150 nice TWO DOLLAR BILLS, $300.00.

DO YOU WANT IT? Listen!

Manufacturers of other Greenhouse Boilers admit that $3.50 per day per ten thousand feet of glass heated to 60 degrees in zero weather is a reasonable fuel cost.

WHAT IS YOUR FUEL COST?

WE SAY it ought to be $1.75 per day and can prove that fuel for our boilers costs but this amount.

IF YOU use another boiler and have 11,500 square feet of glass, your cost per day is probably $4.00. Change to our boiler and your cost per day will probably be $2.00, so 150 days gives you the $300.00. Again we say:

DO YOU WANT IT?

WHY the difference? It's in the CONSTRUCTION and draft travel.

Besides, you cut out the NIGHT WATCHMAN and save his WAGES.

DO you want to save $100.00 on the FIRST cost of a boiler or $300.00 EVERY YEAR?

Do you doubt these statements?

Let us tell you the facts, figures, names and places.

size or pattern, is short-lived when oil is used as fuel.

Mr. Kersey could put his oil supply tank six or eight feet higher than his burner, arrange to keep it warm or hot as the oil he used demanded, discard his pump, get a burner of the Billows type—if there is one on the market small enough—attach his blower to the steam pipe of the burner and, possibly, burn fuel oil. At that, his burner would be independent of his boiler and would need the same attention as now. On the other hand, he could install a steam system, connect up his burner, put an electric alarm in his bedroom, connecting it to the steam gauge, to guard against low steam through an accident to the glass or foreign matter in the oil, go to bed and forget he had a fire, as I do. A burner operated with steam from its own boiler is positively self-regulating. Further, he could burn any kind of oil he wished.

I have had some experience with a number of burners under widely different conditions and with many grades of oil, and to the man using a hot water system, under average conditions, I do not hesitate to say, let it alone. To those using steam or able to change from hot water to steam, I would say, by all means burn oil if you can get it, but do not buy any gold bricks in the shape of burners; make your own.

The Market.

Business averaged good last week, considering that it was after-Easter business and that there was a large supply of all kinds of stock. Many weddings and funerals helped to clear everything rapidly. Prices on some items dropped, but in general the quotations have not declined so much as in previous years during the after-holiday period.

Beauties undoubtedly have changed as much as any other item, although the prices have not varied to any extent. The supply of other roses was large, but this has diminished somewhat during the last few days. The demand has been good, Ophelia leading, with Russell, Killarney, Richmond and Sunburst following. Francis Scott Key is in high demand, but the supply as yet is rather small.

Considering the weather, carnations are holding up extraordinarily well in both price and demand. Enchantress shows the effect of the weather somewhat. Sweet peas are as popular as ever and they continue of good quality, the stems still being satisfactory as to length. The demand for Easter lilies is small and the supply easily exceeds the demand. Iris has made its appearance, but the supply is limited. Good daisies sell readily, but the inferior grade is inclined to drag.

Gardenias are sufficient for all needs, but cattleyas are the same as last reported—exceedingly scarce. Of jonquils and daffodils there is a sufficient supply, but the quality is not good. Miscellaneous stock is plentiful and of good quality, including pansies, calendulas, heliotropes, myosotis and mignonette.

Gladioli are becoming plentiful; they sell quickly. Lilacs, either white or purple, have made no impression on the market, and, according to the experts, they will be scarce for the next three or four weeks. Greens of all kinds are sufficient, including adiantum.

Various Notes.

The rose bushes are here again. Every spring W. J. Palmer & Son offer rose bushes in such varieties as Bon Silene, Safrano, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Hadley. There is always a great demand for these, as there is no difficulty in getting nice blooms from these. A. E.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Bright, sunny days helped business considerably last week and trade on the whole was good. There appears to be a good quantity of blooming plants in the market, including some fine rambler roses, laburnums and hydrangeas. These have sold well. Bedding stock is arriving now in good shape, but it was a little too cold for outside work last week. Little has been done with porch boxes thus far.

Judging from the general outlook, cut flowers will be plentiful for Mothers' day; the growers are cutting heavily. There is an abundance of cut flowers on the market that move fairly well, but none too brisky. Large shipments of roses arrive daily. They are in good form and sell well. Radiance, Sunburst, Ward, Mrs. Taft and the Killarneys are among the best sellers. Sweetheart roses and bachelor's buttons are being used for corsage work. American Beauties move nicely, but none too freely. Valley is good and moves well. Sweet peas are of excellent quality and have good, long stems. They are plentiful, but sell well.

Forced bulbous stock is steadily slackening in supply, but some good outdoor jonquils, narcissi and daffodils are arriving and selling easily. Orchids and gardenias do not move extra fast. Carnations are plentiful and good, but they do not bring large returns. Easter lilies are of good quality and are used freely for funeral work, of which there was a large quantity last week.

Various Notes.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor last week. He says business is more than good.

J. B. Keller Sons had a pretty window display last week, consisting of laburnum trees in full bloom, arranged in groups, with baskets of roses and jonquils in the foreground.

The Lord & Burnham Co. at its local office reports good business during the last month. The men are working on several good-sized contracts.

The Rochester Floral Co. had an attractive window of carnations last week. A special sale was held of these at 40 cents per dozen.

W. Gallentyne, of Greece, N. Y., is cutting some good stock these days. He is bringing a good quantity into the market and is doing a lively business at home.

Schuyler Arnold, of Spencerport, N. Y., is advertising extensively his "Aster Plants by Parcel Post." He is offering some of the best varieties, put up in differently priced collections. Undoubtedly the public will take advantage of the novel and practical way they are offered.

Frank McLuis, who operated a part of the Unique Candy Store, will open a flower store in a few days between Water and St. Paul streets. He has done a large business at the former place and finds he needs more room.

Harry Brush, of North Clinton street, reports a satisfactory spring business. He was on the jump last week with funeral work.

A. W. Gilman reports a heavy seed business this spring and some of his own strains have been in extra demand.

A METROPOLITAN PROMISE IS AS GOOD AS A BOND

Promises, even though made with the best intentions, are usually very uncertain, unless the source of the promise is backed up by a firmly established reputation for reliability and dependability.

Everything should be incorporated in the contract. We seldom make a promise, but, when we do, our reputation proves conclusively that its fulfillment can always be depended upon.

The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, at New Brunswick, N. J., placed their greenhouse building operations with us, and the following is what Dr. J. G. Lipman, the director, wrote after it was completed:

"In so far as I know, the work done by you was eminently satisfactory, and I trust that we shall have occasion in the future to request your company to bid on other work."

Make Customers Successful with Your Plants —

Your customers buy potted plants. Often they wither and die and you are blamed for the failure. It's simply because plant food is lacking. Your customers don't want fertilizers with offensive odors. They need Odorless Fertilo that does not mar the fragrance of the flowers. Just the material for Lawns, Flowers, Shrubs and Small Gardens. You can sell several cans of Odorless Fertilo to each customer who buys potted plants and several bags to those with gardens. Make them more successful and they will become flower enthusiasts.

FERTILO is nature's pure plant food and combines all the essential elements required by plant life: Ammonia, Phosphoric Acid, Bone, Phosphate of Lime and Potash. Makes the necessary Humus for enriching the soil and is also an excellent Insecticide.

FERTILO is odorless, will not get hard and lumpy. Put up in handy containers in 1 and 5-lb. sizes, and in 10 and 80-lb. bags. The 1-lb. package will fertilize 10 gallons of earth for potted plants or 50 sq. ft. of surface. Retails for 25c. Full and simple directions printed on each package.

Florists, truckers and landscape gardeners recommend Odorless Fertilo.

Send us 6c in stamps to cover postage and we will send you free sample of the 1-lb. package, together with full particulars, and quote you our liberal terms to florists.

F. W. WAITE, Manufacturer, 85 Belmont Ave., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held May 2 in the park commissioners' office, City hall, Holyoke. There was but a small attendance, due to the fact that many were badly hit by the spring fever. L. E. Wilson, of Springfield, was a visitor and spoke entertainingly of the purposes of the Eastern States Agricultural Exposition, which is to open in West Springfield, Mass., in October.

Permanent buildings for the exposition are now in course of erection, and the speaker suggested the possibility of arranging for a big flower show there at some future date. There was but one exhibit, an exceptionally fine plant of Hydrangea Otaksa in a 9-inch pot, grown and exhibited by George Strugnell, who was awarded a certificate of merit. Mr. Strugnell has promised to tell how to grow exhibition hydrangeas.

H. E. D.

Pontiac, Ill.—"Our Easter business was a humdinger, the largest ever," says W. J. Miller & Son in speaking of last week's trade. "Everything cleared nicely. We sold more Easter lilies this year than any previous year, but potted plants were slow, compared with their sale during former years."

North Bergen, N. J.—Mrs. Olga Schmidt, wife of Henry Schmidt, the Weehawken florist, died April 18 at her home here, in her thirty-ninth year. She was a well known vocalist and appeared in concerts in New York and many New Jersey cities. Mr. Schmidt and two children survive.

South Bethlehem, Pa.—Francois A. Morse, formerly associated with the H. F. Michell Co., at Andalusia, and now employed here, was one of the guides of the bureau of information at the Philadelphia National Flower Show. Mr. Morse was detailed to conduct the classes of children from the orphan homes and school for the deaf through the hall, and tells of pathetic incidents that occurred during his discharge of duty.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The growers and landscape gardeners are hustled with outdoor work. Last week was clean-up week and pruning work was plentiful. Funerals and May weddings kept the store people moving. The sales of pansies, daisies and bedding stock have been brisk. There is a plentiful supply of everything in cut flowers and, as usual, prices are sagging gradually.

Various Notes.

C. W. Morey, proprietor of the Woonsocket Hill Nurseries, reports an unusually heavy demand for evergreens and California privet.

M. J. Leach & Sons, of Pawtucket, have added a car to their delivery department.

Edward O'Brien, of the T. J. Johnston Co., who has been confined to his home, is reported to be improving.

James Annis, of the Hampden Meadow Greenhouses, has the sympathy of the trade in the death of his wife, Mrs. Ada M. Annis, May 4.

Swan Peterson, of East Providence, has completed a greenhouse 25x100.

Albert Holscher is emptying several houses of sweet peas at his range on Hartford avenue and putting in tomatoes.

Swanson Bros., of 14 Stanton avenue, are completing a house and intend erecting another at once.

Joseph Koppelman & Co. are making rapid progress in removing their range of greenhouses from Oaklawn to Riverside. Already two houses are under construction at the new site.

Field daffodils in large quantities are being cut by the Hoxsie Nurseries, at Hoxsie station.

The old Longmeadow Gold Club property, consisting of eighty-two acres of land, has been purchased by the Maplehurst Greenhouses, Inc., of Warwick, and will be used as an extension to the range. The property adjoins the two acres previously occupied by the greenhouses. A specialty is made of carnations, pansies and shrubs. W. H. M.

REMEDY FOR CUTWORMS.

When cutworms are found to be abundant, the use of poisoned bait is recommended. This may be prepared as follows: Mix fifty pounds of wheat bran, two pounds of Paris green, and six finely chopped oranges or lemons. Then bring the whole mixture to the consistency of a stiff dough by the addition of a cheap molasses, such as is used in cattle rations, adding water when necessary. Distribute this bait over the infested field in small lumps. In case bran can not be readily obtained, middlings or alfalfa meal may be successfully substituted. During the warmer spring months cutworms do most of their feeding at night and burrow into the soil to the depth of an inch or two during the day, so that the bait will usually be more effective if applied during the late afternoon or early evening hours.

Frequently cutworms migrate to cultivated fields from adjoining grassland, and in such cases the crops can be protected by running a narrow band of the poisoned bait around the edge of the field or along the side nearest the source of infestation.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

["Plant Propagation; Greenhouse and Nursery Practice," by M. G. Kains, professor of horticulture at Pennsylvania State College. Published by the Orange Judd Co., New York. Size, 5½x7½ inches; 342 pages; fully illustrated. Price, bound in cloth, $1.50 net.]

This book will be useful to both nurserymen and florists, but especially to nurserymen. Within the scope of its purpose it is a most excellent work, deserving unstinted praise. And that statement does not imply that the scope of the book is narrow. But every book must have its limitations, such limitations as are imposed by lack of space and by the directness or singleness of the author's aim. If an author has in mind a specific, clearly defined theme or succession of ideas, which he wishes to treat as completely and intelligibly as possible within the bounds of the book's 300 or 400 pages, he should not be blamed for excluding from the discussion anything which would hinder him too greatly in the attainment of his object.

Let it be distinctly understood, then, that if a florist wishes to find a comprehensive, detailed description of the propagation of carnations, or chrysanthemums, or other greenhouse plants, he must look elsewhere than in this volume. If, however, he wants clear enlightenment on the general subject of plant propagation — propagation by seeds, buds, layers, cuttings, grafts or otherwise; if he wants both a practical and scientific explanation of the fundamental principles which underlie all the processes of propagating, then he will obtain what he wants in this book. Moreover, the systematic body of facts gathered from this book will form a good basis for the carnation grower's, or rose grower's, knowledge of his own special plant.

In other words, the light from this book will illuminate the entire subject of propagation, the whole field of operations, guiding the propagator aright and preventing many mistakes which he would be likely to make if groping in the darkness.

The book is written in textbook form, with a textbook's logically progressive development of the subject, and the reader may either peruse it from cover to cover in regular student fashion, or select what he wants from it by means of the indexes or in other ways. However, the book has none of the dry-as-dust abstruseness which is supposed to be the main constituent of many textbooks.

In describing the various methods of propagation, the author usually has found it convenient to apply his remarks to nursery stock rather than to distinctively florists' stock. Hence, as already stated, the book will be especially helpful to nurserymen, forming for them almost a complete working handbook.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

MEMORIAL DAY A MONEY MAKER

With Memorial day little more than five weeks after Easter, and with Mothers' day in the interim, this is a record season for the trade. And of the three special flower days in five weeks, the one yet to come, with many, is the most important, because the most profitable.

THERE are low spots, of course, where Memorial day cuts little figure with florists, but in that part of the country where florists are most numerous May 30 has come to be the big day of the year—the big day because it calls for the use of more flowers than are sold at Christmas or Easter; the big day because it marks the culmination of the bedding season, the season of cemetery work, the season when the florist works from dewy dawn to deepening dusk and does not then get the day's duties done.

Memorial Day's Many Merits.

It will pay every member of the trade to think over the various aspects of the business, the regular business and the special features of each special flower day. Nine chances out of ten a careful consideration will show up places where money is being lost instead of gained, or where opportunities are being neglected. But there's nothing to the disadvantage of Memorial day unless it be that there is too much to do, and even this is more easily got around than at any other day of unusual demand.

Think it over and it will appear to you that Memorial day has many strong claims on each retail florist's regard, but that its best feature undoubtedly is that the profits are greater than they are at any other big day. The reason for this, first, is that stock of one kind or another is plentiful, so that if one flower is higher than ordinary in the markets another can be used instead; and, as an important second consideration, there is the fact that most of the Memorial day sales are to people who take the flowers with them, thus saving much work for the florist and quite a little on the delivery expense.

Then, too, there is that matter of getting ready. Many a man has been putting in spare time for days, making up magnolia wreaths against the expected demand. If he overestimates the quantity he can sell, they will go out for funerals the next few days and there will be no loss, which cannot be said by all of those who overguessed their capacity on Easter plants.

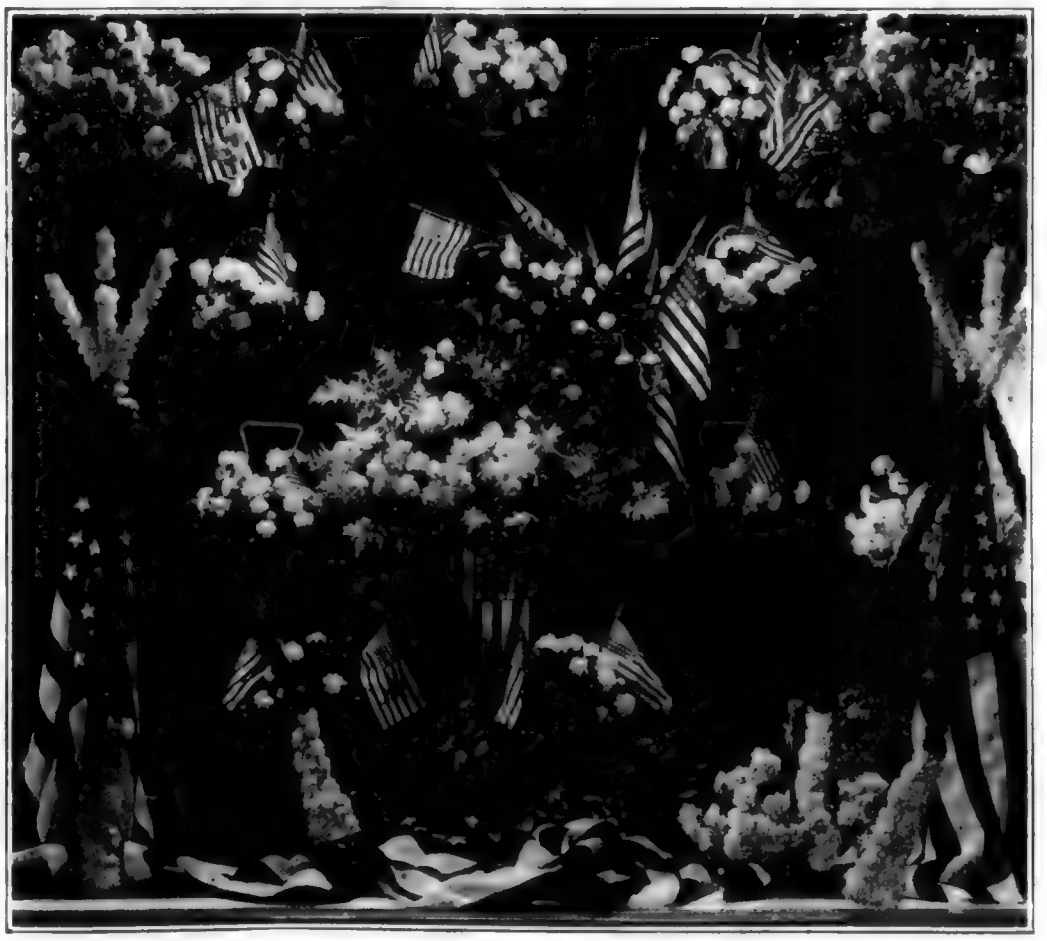
Yes, from every point of view Memorial day is specially worth our attention.

Everybody Interested Now.

Of course the flags and the stacked muskets still are the window symbols of Memorial day, but if anyone looks upon it as principally an old soldiers' observance, why, either one of two things is the matter: Either little attention has been paid to what the public does that day or else the florists in that town have been neglectful of their opportunities.

Memorial day dates back to 1868, when it was established by the G. A. R., but in recent years, as the ranks of the veterans thinned, the general public began to observe the day in the same way, by carrying flowers to the cemeteries. There still are parts of the country to which Memorial day has not yet penetrated, but in nearly all northern cities and towns Memorial day in the cemeteries calls for the same general use of flowers that marks All Saints' day in the cemeteries of the south.

So long as May 30 belonged specially to the old soldiers it did not really count in flower selling, but when the general public began to take hold the trade naturally got a big boost.



Those who delight to argue have had warm discussions over the question whether florists' newspaper advertising created the demand or whether florists began to advertise because the public had discovered it could share the fine sentiment of Memorial day.

But What's the Difference!

We all know that the demand for flowers has grown most rapidly as florists have made known their ability to meet it.

The first thing one runs up against in studying the Memorial day demand is that the public will not stand high prices; people will not buy expensive flowers to leave in the cemeteries. However, the man who is suitably located to be reached by the buyers can sell large quantities of the showier kinds of flowers offered at moderate prices. That's why the peony is so preëminently the flower of the day—it makes a big show for little money.

The greater part of the cut flowers sold at Memorial day go to the cemeteries in the form of large, low-priced bouquets. This is especially true in the country towns and small cities. In the metropolitan stores that cater to a higher class of trade wreaths sell well and there are possibilities in low-priced sprays. One of the curiosities of the trade has been the vogue of the magnolia wreath trimmed with artificial flowers. Nothing can be said in its favor except that certain florists, more particularly in New England, have built up a big business in these, a business now large enough to attract the attention of covetous department stores. There are localities, too, where the demand runs to metal wreaths or wreaths of wax flowers.

It is the business of the florist, first of all, of course, to make a living, by the sale of pots and baskets as well as plants and flowers, but there are many in the trade who never have been able to bring themselves to handle artificial stock.

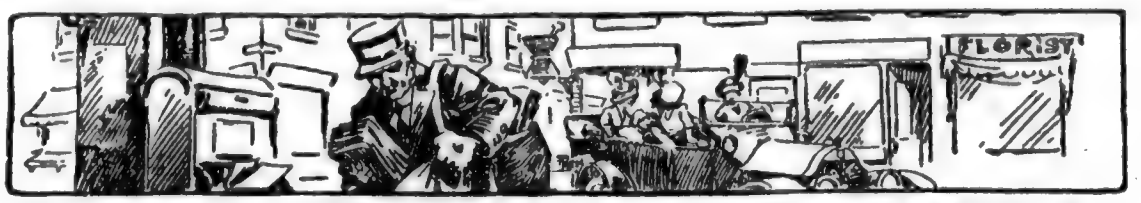
Study; Then Act.

Yes, most decidedly Memorial day is well worth pushing.

So it behooves each of us to study his special field, to note what we have accomplished in other years, and what our competitors have accomplished; to note what others outside our local field are doing with success and to figure out a plan of operations that fits our special needs. It must be a plan, moreover, that covers three distinct phases of the business: Arrangement for stock, a method of apprising the public of the merits and location of the supply, and means for sale and delivery.

While a few florists in a still fewer cities have become large and successful users of newspaper space, nine out of ten still content themselves with laying in a stock and putting a sign in the window—not always the sign. The man who does not advertise should be careful not to overbuy.

Let us resolve now to dress up the window several days before Memorial day. This year May 30 falls on Tuesday, so we should have the decoration in the window by the Thursday before. We must use plenty of flags, if nothing more, suggestive of the day. After that, each one can go as far as he likes.



BEYOND THE PALE.

One Peter Tremulis, who sells flowers in a store at Aurora, Ill., is quoted as follows in a newspaper published in his city:

> Carnations, the Mothers' day flowers, are selling as high as $1 a dozen and they should be selling two dozen for 25 cents.
> Mind you, I will make as much money regardless of the price of the flowers, but I am opposed to charging exorbitant prices. I believe that a person should wear any flower he wishes next Sunday. If his mother is fond of roses, wear a rose, etc.
> The greenhouse people boost the prices of flowers for Easter Sunday and then, with the aid of the special days for wearing flowers, they keep the price up. They hold back thousands of flowers for as long as two weeks. Many of them are rotted when they are sold to the individual.
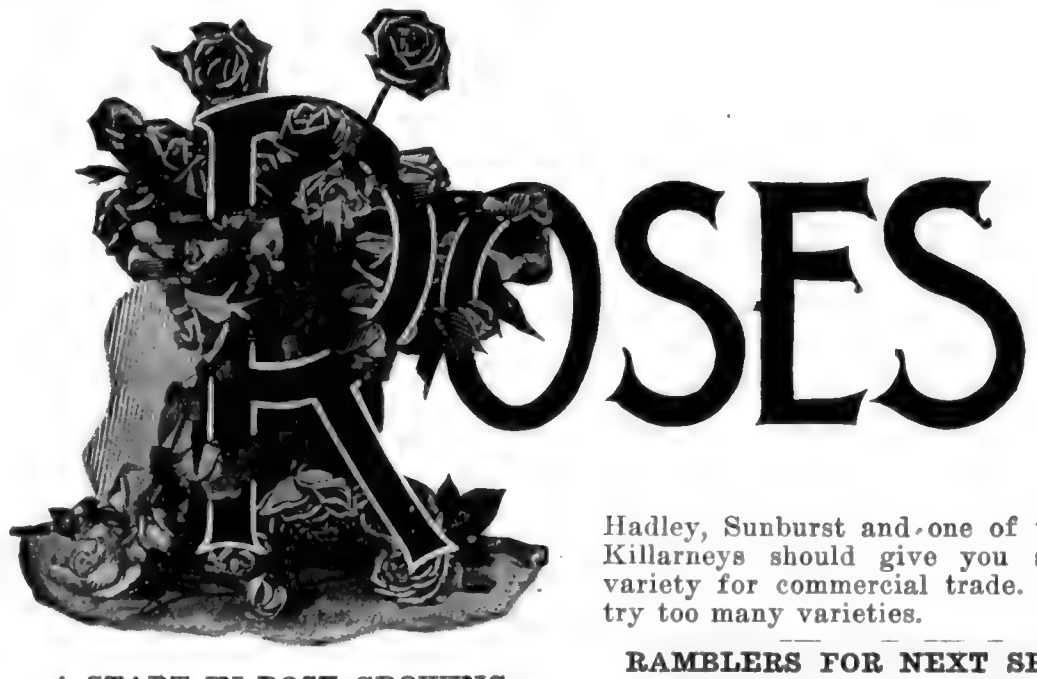
> Let's quit having these special days for wearing flowers unless the prices are reduced.

Of course florists all know what kind of a man it is who says carnations should retail "two dozen for 25 cents," but what are we to think of a person who gives to the public such unwarranted statements concerning the source of his livelihood!

Saginaw, Mich.—During the Easter rush at the Charles Frueh & Sons store, Theodore Ahrens fell three stories in an elevator loaded with plants. The actual falling of the elevator did not appear to cause any injuries to Mr. Ahrens, but a large iron cog wheel followed the drop from the top and struck Mr. Ahrens on the head, crushing his skull. He was taken to the hospital unconscious and an operation was performed to remove the pressure from the brain.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS



PRICE IS NO BAR.

In The Review for May 11 Charles Helm expresses the opinion that $7 per hundred for carnations is in the extreme. Although the wholesale price for Mothers' day did not quite reach that figure, any retail florist, by using good judgment, can easily dispose of from fifteen to twenty times the usual number on this day, besides the same average increase for all other blooms. Our experience at this writing shows, and the writer can vouch for this, our net profit per dozen was as great—yes, greater than on any dozen throughout the year, and we were taking no chances of the disposal of our stock. Mr. Helm probably has not considered that many only wear a single carnation, while few purchase more than they can afford. This day is not used to show who can purchase the most, nor does it resemble a Christmas gift; any trifling expenditure will express one's reverence for his mother and any mother will appreciate a single flower from her loved ones. Our writer must also remember that our better class of buyers are protected and it leaves an opening for the spirit of Mothers' day to enter more homes by having purchases made in smaller quantities. We had several churches purchasing carnations, ranging from fifteen to twenty-six dozen, in our small villages and we have not heard a word as to prices being too high, which shows the sentiment and willingness of the general public.

We carry a policy of one price to all, regardless of quantity purchased. Give your customers quality and they will appreciate it. They may not come as often or may make smaller purchases, but you have a good and regular patronage if you follow this up.

We can assure Mr. Helm that no Sherman law can alter the conditions under which a grower is moving his stock or a retailer is selling it. The Sherman law does not regulate the sunshine, germinate the seeds or pay our fuel bills. Every florist knows we need such days to make up for our dull summer months. Besides, we are not peddlers, forcing our goods on people, but place our goods on the open market for the public's approval.

A START IN ROSE GROWING.

Please tell me how to prepare the soil for roses and when to bench them. I intend to plant a house of assorted varieties of roses for commercial trade, and will use only the best grafted stock. A. L. R.—N. J.

Soil for roses should be prepared the fall previous to planting. It should consist of fibrous loam and cow manure, one part of the latter to three parts of the former, and if it can be turned over and well mixed once or twice before using, all the better.

You can plant roses in May, June and July. I would suggest June if your beds or benches are ready. You can get plants in either 2½-inch or 4-inch pots. As a general rule grafted plants, worked on Manetti, are superior to own-root stock. Such varieties as Ophelia, Double White Killarney, Hadley, Sunburst and one of the pink Killarneys should give you sufficient variety for commercial trade. Do not try too many varieties. C. W.

RAMBLERS FOR NEXT SPRING.

Which are the best varieties of baby rambler, or dwarf polyantha, roses, in white, pink and red? Can they be forced in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees? Would it be proper to plant young stock in the field now for potting in the fall, and would you advise cutting back the young stock when planting it in the field? A. L.—Mo.

Good varieties of polyantha, or baby rambler, roses are: Mrs. W. H. Cutbush, cerise-pink; Mme. Levavasseur, or Baby Dorothy, clear pink; Orleans, cherry red; Erna Teschendorff, deep crimson, a splendid sort; Orleans, deep pink.

These roses will force well in a night temperature of 50 degrees, but to have them flowering for Easter, which comes early, they would need a little more heat. For Memorial day trade 45 to 50 degrees would suit them well. You can purchase young stock and plant them in the field now to pot up in the fall. C. W.

POOR DRAINAGE RESPONSIBLE.

Last July I transferred some rose plants to concrete benches. Now the plants seem to be somewhat stunted in growth. The blooms are poor and the stems weak. Do you think this condition can be charged to either underfeeding or overfeeding? When I benched the plants I had the usual compost; one-fourth well rotted manure, three-fourths loam and a good sprinkling of bone meal. Since that time I have given three top-dressings of bone meal. I had some fine flowers this fall, but the plants did not make much growth.

The beds do not seem to dry quickly; the benches appear to be wet all the time. The benches, which are of concrete, have ½-inch holes every twelve or fifteen inches. The drainage is unusually poor. Do you think this can have much bearing on the condition of the plants? Also, is nitrate of soda a good fertilizer. W. G.—Kan.

From your description of the mixture of the compost and fertilizer used, your plants can hardly have suffered from lack of food, especially as they only made a weak growth. Your trouble is more likely to be due to poor drainage. Cement benches have not proven a uniform success for growing roses. While some good roses are grown on concrete benches, it takes greater care to do so. Your drainage is insufficient. There should be at least a ½-inch opening every ten inches across the bench.

Nitrate of soda is a good fertilizer for roses if used intelligently, but a most dangerous one in the hands of a novice. Your plants do not need such a strong fertilizer in the state they are now in. Keep the water off until they get dry, even if it takes four weeks. Then give the plants a thorough watering and syringing, to clean both the soil and foliage. Leave all the growths on the plants until they start to make good, strong growths. Water them only when the soil is dry, and then do it thoroughly. Use liquid manure after the plants have made good growths. Above all, get more drainage in your benches as soon as it can be accomplished. W. J. K.

THE ROSE APHIS.

The rose aphis passes the winter in the egg stage on the stems and dormant buds of the rose bushes, according to A. D. Hopkins, entomologist in the United States Department of Agriculture. The insects hatching from these eggs reach maturity in about fifteen to twenty days, all being wingless. They are pear-shaped and either bright green or pinkish in color. At this stage they begin to produce living young, each individual in course of about twenty days producing fifty to 100 young, which, on maturity, are either winged or wingless and in turn either green or pinkish. Thus the tender growth soon becomes crowded with various sizes, colors and shapes of aphides. Many generations may follow one another, covering every bit of green vegetation on the bush with their bodies, their cast skins, honeydew, and the resulting sooty fungus.

The presence of ants on the rose bushes is an indication that the aphis is present, because the ants collect the honeydew from the aphides and, to a certain extent, protect the aphides from their insect enemies.

Fortunately the rose aphis readily succumbs to artificial methods of control and, with the different styles of spray pumps on the market, there is no excuse for allowing garden roses to suffer from these insects. The best remedy is a forty per cent nicotine extract diluted at the rate of one part to 1,000 to 2,000 parts of water, with fish oil soap or laundry soap added at the rate of one pound to fifty gallons of the spray mixtures. The simplest way to prepare the spray in small quantities and secure satisfactory proportions of the ingredients is to put one teaspoonful of the nicotine sulphate in from one to two gallons of water and then add one-half ounce of laundry soap. One spraying is usually 100 per cent effective, but if the first application has not been thoroughly made, a second one may be necessary.

RAMBLER ROSES ON THE COAST.

The accompanying illustrations serve the proverbial purpose of killing two birds with one stone, because they show looking in and looking out views in the store of Podesta & Baldocchi, 224 Grant street, San Francisco, and the rambler rose plants of Eric James, of Oakland, Cal., who is one of the most successful plantsmen around the bay. Two birds? No, three birds, for the illustrations also serve to show that Tausendschon, Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins are the popular pot varieties on the western edge of the continent the same as in the æsthetic east and the material middlewest.

HOW TO FIGHT THE RED SPIDER

A SCIENTIST'S ADVICE.

[A paper by Parker Thayer Barnes, assistant zoölogist of the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture, read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and begun in The Review for May 11.]

An Old-Time Remedy.

The first thing I learned about red spiders while serving my novitiate in the greenhouse was that as the cold of winter begins to strengthen, making hard firing necessary, with the resulting drier air, the red spider commenced to flourish and so we all believed that an arid condition was congenial to the red spider. I suppose it is in a measure, but it is not absolutely necessary. Last summer was far from being a dry summer, there were no long droughts in it, and yet I found red spiders infesting shade trees in the vicinity of Harrisburg, Pa., to such an extent that the trees had lost their green color and had taken on a grayish or brownish color, which gave them the appearance as if much road dust had settled on the leaves and branches.

We were taught that water was the only remedy. It will wash the spiders off, but do they have time to drown before the water has drained away from the soil where they fell under the plant, and so are they or are they not ready to crawl back on the plant? I do not know. I have not had sufficient time to watch them to find out.

Sulphur Best Exterminator.

Sulphur is the one best bet with which to fight the pest. You can blow it on by means of a blow gun; you can use a lime-sulphur wash such as is used to kill the San Jose scale on the fruit trees, but, of course, much weaker; you can use potassium sulphite, or liver of sulphur, one-half ounce to the gallon of water. This last you all will probably recognize as a standard remedy for mildew of roses.

Instead of blowing the sulphur on, you can spray it on. One pound of sulphur mixed in three gallons of water and just enough soap to make it stick, is a standard remedy on fruit trees as a summer spray, but in the greenhouse I would use it much weaker at first, to make sure of not burning the foliage. Prof. S. T. Maynard reports having successfully killed the red spider in a house of grapes by boiling the sulphur, but this is a rather dangerous and tedious method.

If I were called upon today to fight a case of red spider in a greenhouse or on fruit trees, I would do one of two things. The first thing would be to spray the plants with a flour paste. That sounds like a reckless procedure, but you will find the paste is so thinly spread out that when it dries you cannot see it.

A Government Recipe.

W. B. Parker, of the federal bureau of entomology, invented the flour paste method of fighting red spider while working on the hop problem on the Pacific coast. It is made as follows, and these directions are for use in the open; you should modify them and figure the amounts for use in greenhouse practice:

"Use a cheap grade of flour. Take eight pounds and make the flour into a thin batter by adding a little cold water at a time, until eight gallons of water are used. Mash out all lumps. Cook until a paste is formed, stirring constantly to prevent caking or burning. Cooking slowly until the paste just begins to boil will usually be about right. If the paste is not sufficiently cooked, the resulting spray will not be effective, and if overcooked the paste will harden when thoroughly cool and will not mix with water readily. Add cold water to the paste when done to make 100 gallons of material in the spray tank. Keep it constantly stirred while spraying. Apply thoroughly to both the upper and under surfaces of leaves. Use a nozzle making a coarse spray, and not under 150 pounds pressure, as the driving force is necessary to penetrate the webs and reach the spiders. An extra fine spray will not be effective. This is a contact insecticide and the liquid must actually touch the spider. The materials are cheap; so apply the paste liberally. Watch the plants carefully, and if newly hatched spiders are appearing repeat the spraying in about seven days. No spray will kill the eggs without injurying the vines."

Barrel of Paste Only 7 Cents.

I have used this spray successfully against red spiders on plum trees in the Pittsburgh district and I see no reason why it would not work in greenhouses. It is cheap and effective and will not in any way damage the foliage or flowers. We used Red Dog flour when making our paste. This is a cheap brand of flour that is a favorite food for hogs, and my recollection is that it cost us in actual cash outlay for materials about 7 cents per barrel (fifty gallons), ready to apply to the trees.

We bought some potassium sulphide to try at this time, as this material had been successful in the cotton experiments in the south, but the flour paste was so effective that our experimenting stopped.

The Sulphur Cures.

My one other safe bet would be sulphur, blowing on the dry sulphur; or I would use atomic sulphur. This latter is a paste of finely divided sulphur, manufactured and sold by the Thomson Chemical Co., of Baltimore. I have not used it, because at Harrisburg we have no facilities for experimenting. This material now is used in large quantities as a fungicide on peach trees for the scab and brown rot. In California Prof. W. M. Scott tells me that it is used against the red spider on citrus trees and a great variety of plants with success. Use, when you commence to experiment with this form of sulphur, about one-half to three-fourths of a pound in ten gallons of water and a little soap, say one-fourth of a pound. Dissolve the soap before putting it in the solution. Soap acts both as a spreader and sticker.

I have spoken of lime-sulphur wash. I do not recommend it, because it is violent stuff and there is danger of burning the foliage until more experimental work is done. Prof. R. D. Whitmarsh in a recent bulletin from the Ohio Experiment Station makes the following recommendation with regard to its use on violets: "In twenty-five gallons of water mix one-half pint of Nico-fume and two quarts of concentrated lime-sulphur wash." I have no doubt that it will work like a charm, but at that strength of lime-sulphur I am sure some kinds of stock grown under glass would rebel, for it is strong enough to burn peach foliage in the open.

BUILDING UP OUR SOILS

COMMERCIAL FERTILIZERS.

As Compared with Animal Manures.

Having been furnished with a summary of reports of experiments in the fertilization of soils for roses and carnations grown under glass by a firm engaged in the manufacture of fertilizers, and having been asked by this concern to give my opinion on the subject, I thought that perhaps a general discussion by practical growers in the pages of The Review might be of interest to the readers at large.

The real gist of the reports seems to lay stress upon the efficacy of phosphatic fertilizers for both roses and carnations in increasing production and seems to favor the use of acid phosphate rather than that of bone meal. The reports also seem to favor the use of such commercial fertilizers as acid phosphate, bone meal, dried blood, blood and bone, etc., in preference to stable manures, apparently placing the commercial fertilizers, so called, in competition with stable manures.

The Needs of Different Soils.

While the reports from experimental stations regarding fertilization are of great value to us as growers and in a majority of cases emphasize the fact that every grower, to be successful, must make a study of his soils and the best methods for maintaining constant fertility, is it not true that the reports are often misleading to the average grower? When we consider the great variety of soils in use by florists in different sections of the country, it is apparent that any series of experiments carried on in the fertilization of one type of soil will not always be applicable to other and entirely different types of soil. Again, different methods of growing in identical types of soil will bring about great variations in the results obtained from any given method of feeding.

We know that the mechanical structure and the physical condition of soils in general have practically as great an influence in crop production as has the actual proportion of the three essential elements necessary to plant life—nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium—that a soil may contain. We know that if the sole benefit to be derived from the application of animal manures to the soil were in the minute addition of these three elements, the benefit would be practically nil.

Two Distinct Purposes.

In view of these facts, why should we, as growers, confuse the uses of animal manures, and commercial manures or fertilizers? Why should we consider them in competition with each other at all? We know that by the judicious use of animal manures, even though we do not increase materially the total content of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, we are bound to produce in the soil an improved physical condition, derived from the addition of humus and certain resultant changes in mechanical structure, such as increased friability and water-retaining capacity, and increased availability of the plant food elements contained in the soil.

We know that by the use of the more powerful and more concentrated fertilizers, such as acid phosphate, bone meal, dried blood, etc., we can add to our soils the three essential elements of plant food in larger quantities and more economically than we can with animal manures, but commercial fertilizers will not perform the same work and should not be used with a view toward displacing entirely the use of animal manure. To the successful grower of today both forms of fertilizer are practically indispensable and they do not conflict with each other, but rather should be used in conjunction with each other, performing other separate offices and aiding each other in the maintenance of fertility in the soil.

Acid Phosphate or Bone Meal?

Personally, I do not favor the use of acid phosphate in greenhouse soils rather than good grades of bone meal. While bone meal may be slower in action and, under certain conditions, more dangerous to handle than acid phosphate, I am of the opinion that phosphoric acid added to the soil in the form of bone, phosphate of lime, results in more permanent benefit than can be obtained through the use of acid phosphate and there is less danger of the soil breaking down in midseason.

I am also of the opinion that we underestimate the real value of judicious applications of the carbonates of lime throughout the season. It is not only a most valuable neutralizer and preventer of acidity, but is of great value as an agent in releasing both nitrogen and potash. In certain soils it also prevents, to a great extent, a chemical combination of phosphoric acid with other elements, such as iron and alumina, which would thereby become unavailable to plant life.

Children's Garden, Affording a Suggestion for a Window Decoration.

A Common Cause of Failure.

After years of experience in practical growing and the use of fertilizers of all kinds, as well as calling on the trade in the interests of fertilization, I have found that one of the most potent causes of failure in the use of fertilizers is a habit of underestimating the quantity of water required by plants, particularly roses and carnations, during periods of heavy feeding. Plants that are not in a condition of growth to permit liberal watering are in no condition to accept feeding to any great extent.

Finally, would it not be of inestimable value to growers at large to invite a general discussion among growers regarding these topics? Many of us are confronted with an ever-increasing difficulty in obtaining suitable soils. Therefore the conservation of the soils, and getting the most out of our investment in the way of soils and fertilizers, are matters of utmost importance to all of us.

IDEAS FROM PARK SHOW.

The semiannual shows at Phipps Conservatory, in Schenley park, Pittsburgh, where John W. Jones is foreman, always develop something of interest. Big crowds of Pittsburghers are attracted and one effect is to deter the trade in Pittsburgh from attempting a large show to which an admission must be charged.

In the spring show this year some different ideas were worked out which may be of service to the trade, as they are readily adaptable to use in window decorations. Two views in the conservatories are shown in the accompanying illustrations.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

THE A B C OF CUCUMBERS.

I would like to find out what is the trouble with my cucumbers. I have 650 plants on a bench with bottom heat, in paper dirt bands. Some of the plants are all right, while others rot at the top of the ground and grow spindly. Should the glass over the cucumbers be whitewashed, and what kind of fertilizer would be the best? I keep the temperature at 65 to 70 degrees at night. W. P. B.—Mass.

Use a light loam for your cucumber seeds. A little well decayed and broken manure can be added, but no chemical fertilizer must be used under any consideration, or your seedlings will be ruined. Cucumbers like a good bottom heat to start them and you should use muslin to shade them while small, or a coating of whitening or kerosene and white lead on the glass will answer the same purpose. Water somewhat sparingly at first. Good seed should germinate evenly, provided the temperature, soil and watering are right.

MILDEW ON LETTUCE.

Under separate cover I am sending some lettuce leaves. Something white, like mildew, forms on the under side of the leaves and brown spots appear on the upper side. I noticed this first about two weeks ago. I have picked off all the affected leaves, but this trouble seems to be spreading. I keep the temperature from 45 to 50 degrees at night and am growing the third crop. I take off from two to three inches of soil after each crop and enrich with rotted cow manure. I have used nitrate of soda about once a week, at the rate of one ounce to two gallons of water. I do not water the soil unless it is dry; then I give it a good soaking and leave it until it is dry again. I wash the lettuce several times while it is small. On bright days the temperature goes up to 60 and 70 degrees. I use hot water heat and the return pipes are under the benches. My house is 20x48 feet, has three feet of glass on the sides and is twelve feet to the ridge. I fumigate with nicotine papers once or twice a week, using four papers to the house. I ran out of lettuce plants early in the fall and bought 1,000 more. Do you think this may be the cause of the trouble? I grew good lettuce with this treatment in 1915, except that I used no nitrate of soda. My house is now filled with lettuce and it all seems to be affected. Please tell me the cause of this trouble.

E. H. W.—Neb.

Your plants are attacked by mildew and, if it has spread all over your house, I am afraid the crop will be practically a failure. Mildew is usually caused by cold drafts. Once it makes its appearance measures must be taken to check it. The remedial measure is usually sulphur dropped on one of the heating pipes or painted on same. Flowers of sulphur can be blown through a powder bellows on the affected plants. The atmosphere should be kept dry, and sharp fluctuations in temperature carefully avoided. A night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees is all right, with a rise to 56 or 58 degrees on dull days and 10 degrees higher on bright days. Be sure to give and reduce ventilation gradually. If you allow your house to become quite warm and then rush on a lot of air you are courting mildew.

Nitrate of soda I do not consider a necessary or safe fertilizer for lettuce. It makes the plants soft, and such fall an easier prey to mildew and leaf-burn. While cow manure answers well, I have found that partly decayed stable manure makes a more satisfactory manure for lettuce under glass, working it well into the soil. C. W.

Rose Display of the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, at the Boston Show.

Superior, Wis.—In a lawsuit last month William Berg charged that T. J. Tjenswold was violating an agreement made between them when Mr. Tjenswold sold his business to the plaintiff last December. According to the alleged agreement, Mr. Tjenswold was not to engage in the florists' business in Superior for two years. Shortly after the sale Mr. Tjenswold became manager of a rival flower store. Hence the action.

BOSTON'S MAY SHOW.

Show Too Late; Trade Too Busy.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in courtesy to the managers of the Philadelphia National Flower Show, this year held a much reduced spring exhibition and scheduled a larger one for May, somewhat as an experiment. The postponed show was held May 10 to 14, at Horticultural hall. While the show was a large and attractive one, it failed to come up to expectations. The time selected was most unfortunate. Commercial men were well cleaned out of plants for Easter and both they and the private gardeners were rushed to the limit to keep abreast of their work, with a shortage of labor all around. Furthermore, in the middle of May, when trees, shrubs, bulbs and rock plants are blooming in profusion outdoors, the general public cannot be blamed for preferring the open-air displays. Boston, after this experiment, hereafter is unlikely to postpone its regular spring show.

In some classes there was no competition; in fact, several should never have been included in the schedule. Early May is no time to have classes for achimenes, Campanula pyramidalis, gloxinias or amaryllis. The walls in the main exhibition hall have just been painted a grayish color. This is better than the previous horrible brick coloring and it appears well under artificial light, but is mildewy and sepulchral under natural light.

The Exhibitors Who Won.

Some of the leading classes and the winners follow:

Eight antirrhinums—W. C. Rust, gardener to Mrs. C. G. Weld, first, with Weld Pink.

Azalea Indica, group covering 200 square feet—A. M. Davenport, first.

Four azaleas—A. M. Davenport, first; Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, second.

Calceolaria hybrida, eight plants—William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first; Alex. McKay, gardener to E. A. Clark, second.

Calceolaria Stewarti, six plants—Daniel Whyte, gardener to Winthrop Ames, first; Henry Stewart, second.

Campanula Medium, eight plants—Henry Stewart, first.

Ericas, six plants—Henry Stewart, first.

Tree fern, specimen—Duncan Finlayson, gardener of Weld Garden, first; A. M. Davenport, second.

Fuchsias, four plants—S. J. Goddard, first.

Heliotropes, standards—W. N. Craig, of Faulkner Farm, first; W. W. Edgar Co., second.

Hydrangeas, group covering 150 square feet—W. W. Edgar Co., first; Alex. McKay, second.

Hydrangeas, four plants—W. W. Edgar Co., first; W. T. Walke, second.

Marguerites, six plants—W. N. Craig, first; F. W. Fletcher Co., second.

Orchids, group covering 200 square feet—F. J. Dolansky, first, winning gold medal and $200. Cattleyas, Dendrobium thyrsiflorum, phalænopsis and miltonias, mostly were used in this exhibit.

Orchids, six varieties—J. T. Butterworth, first.

Palms, two arecas—Duncan Finlayson, first.

Palms, two kentias—Duncan Finlayson, first; William Thatcher, second.

Two palms, Phœnix Rœbelenii—Duncan Finlayson, first; E. H. Wetterlow, gardener to Mrs. Lester Leland, second.

Palms, two of any other variety—Duncan Finlayson, first.

Pelargoniums, show, twelve plants—W. C. Rust, first.

Other Displays of Merit.

Among the miscellaneous displays W. C. Rust had some nice hanging baskets of fuchsias. Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, had an excellent group of foliage and flowering plants, such as gloriosas, amaryllis, hydrangeas, lilies, etc. Charles Sander received a first-class certificate for a well flowered Cyrtopodium punctatum. He also showed standard wistarias and a fine group of imantophyllums. For a group of hybrid azaleas, crosses between amœna and Hinodegiri, he received a gold medal, and for a batch of Rehmannia angulata Pink Perfection and a fine pink seedling rhododendron he received honorable mention.

The Blue Hill Nurseries received a silver medal for a collection of 100 varieties of hardy evergreens, the finest lot ever staged here. Esty Bros. had ranunculi and ixias. Donald McKenzie, William Thatcher, W. N. Craig and others had hydrangeas. Thomas Roland received a silver medal for bougainvilleas, beautifully flowered. The Albert Roper estate, for the new deep pink carnation, Albert Roper, received a silver medal. This is undoubtedly the finest and freest deep pink carnation yet introduced. S. J. Goddard received a certificate of merit for his crimson seedling, Doris.

Only One Retailer Comes Out!

Pierce Bros. received honorable mention for their rose, Tip-Top, and similar awards went to T. D. Hatfield for Læliocattleya Waban; to F. W. Fletcher & Co. for Delphinium Cliveden Beauty; to E. H. Wetterlow for Geranium Mrs. Lester Leland. T. D. Hatfield showed some large Acacia armata. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. furnished an attractive garden arrangement. James Wheeler received a silver medal for superior culture of yellow marguerite, Etoile d'Or. Alex. McKay had fine plants of Astilbe Philadelphia and Henry Stewart had large specimens of Dendrobium nobile and Oncidium flexuosum.

Thomas T. Watt had standard hydrangeas, azaleas and Medinilla magnifica. J. L. Smith, gardener to A. W. Preston, received a silver medal for Brassocattleya Maronæ. The Julius Roehrs Co. contributed a group of orchids. Penn the Florist was the only retailer to make a display. He was awarded a silver medal for the best and most pleasing display yet arranged here by any retailer. His display attracted much attention and other retailers should wake up and advertise themselves in a similar way.

Walter Hunnewell received a silver medal for a beautiful group of yellow rhododendrons, or Azalea Sinensis.

H. R. Comley on the closing day put in a nice table of exhibits. Frank Edgar had a large group of specimen hydrangeas.

There was a large attendance at the show, but not equal to what Boston usually sees at its earlier spring shows.

PROPAGATING GENISTAS.

How shall I take rooted cuttings from genistas, and how are they started? H. A. M.—Minn.

Genistas are easily propagated, winter being the best time for this work. Rub off small side shoots with heels, such as, in many cases, will not bloom. Insert them in a clear, sharp sand in a cool propagating house, with a bottom heat of 60 to 65 degrees. The cuttings should be watered lightly once a day until they are rooted. Then decrease the supply. Lift and pot the cuttings in small-sized pots. Propagation is less satisfactory when warm weather has set in, but is quite easy from October to March. C. W.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

THE A B C OF CUCUMBERS.

I would like to find out what is the trouble with my cucumbers. I have 650 plants on a bench with bottom heat, in paper dirt bands. Some of the plants are all right, while others rot at the top of the ground and grow spindly. Should the glass over the cucumbers be whitewashed, and what kind of fertilizer would be the best? I keep the temperature at 65 to 70 degrees at night. W. P. B.—Mass.

Use a light loam for your cucumber seeds. A little well decayed and broken manure can be added, but no chemical fertilizer must be used under any consideration, or your seedlings will be ruined. Cucumbers like a good bottom heat to start them and you should use muslin to shade them while small, or a coating of whitening or kerosene and white lead on the glass will answer the same purpose. Water somewhat sparingly at first. Good seed should germinate evenly, provided the temperature, soil and watering are right.

MILDEW ON LETTUCE.

Under separate cover I am sending some lettuce leaves. Something white, like mildew, forms on the under side of the leaves and brown spots appear on the upper side. I noticed this first about two weeks ago. I have picked off all the affected leaves, but this trouble seems to be spreading. I keep the temperature from 45 to 50 degrees at night and am growing the third crop. I take off from two to three inches of soil after each crop and enrich with rotted cow manure. I have used nitrate of soda about once a week, at the rate of one ounce to two gallons of water. I do not water the soil unless it is dry; then I give it a good soaking and leave it until it is dry again. I wash the lettuce several times while it is small. On bright days the temperature goes up to 60 and 70 degrees. I use hot water heat and the return pipes are under the benches. My house is 20x48 feet, has three feet of glass on the sides and is twelve feet to the ridge. I fumigate with nicotine papers once or twice a week, using four papers to the house. I ran out of lettuce plants early in the fall and bought 1,000 more. Do you think this may be the cause of the trouble? I grew good lettuce with this treatment in 1915, except that I used no nitrate of soda. My house is now filled with lettuce and it all seems to be affected. Please tell me the cause of this trouble.

E. H. W.—Neb.

Your plants are attacked by mildew and, if it has spread all over your house, I am afraid the crop will be practically a failure. Mildew is usually caused by cold drafts. Once it makes its appearance measures must be taken to check it. The remedial measure is usually sulphur dropped on one of the heating pipes or painted on same. Flowers of sulphur can be blown through a powder bellows on the affected plants. The atmosphere should be kept dry, and sharp fluctuations in temperature carefully avoided. A night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees is all right, with a rise to 56 or 58 degrees on dull days and 10 degrees higher on bright days. Be sure to give and reduce ventilation gradually. If you allow your house to become quite warm and then rush on a lot of air you are courting mildew.

Nitrate of soda I do not consider a necessary or safe fertilizer for lettuce. It makes the plants soft, and such fall an easier prey to mildew and leaf-burn. While cow manure answers well, I have found that partly decayed stable manure makes a more satisfactory manure for lettuce under glass, working it well into the soil. C. W.

Superior, Wis.—In a lawsuit last month William Berg charged that T. J. Tjenswold was violating an agreement made between them when Mr. Tjenswold sold his business to the plaintiff last December. According to the alleged agreement, Mr. Tjenswold was not to engage in the florists' business in Superior for two years. Shortly after the sale Mr. Tjenswold became manager of a rival flower store. Hence the action.

BOSTON'S MAY SHOW.

Show Too Late; Trade Too Busy.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in courtesy to the managers of the Philadelphia National Flower Show, this year held a much reduced spring exhibition and scheduled a larger one for May, somewhat as an experiment. The postponed show was held May 10 to 14, at Horticultural hall. While the show was a large and attractive one, it failed to come up to expectations. The time selected was most unfortunate. Commercial men were well cleaned out of plants for Easter and both they and the private gardeners were rushed to the limit to keep abreast of their work, with a shortage of labor all around. Furthermore, in the middle of May, when trees, shrubs, bulbs and rock plants are blooming in profusion outdoors, the general public cannot be blamed for preferring the open-air displays. Boston, after this experiment, hereafter is unlikely to postpone its regular spring show.

In some classes there was no competition; in fact, several should never have been included in the schedule. Early May is no time to have classes for achimenes, Campanula pyramidalis, gloxinias or amaryllis. The walls in the main exhibition hall have just been painted a grayish color. This is better than the previous horrible brick coloring and it appears well under artificial light, but is mildewy and sepulchral under natural light.

The Exhibitors Who Won.

Some of the leading classes and the winners follow:

Eight antirrhinums—W. C. Rust, gardener to Mrs. C. G. Weld, first, with Weld Pink.

Azalea Indica, group covering 200 square feet—A. M. Davenport, first.

Four azaleas—A. M. Davenport, first; Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, second.

Calceolaria hybrida, eight plants—William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first; Alex. McKay, gardener to E. A. Clark, second.

Calceolaria Stewarti, six plants—Daniel Whyte, gardener to Winthrop Ames, first; Henry Stewart, second.

Campanula Medium, eight plants—Henry Stewart, first.

Ericas, six plants—Henry Stewart, first.

Tree fern, specimen—Duncan Finlayson, gardener of Weld Garden, first; A. M. Davenport, second.

Fuchsias, four plants—S. J. Goddard, first.

HATCHER'S WORK ON YARRAWA.

Winter Types in Australia.

In far-away Australia there is a man who is to the sweet pea world what Thomas W. Pockett is to the chrysanthemum. He is William H. Hatcher. Writing for a Sydney paper, he says of his recent breeding work:

"One glance at Yarrawa was enough. I scrapped the whole of my summer peas for good and all. The lot went straight on the rubbish heap. I have never regretted that vandalism.

"Arthur Yates claims, and rightly, to be the first to cross Yarrawa. He had it two years before allowing us ordinary mortals to see it. I quickly recognized its possibilities and classed it a true Spencer. In fact, it is Countess Spencer itself, as far as I can judge, sported early for the benefit of Australians in particular and the world in general.

"It is true that we had some early-flowering sweet peas before this; but while good in color, earliness and freedom of growth as well as perfume, they lacked size and form. Only a few were of the open type, the great majority being badly hooded. Having a few such growing about the place, I crossed them with the first flowers on my Yarrawa. I was afraid an accident might deprive me of the most magnificent thing I had seen to date. Every pod so crossed set and filled with good seed. I saved everything, and I rowed them out next year, taking care to sow each pod of seed separately.

Fine Blues Not Fixable.

"The result delighted me. One cross made with the Marquis gave me six plants, displaying the finest shade of blue I had ever seen in sweet peas. Allied to the color was the perfect Spencer form, with large flowers and long stems, and that without any show cultivation.

"Saving the whole lot, keeping each color by itself, I harvested about 1,000 seeds of the blues and sowed them all, with great expectations of raising a huge crop of the best winter-flowering varieties in existence. Alas! how green I was in those days! Things are not quite so simple. They bloomed surely, but instead of having a crop, as I expected, repeating the colors of the seed I sowed, with only one exception I never saw those first flowers again. The thousand plants from the Marquis and Yarrawa cross gave me every color except white and cream. These I got by another cross with Earliest of All. I had at least thirty or forty shades and colors, besides numerous flakes and picotees. The only color to reproduce itself from the first year was the blue, but of course mixed as I have shown with innumerable others.

"Besides colors, the forms were also varied, ranging from the old hooded type through the open to the Spencer type. Here was another dilemma. Providence has a knack of coming to our aid in such moments.

"Knowing nothing of fixing peas and less of the laws of heredity governing such matters, I well remember, while pondering over the matter, picking up one of the daily papers and reading an article on the subject, being referred to books on the subject which were procurable in Sydney. You can well imagine that I lost no time in making an extended study of this subject, which I still continue, and a most intricate one it has proved. So much light was shed on the question that I was enabled to proceed with confidence, knowing what I was about and not groping in the dark after the unobtainable.

Many Good Novelties.

"I succeeded in fixing from the progeny of the Marquis cross, several reds, red flakes, purples and pinks, but the original blue I could not fix. Every time I sow it, and I have tried thirty or forty different plants, it breaks into its original color and a proportion of blue flakes and a purple-violet of the old type. I am still trying and hope for success, especially as I have reproduced it from another distinct cross.

"Some of these on fixation, although of the same color, were better than others, carrying stiffer and longer stems, larger flowers, more upright standards. I dislike the overcurled and waved ones. In some cases only trivial differences were in evidence, but there was quite enough to place one ahead of the others. Those were saved and the others discarded.

"Exactly the same routine was gone through with all my crosses and then the intercrossing of fixed varieties of my own raising, and also of the best of other raisers, was begun. Here lies the greatest hope of advance in the future.

What He Is Working to Obtain.

"There seems to be great diversity of opinion among horticulturists as to the best type of Spencer peas, or even as to the correct type. All sorts and conditions of sweet peas are sold as such, ranging from the enlarged grandiflora with flat standard, to varieties in which the standards are so distorted backwards as to almost touch. Both types, to my mind, are wrong; the first because it has not the grace, the lightness and daintiness of the waved variety, the second because it exaggerates. No one wants to turn a flower sideways to see it and then only have half of it visible. It loses greatly in size and form when bunched and can never give the same artistic effect as the true form.

"To me the ideal lies midway between these. The standard or back should be upright, as it is in the grandiflora type, but it must be waved and curled gracefully, with great width; the wings or inner petals should be waved in such a way that they do not open to show the keel. The keel is the seed pod. This fault is common in some of our best summer Spencers.

"Looking at a bunch of such, one is struck by something incongruous, indefinite, which one hesitates to name and yet knows to exist. Closely scrutinized, you will find that the fault lies in the open keel. Their color underneath is of quite a different shade, and does not harmonize with the rest of the flower. The keel coloring is generally a dirty creamy-white, which detracts from the whole and is the reverse of pleasing.

"I am quite aware that few varieties exist combining all the good factors as set out above. Still that is no reason why they should not. Time and work will bring those we seek. All God's mills grind slowly."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hardy Perennial Seeds.

Probably you have a few frames unoccupied now. If so, you can use them to good advantage by sowing seeds of hardy perennials in them. If they are started now, you will have nice field stock of nearly all sorts before fall, and some of them will flower. If your trade calls for any considerable number of these hardy plants, it will be money well invested to sow liberal batches of the delphiniums, aquilegias, lychnis, poppies, especially the oriental types; campanulas, Shasta daisies and other popular varieties.

Perhaps some of your customers have got a touch of the rock garden fever, which is spreading fast, especially in the eastern states. A few easily raised and cultivated varieties for this purpose are the following: Viola cornuta, arabis, aubrietias, primulas, alyssums, sedums, Phlox subulata, Iceland poppies, Dianthus plumarius, dwarf varieties of campanulas, linums, linarias, armerias and ajugas. This is only a partial list, but it will be better not to start with too many varieties.

Stevias.

Have you a sufficient quantity of San Jacinto Battle Ground, Where the S. A. F. Outing Will be Held at the Close of the Houston Convention.

stevias propagated? If not, there still is time to put in a batch of cuttings. These plants are indispensable to the small country florist and; as they can be had over a long season, a generous batch should be grown. Stevias may be grown in pots through the summer, or planted out. While the plants in the open ground will attain a large size, there is always a probability of their getting more or less broken and damaged at potting time. For that reason, pot culture through the summer has some decided advantages.

Show Pelargoniums.

Show pelargoniums are now coming into flower nicely, and during the next six or eight weeks will make a splendid show. Be sure to give them a fumigation once in ten days, to keep them free from aphis. They need a cool, airy greenhouse, from which the direct rays of the sun can be excluded. This is not the time to propagate show pelargoniums. Wait until the flower season has passed and the plants have had a little rest; then you will get good cuttings in abundance.

Hunnemannias.

Of the various annuals grown for cutting, the hunnemannias, or Mexican poppies, are among the best. The seed can be sown outdoors any time during May. Sow rather thinly and in an open, sunny spot. The plants grow slowly at first, but assert themselves as hot weather comes along. They bloom late in the fall and do not mind a temperature a few degrees below freezing. They are splendid for cutting and the flowers remain fresh several days in water. The flowers are of a rich buttercup yellow color and the foliage is feathery and glaucous. The flowers resemble those of the eschscholtzia; hence the common name, bush eschscholtzia.

Fancy-Leaved Caladiums.

In repotting fancy-leaved caladiums use a somewhat lumpy compost containing equal parts of fibrous loam and peat, adding some partly decayed leaves, old cow manure and sharp sand. Of course the plants will grow well in pure loam, but with us they do better in the compost given. They will grow in an ordinary greenhouse once we get really settled warm weather, but as yet they do best where it is somewhat warm and close. Do not shade them heavily, or the leaves will lack substance. When well rooted, feed them with liquid manure. These beautiful caladiums are not of much value for bedding out north of Philadelphia, but they are splendid for house decoration and succeed well on piazzas that are not too exposed and too wind-swept.

Achimenes.

While achimenes are not seen much nowadays and there are only a limited number of commercial plants, they are useful summer-blooming plants, good alike in pots, pans or baskets. In baskets they are seen at their best and make a really beautiful show, not unlike well flowered baskets of petunias in the distance. Like other greenhouse bulbous plants, they will not stand bright sunshine. They succeed well in the average greenhouse and make salable plants. The stems should be staked in pots or pans. The stakes should be thin and, if painted green, will never be seen once the shoots have overtopped them. Try achimenes as basket plants on sheltered piazzas and you will be agreeably surprised at the long season of bloom.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Houston Convention Garden.

Superintendent C. L. Brock of the convention garden now being installed on city property at Houston reports that the exhibits received so far are small in number. Intending exhibitors are requested to send their exhibits at once, as the convention dates are rapidly approaching.

The liberal treatment accorded our society by the city of Houston, in setting apart a splendid site for the garden, and arranging to take upon itself the burden of furnishing labor and material in order to make the installation a success, deserves more than the scanty recognition at present forthcoming.

All who can exhibit plants and shrubs are urged to do so. The cost, 10 cents per square foot, is ridiculously small—insufficient to prevent anyone from exhibiting on the ground of expense. In making an exhibit there surely is some pleasure to be found in aiding the society to carry out its plans to have a convention garden wherever the annual convention may go.

Superintendent Brock would be pleased even if only fifty exhibitors would take 100 square feet each. He points out that, although the date is late, potted stock can be plunged and a creditable showing made.

John Young, Sec'y.

HOUSTON IS HUSTLING.

The Houston florists, now that their busy season has passed, are giving their attention to preparations for the August convention of the S. A. F., firm in the belief that a great and lasting benefit is to be had from this meeting in the south. There is every reason to suppose this will be the largest gathering of southern florists ever held and that many from the north will take this favorable opportunity for a first southern trip. A trades' display of fair size is assured by the number of concerns that have many good customers in Texas.

R. C. Kerr, vice-president of the S. A. F. and leader of the Houston forces, has begun a campaign of publicity to let the trade know that the convention city affords accommodations second to none and facilities equal to a greater test than by any chance will be put upon them. The Rice hotel, known as one of the best in the country, will be S. A. F. headquarters convention week. It has 600 outside rooms, is three blocks from Convention hall and eight blocks from the Convention Garden in Sam Houston park. The illustration on this page shows San Jacinto battlefield park, on the Houston ship canal, where the S. A. F. outing will be held August 18, an affair that will be unique in trade annals.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Mothers' day certainly caused some excitement in the local market this year. Stock was scarce and great difficulty was experienced in taking care of orders satisfactorily. The supply exceeded that for Easter, omitting, of course, the plant end of the business.

The plant sales, while they showed some increase, are yet in their infancy, but the possibilities are wonderful and this occasion will sometime be one of the biggest days of the year. Some of the florists got together this year and placed advertisements in the different local papers, boosting Mothers' day. From the sales it would seem that the plan was highly successful, and there will in all probability be a permanent fund for advertising, to keep flowers in the minds of the people.

Carnations were scarcer than at Easter time, for, although the cut was larger, the demand more than kept pace with the increased supply. From $6 to $8 per hundred was the price realized on this stock and it was entirely cleaned up. Roses sold exceptionally well, but did not move as freely as carnations. The quality of the roses was better than the carnations and the prices were just as low or lower for short-stemmed stock. Mrs. Russell roses were in abundant supply and sold readily, finding more favor than any other variety in the market. Sweet peas also sold well. The crop was fine and the supply was large. Immense quantities were readily disposed of at satisfactory prices.

This surely has been a gala season for bulbous stock, as it still is with us and selling well, although the quality is steadily deteriorating. Greens sold exceptionally well and the supply, while large, fell short in meeting the big demand. A few orchids were in the market and sold readily at the usual prices.

Wild smilax has had an exceptionally good season this year and the stock has been uniformly good, with a few exceptions.

Easter, Mothers' day and Memorial day, coming so close together this year, have made the greenhouse men go some to get the stock shifted and in shape in time.

Various Notes.

The Shriners' ball, an annual affair of the Masonic order, was given at the Auditorium May 6. The decorations were composed mainly of smilax and palms. The ball, which is always elaborate, called for large numbers of corsages, which kept some of the local florists busy Saturday afternoon.

William Lubliner, 225 Grand avenue, was operated on for appendicitis at a local hospital May 8. Dan Lubliner reports that his brother is in fine shape and will be out in about a week.

L. L. May, of St. Paul, Minn., is in town at the Mount Sinai hospital undergoing treatment. Mr. May has been in poor health for some time and it is to be hoped that these treatments will help him quickly.

C. C. Pollworth went to Fond du Lac, Wis., last week to attend the funeral of Robert Haentze. H. J. S.

The business heretofore conducted under the firm name of J. M. Fox & Son has been incorporated, the stock of which now is owned entirely by the members of the old partnership. The business will be carried on under the corporate name of J. M. Fox & Son.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Various Notes.

Rice Bros. had a busy time with large orders for Mothers' day. They had difficulty in getting enough first-class stock. Carnations sold at $6 to $8 per hundred and roses brought $4 to $8 per hundred.

The daily papers carried a handsome advertisement for the Minneapolis Florists' Club. It represented a young man presenting his mother with a box of flowers.

The Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouses are shipping out large orders of chrysanthemum cuttings. The manager said: "If you have anything to sell, advertise it in The Review and you will get all the customers you want."

The Minneapolis Floral Co. had a record business in work of every description. The staff has been enlarged and an immense stock of plants is being prepared for Decoration day. This concern usually does a fine lot of planting for the trade exhibitors at the state fair.

W. H. Bofferding is making a special offer of gladioli. He had a fine window display of gladioli and cosmos last week and reported an increased business all around.

Max Kaiser has an exceptionally fine lot of rambler roses, hydrangeas and general bedding stock. He is cutting some fine lilies and orchids.

Oscar Carlson is cutting a fine lot of roses and carnations.

Wessling's Greenhouses are looking quite gay with a large stock of potted plants of many kinds.

Hans Rosacker had a good cut of carnations for Mothers' day. His stock is in a fine, healthy condition.

The Eldridge Floral Co. made a special effort for Mothers' day. The store was a mass of fine carnations and roses.

Oscar E. Amundson's taste for decorating runs in baskets. He always uses them in window displays, but the variety and tasteful arrangements of the baskets make the displays unique.

J. Hayden, of the Florist Shop, is pushing the sale of spring stock. He is adapting himself to the requirements of the particular trade. Adaptability means utility; utility of space in quiet times means increased returns.

Mr. Mitchell, proprietor of the Lake Street Florist Shop, does his local advertising through the "movies." A picture of the store was featured for Mothers' day.

R. A. Latham has a fine lot of boxwood and clipped trees. He has on exhibition a good assortment of French hydrangeas.

O. C. Swanson never fails to have his display windows so attractive that passers-by stop and admire. He featured special boxes of carnations for Mothers' day.

Miss H. B. Whitted had a good display May 11. The color scheme was yellow, yellow irises predominating. At the time of writing, Miss Whitted is seriously ill with heart trouble. She had an acute attack May 12, while out in her touring car. The doctors have ordered her to take a twelve months' rest. F. E. B.

London, England.—James Carter & Co. have been making fine displays of that glorious golden daffodil, King Alfred. Their shop windows have had some good flowers lately and the big show the firm put up at the R. H. S. hall attracted a great deal of attention. The bulbs are getting fairly cheap now, and we hear some good orders have been booked for next planting season.

Sydney, Australia.—A recent conference of those in the trade, held to formulate a plan for the protection of mutual interests, resulted in the adoption of low minimum prices for all standard lines of stock and an agreement to destroy such quantities as can not be sold at the specified prices. Apparently the trade is living up to the agreement and cut price offers and auctions have practically ceased.

Yokohama, Japan.—There seems to be a revival of interest in fern balls and shapes, a considerable quantity having been exported this season, especially to England. While balls are sold in greatest number, the odd shapes take well. Monkeys with porcelain faces are a novelty, also elephants with bone tusks, squirrels with bushy tails, and other animal forms. All are filled with Davallia bullata for green.

London, England.—With reference to the recent show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society, American growers will be interested to note that Beacon captured the medal for the best vase in the show, while Pink Sensation beat Philadelphia for one vase of any variety.

London, England.—The U. S. consul general has information that the British Board of Trade proposes shortly to issue rules restricting the importation of a considerable list of articles, among them bulbs, flower roots, plants, trees and shrubs. As England has been a large consumer of Belgian, Dutch, French and Japanese stock, the closing of this market will have an important bearing on the supply from the 1916 crop to be offered in the United States.

Ollioules, France.—The bulb growers are meeting with much difficulty because of labor shortage, but it is expected the crop can be harvested in sufficient quantity to take care of all export orders. The railroad at Marseilles has been nearly monopolized by the military, but if this condition prevails at shipping time it will be possible to team the bulbs to the dock, as was done in a small way in 1915. The Fabre line steamers to New York are sailing quite regularly.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Mothers' Day Business.

Mothers' day now is one of the big days of the florists' business here. That was demonstrated by the huge business done by the florists May 13. The carnation supply became exhausted and lilies, tulips, hyacinths, marguerites and, in fact, everything that could be had, was in great demand. Never before did the public make such an outlay for flowers.

Three of the prominent florists combined and ran a page Mothers' day advertisement in the papers. The returns were wonderful. How badly the public wanted carnations was shown by the experience one florist had. A customer, after trying everywhere to buy carnations, saw a few wilted blooms on this florist's work bench. He immediately wanted to buy them. The florist explained that the flowers were wilted and of no use, adding that he would not sell them. The customer, however, wanted them, and finally suggested that if the carnations were not for sale, could he have them for nothing?

The Annual May Exhibition.

The Worcester County Horticultural Society's spring exhibition, May 11, was declared one of the best the society has had in years. The exhibits, especially the potted plants, were of exceptionally fine quality and the table decorations were particularly artistic in arrangement.

In the center of the hall was a large garden of rambler roses, hydrangeas, pelargoniums, rhododendrons and greenery. The centerpiece was a large palm, exhibited by H. F. A. Lange.

In front of the stage E. W. Breed had a similar garden, and along the sides of the hall were tables of tulips, hyacinths, pansies, roses, carnations, etc.

Mr. Lange had a unique table decoration. In the center was a novel arrangement of Ophelia roses and valley in a high-standing shower bouquet. The corsages and boutonnieres were made of Ophelia roses, and hand-tinted butterflies, held by cupids, were used as place cards.

Lucy M. Coulson's table had Aaron Ward roses in a cut glass basket as a centerpiece, with sprays of adiantum, and bouquets and boutonnieres at each plate. Four candle-holders with golden shades were effectively used.

The awards were:

Cut flowers—H. F. A. Lange, first; A. Jenkins, second.

Round basket—H. F. A. Lange, first; L. C. Midgley, second; Mrs. Percy Forbes, third; Lucy M. Coulson, fourth.

Hyacinths—E. W. Breed, first; Mrs. H. L. White, second.

Tulips—H. F. A. Lange, first; W. D. Ross, second; Mrs. W. E. Sargent, third; Mrs. H. L. White, fourth.

Pansies—E. W. Breed, first; L. C. Midgley, second; L. M. Coulson, third; Mrs. E. Warren, fourth.

Zonale geraniums—H. F. A. Lange, first; W. D. Ross, second; Lucy M. Coulson, third; A. W. Hixon, fourth.

Table decoration—H. F. A. Lange, first; Lucy M. Coulson, second; Mrs. L. C. Midgley, third; Mrs. P. B. Forbes, fourth.

Plant display—H. F. A. Lange, first; E. W. Breed, second; Mrs. H. L. White, third.

Table of wild flowers—Mrs. M. A. Maynard, first.

Various Notes.

H. F. A. Lange cleaned up everything he had for Mothers' day. He had a good window display for the occasion.

Harry Randall was another florist whose Mothers' day business was immense. He advertised the day and received good returns. H. L.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Trade last week was enormous, on account of the Mothers' day demand, which began two days before Sunday, May 14, and continued until 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The general report is that Mothers' day business far exceeded that of last year. Most of the florists state that they were entirely sold out of both white and colored carnations and could have used many more. This was, no doubt, the result of systematic and effective advertising by the local retail florists in the daily newspapers and also the mailing of folders. Not only carnations sold well, but roses also, both white and colored. Prices were good. Carnations were $6 to $8 per hundred. There was an especially good sale of blooming plants, which were delivered Saturday and Sunday, while the cut flower orders were mostly counter trade.

The florists are now turning their attention to Memorial day business, and the growers are busy getting the bedding stock ready. Business in the bedding plant line has been somewhat slow, as the weather has been uncertain and several frosts in exposed places occurred last week, making the public wary of buying too soon. However, the temperature has risen considerably within the last few days. Outdoor bulbous stock is in full bloom and shrubs are flourishing. Stock is rather scarce since the big clean-up for Mothers' day. Roses are more plentiful than carnations, of which there are only a few on the market. Lilies and snapdragons are plentiful. There is a good supply of small flowers in variety. Wedding orders are plentiful and commencement exercises are beginning.

Various Notes.

The Pandell Flower Shop donated the gross proceeds of its counter sales of Friday and Saturday last week to the new open-air school projected by the Anti-tuberculosis League. Considerable publicity was received in the daily papers.

Miss Margaret Vesey is spending several days in Burlington, Ia., where she went as an Indiana council member to attend the convention of King's Daughters. W. J. & M. S. Vesey report a booming business for Mothers' day, with the supply, although large, not nearly equal to the demand in either white or colored carnations. Saturday they refused wholesale orders for thousands of carnations.

Over 2,000 applications have been made in the contest for beautiful back yards, for which a prize of $50 has been offered by Mrs. Josephine Nesbitt, who is conducting a civic beautification campaign.

Mrs. Richard Blossom, of the Flick Floral Co., will be hostess for the May meeting of the Equal Franchise League, May 19, at which Judge Wilson, of Louisville, Ky., will speak on "The Juvenile Court." The Flick Floral Co. reports a record business for Mothers' day. This firm had plenty of white carnations to meet the demand, but was short on red and other colors. The sale of roses and blooming plants was large. Considerable advertising for Mothers' day was done. This firm also had a large business in bouquets for the graduation exercises of the nurses of the Hope hospital, May 9.

R. F.

Savannah, Ga.—A. C. Oelschig & Sons recently rounded out their thirty-fifth year in the business. A. Carl, Carl H. and Albert C. Oelschig are the joint owners.

Montgomery, Ala.—Rosemont Gardens distributed a neatly printed Mothers' day folder embodying a price list of plants as well as cut flowers, and did a record business. The couplet coined by The Review, "For Mothers at home, flowers bright; In Mother's memory, flowers white," served to turn the demand into general channels.

Alvin, Tex.—Conditions have been more than usually favorable this season and, unless for some freak of the weather, the shipments of cape jasmine buds for Memorial day will be the largest that ever have left this center. There are more people growing the stock, and more shippers than ever before. Orders on file are fully up to the best previous records and the indications are that no unusual quantity of stock will be sent to commission houses.

Tucson, Ariz.—Charles E. Morton has closed his store until next fall and with Mrs. Morton will spend the summer in San Francisco.

Corinth, Miss.—The Corinth Floral Co., recently established here, is making extensive improvements. The concern since its organization has built large greenhouses and cold storage buildings, but the rapid increase in business has compelled the expenditure of additional sums for the expansion of the range.

Portsmouth, Va.—W. T. Cotton last week was acquitted by a jury in Hustings court of the charge of violating the Sunday labor law. He had been fined $5 and costs in the police court for having sold flowers Sundays. In the lower court the magistrate decided that flowers do not come under the head of necessities and, for that reason, the sale of flowers Sundays should be prohibited. The florist appealed from this decision and acquittal followed in the higher court.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The condition of the market last week was all that could be expected. There were plenty of cut flowers of all kinds and business was brisk. Mothers' day business was beyond the anticipations for the day and everyone reported an increase. If there had been sunshine instead of rain, the business no doubt would have doubled that of last year. As it was, everyone cleared completely. Pot plants had an unusual call—anything that had a flower sold. Carnations were the leaders and there were not nearly enough of them to meet the demand. Everybody sold out before closing time, the prices ranging from $1 to $2 per dozen.

Roses did not move so quickly as expected. The late buyer bought them hurriedly, as there were no carnations to be had. Sweet peas were slow during the week and there was no great rush for them for Mothers' day sales. Peonies were rather strong last week, but the demand was slower than it should have been.

Gladioli and snapdragons were well cleaned up each day, both being of exceptional quality. Lilies and Spanish irises are a great help in the funeral work.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray reports that his Mothers' day business was an increase over that of last year. He disposed of many plants and filled baskets.

Arthur Newell is well satisfied with the business done Mothers' day.

W. L. Rock reports this Mothers' day as being the largest he ever experienced. He had enough of everything to meet the demand. The cut of carnations last week was 25,000, besides a large quantity of roses.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports business for the day as exceeding its expectation. The store staff sold everything by 12 o'clock; there was not enough stock to take care of the demand. This concern has been filling porch boxes for customers this year. Miss Fuller, the bookkeeper, was confined to her bed last week. Mr. Thomas, of the cut flower department, announces the arrival of a big baby boy at his home last week.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports that the rainy weather spoiled an exceptionally fine business Mothers' day, but as it was they had at least a twenty per cent increase over the same day last year.

Biedermann & Son had an automobile accident on the last delivery May 14. Another car tried to pass in front of Biedermann's car. This forced the driver to the curbing, damaging the front wheels. Mrs. Biedermann has been confined to her room for more than five weeks and now is low.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that they had more stock for Mothers' day than last year, but nevertheless cleared it all, doubling the business for the same day last year. They received more than 20,000 carnations from Colorado, which were especially fine and of large size.

Henry Kusik & Co. sold out completely. They had a large supply of everything, including a big batch of baby gladioli.

W. J. Barnes is well satisfied with business for Mothers' day. He made a clean sweep of cut flowers and had an unusual run on pot plants. W. J. B.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

H. A. Cook, of Oberlin, O., has had quite a successful season in seeds, and cut flower orders and funeral work have come in heavily.

The call of the Maine woods has been heard by C. E. Barton, of Norwalk, O., who now is busily planning his annual visit to that part of the country.

The Laible Floral Co., of Norwalk, continues busy with funeral work.

E. J. Peat, of Norwalk, is looking forward to a successful season in bedding stock.

Leo E. Wagner, of Sandusky, O., is building a Lord & Burnham house 41x 200 feet. This will be devoted to carnations and other flowers.

Carl Krzysske, of Sandusky, has been waiting for good weather to put out his carnations. His patience was rewarded last week by bright, sunshiny weather.

Maus Bros., of Sandusky, report an unusually good spring trade, both in design work and outdoor planting.

After a six months' vacation in the Dakotas, Eggert N. Zetlitz has returned to his home in Lima, O. No doubt the western air has benefited him, as he looks hale, hearty and happy. He will lead a more or less retired life, having gained his desire in life—the establishment of one of the finest flower stores in the country. His two sons come in for a share of his prosperity, Thor Zetlitz having the retail store and Rolf being at the head of a large range of glass devoted to roses, carnations and other flowers. During my visit to the retail store there was a fine display of outdoor tulips. Design work was heavy and everybody was busy.

H. H. Cade, of Youngstown, is displaying some fine carnations and roses. Funeral work has been plentiful and a general air of prosperity abounds.

The advance sale of bedding stock is keeping Adgate & Son, of Warren, Pa., unusually busy and a large business is predicted. Funeral work and the cut flower trade have been heavy.

H. L. Gilbert, of Warren, is planning to rebuild his range this summer and, perhaps, add a house.

Some fine tomatoes and cucumbers were seen at the Swan Greenhouses, Lima, Manager Vogel taking special pride in these two vegetables.

Geo. M. Palmer, of Findlay, O., is looking forward to an eastern trip when he can renew acquaintances with his old shipmates of Uncle Sam's navy.

A good bit of space is devoted to novelties, especially rose bowls and garden accessories, at the Posy Shop, Tremont, O. General business continues above the average.

T. J. Enright, of Fostoria, O., was busy putting carnations in the field.

The Fostoria Floral Co., of Fostoria, had a splendid cut of everything for Mothers' day.

C. O'Brien, of Greenville, O., did an excellent business Mothers' day.

William Gerlach, of Piqua, O., made a good showing of hydrangeas and lilies for Mothers' day.

The Heiss Co., of Dayton, O., had a complete clean-up for Mothers' day, which was the largest it ever had. Business was suspended Saturday noon in order to fill delivery orders, and Sunday saw the clean-up of all odds and ends. W. W. Horlacher and the Heiss Co. coöperated in advertising Mothers' day. W. T. U.

New Bedford, Mass.—Damage of $200 was done by fire at the greenhouses of William E. Mosher last month.

Swampscott, Mass.—A plot of land near the postoffice has been secured by Harold C. Blaney as a site for his new flower store.

Brookline, Mass.—Frederick E. Palmer, Emma L. Palmer and Louise Ella Palmer have incorporated under the name of Frederick E. Palmer, with $25,000 authorized capital stock.

Leominster, Mass.—N. P. Nordgren, a dentist of Worcester, has given up his practice there and joined his father-in-law, Joseph Fuller, in the florists' business here at 43 Orchard street.

Medford, Mass.—The selection and care of annuals was the subject of an interesting address by William N. Craig, of Brookline, at a recent meeting of the Medford Horticultural Society.

Pawtucket, R. I.—When a bandit entered the store of Mrs. George Lowe and demanded the contents of the till, Mrs. Lowe quickly drew a six-shooter from a drawer and pointed it at him. The man hesitated and then sprinted. And yet they won't let the ladies vote!

Campello, Mass.—Horace C. Baker has taken over the greenhouses of his brother, M. B. Baker. Another brother, Walter E. Baker, also conducts a greenhouse business here.

Hartford, Conn.—The city statistician recently reported that 200,000 violets and more than 37,200 Easter lilies were sold by Hartford's florists at Easter. Of sweet peas the 27,000 on hand for the day were insufficient. The figures for other flowers are: Carnations, 8,000; roses, 7,500; daffodils, 15,000; tulips, 9,000; orchids, 400; valley, 1,700 sprays; snapdragons, 1,300; azaleas, 1,500 plants; spiræas, 600 plants.

Bridgeport, Conn.—According to a Bridgeport daily, David S. Beach is a good Samaritan. At 1:30 o'clock of a morning last month, Mr. Beach came to the aid of a young woman, who, for some reason or another, had been ejected from an automobile while returning to Bridgeport from New Haven. The night being dark and fearsome, the mysterious lady rushed to Mr. Beach's home and asked for aid. Mr. Beach, of course, was on the job immediately. The police were asked to catch the driver of the automobile. Then the papers got the story.

OBITUARY

Joseph Krug.

Joseph Krug, one of the best known citizens of Alton, Ill., died at the family home May 8.

Mr. Krug had been ill for some time. The greater part of the winter he was confined to the house and a part of the time to his bed. He began to improve a few weeks ago and was able to get about the greenhouses at times and made a trip or two downtown, but two weeks ago he suffered a relapse.

Mr. Krug was one of the early settlers of Alton. He purchased the present home when it was a woods. Clearing off the land, he began in the vegetable business and later began the florists' business, both of which lines grew from time to time until more land was needed and one greenhouse after another was built. For many years he was the only florist in his vicinity. He was a good business man and made friends as he went along.

Joseph Krug was born in Minster, O. He would have been 80 years of age November 22. He removed to Alton fifty-five years ago and located upon the premises which continued to be his home until he died. He and his wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary ten years ago. Besides his wife he is survived by three sons and seven daughters, all of whom reside in Alton.

The funeral was held May 10, from St. Mary's church. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

Capt. John H. Elliott.

Capt. John H. Elliott died Thursday, May 11, in his eighty-fourth year, at Washington, D. C., and was buried Saturday from Samson's chapel. He was one of the best known men connected with the florists' and nursery business a generation ago. At one time he was associated with his brother, B. A. Elliott, who was one of the first men to attain prominence in the trade in Pittsburgh. Capt. Elliott was born in Brownstown, Pa., and was connected with the flower business until the outbreak of the Civil war. Being a member of the old Duquesne Grays, he was among the first to be called out. He afterward recruited a company of cavalry, having a building erected at the corner of Fifth avenue and Wood street. To this some of the business men objected, but he only laughed at them and kept his band playing until he had formed his company, which went right into service and few of its members came back. He was wounded twice and suffered from the effects of the wounds all his life. He was of a genial disposition and a friend of everybody. He leaves two sons and one daughter, all grown up. Clarke.

C. Fred Fauth.

C. Fred Fauth, 33 years of age, a well known florist of Baltimore, Md., died May 13 at the Franklin Square hospital, from the effects of a fractured skull, sustained by falling from a motorcycle three days previously. After the accident he was taken to the hospital, but he remained in a semiconscious condition until his death. He is survived by his father, two sisters and three brothers. The funeral services were held from the residence of his brother, May 15, under the direction of the Masonic lodge. W. F. E.

Uriah B. Wakeman.

U. B. Wakeman, of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply Co., Detroit, died May 1 in the Harper hospital, following an illness of two weeks. Mr. Wakeman was born at Fenton, Mich., seventy years ago. At the age of 20 he moved to Detroit and engaged in the produce business. Later he left for the interior of the state, but returned to Detroit fifteen years ago and started a florists' business. He is survived by two brothers.

William G. Rowand.

Wm. G. Rowand, for many years in charge of the warehouse of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, died May 10, at his home at Haddonfield, N. J. He had been a member of the Dreer force for thirty years, and by his faithful and loyal service had gained the confidence of his employers and also the high regard of his fellow workers. Funeral services were held at his home on Sunday afternoon, May 14.

FRESH OR STORAGE BULBS?

If I do not have enough heat to bring fresh bulbs of Lilium giganteum into bloom for a medium early Easter, would I have less trouble with cold storage stock? At what time must I plant them when Easter comes about the first week of April?

R. A. B.—Pa.

Careful attention is required to bring fresh Lilium longiflorum giganteum into bloom by the first week in April. Less difficulty will be found with cold storage bulbs.

The bulbs should be potted as soon as received, using a light, moderately rich, well-decomposed soil, and placed in a frame or cool house where they will have a temperature between 40 and 50 degrees. Early in December repot them, and for a month keep them at a temperature of 50 degrees. Early in January raise the temperature to 60 degrees, and about the middle of February to 70 degrees. Use lukewarm water for watering. After the flower stalks start, begin making weekly applications of liquid manure.

Many of the failures both with Bermuda and longiflorum lilies result from the use of too much manure in the potting soil and the use of cold water for watering. T.

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE.

Advertisers will find it a means of getting the best service for themselves if they will remember that The Review begins sending forms to press as early as circumstances will permit after 5 p. m. each Tuesday.

Attention is given every advertising order received up to the last delivery of mail on Tuesday, but instructions to insert, discontinue or alter an ad, if not received by Tuesday, usually must wait a week for attention.

No week passes that a number of letters containing advertising instructions do not arrive Wednesday and Thursday, one or two days too late to receive the prompt attention their writers would have received if they themselves had acted promptly.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Fred Holznagle believes he was one of the first in Detroit to adopt the card or record system for boarders, which in box trees run into the hundreds. My attention was called to several beds of carnations, which were in fine shape. There were Beacon, Enchantress and Winsor. The last-mentioned, I understand, is yet a profitable kind. Lady Bountiful is admired for its perfect shape and delicious fragrance.

F. G. Lewis, of Lockport, N. Y., said he had but one kick to register, and that was when he ran out of any line of stock and saw it in the classified columns of The Review, for unless he wired the advertiser he usually was too late.

Gottlieb Basler, of Black Rock, N. Y., has added an electric sign at the entrance to the greenhouses. It puts the finishing touch to this up-to-date place.

Big strides have been made in the growing of palms and decorative plants in the vicinity of Chicago, and, judging by the extensive additions being made, this city will be quite a factor in the market in the future.

Frank Oechslin, West Quincy street, Chicago, has added a complete range.

The George Wittbold Co., Chicago, is adding houses and extending the nursery at Edgebrook.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, Ill., are adding to Plant A, for palms and fancy stock. Earl Poehlmann, until recently at school, is the latest addition to the staff and he intends making the palm department his specialty.

The Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., reports an excellent season, both in growing and selling. Aviator has been widely disseminated and an even larger distribution is looked for next year. Superb then will be sent out, now that its color is established. Matchless is splendid; in fact, these three varieties are growing as one in growth and bloom. P. W. Peterson figures that there are almost half a million plants in the field.

The J. F. Kidwell Co., of Downers Grove, Ill., is strong on geraniums. A seedling named American Beauty, and having a color similar to its namesake, bids fair to become one of the most popular varieties. The Belmont plant is cutting fine Killarney and Killarney Brilliant roses, while Milady, after having been grown for two years, is considered more profitable than Beauty and will supplant it next season. Mrs. Aaron Ward is grown extensively. The range at Downers Grove is old and well suited to the raising of plants. The newer place at Belmont is right up-to-date, even to its own electric light plant. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

THERE are those, especially among those who deal exclusively in cut flowers, who report that Mothers' day was "better than Easter."

LABOR shortage has become one of the difficulties with which the trade has to contend, especially in the east, where munitions factories are offering rates of pay for unskilled labor that are impossible to plantsmen and cut flower growers.

IMPORTERS are awaiting anxiously some word regarding the spring shipments of bay trees from Ghent. Cables fail to produce a response. Shipment is supposed to have been made, but no word has arrived regarding stock that usually is in, unpacked and partly sold by this date.

IN Washington park, Chicago, instead of massing the bulbs in large beds as heretofore, they were scattered along at the edges of the extensive plantations of shrubbery. The effect this spring has been admirable and the plan is to be commended wherever the bedding method has become monotonous.

THE thirteenth annual meeting of the American Peony Society will be held at New York June 9 to 11, when the usual exhibition will be staged at the American Museum of Natural History in coöperation with the Horticultural Society of New York. Secretary A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., has issued what he calls an unofficial premium list, aimed to gain amateur participation to a greater extent than usual. When the complete list is ready George V. Nash, secretary New York Horticultural Society, Bronx park, will supply copies.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

AS profit margins narrow credits tighten up. It does not pay to sell to the man who does not pay.

ONE of the excellent features of Memorial day business is that it makes no demand on one's originality. Bouquets or wreaths for the cemetery are what are wanted and one can focus his effort on merchandising a quantity.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3 or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Constien, A. A., Upper Sandusky, O.
Donald, William, Santa Barbara, Cal.
Pindar, Mrs. N., Valdosta, Ga.
Mahn, Geo. D., Biloxi, Miss.
Hagenburger Co., Cleveland, O.
Zearing, R. W., Carlisle, Pa.
Ritter, H. H., Dayton, O.
Herwig, George, Chicago.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

May 23 the members of the American Rose Society are invited to meet at 9 a. m. at the store of Gude Bros. Co., 1214 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., and proceed to the test rose garden. The invitation to attend this examination of the hundreds of outdoor roses is cordially extended to all who may be able to do so. Benjamin Hammond, Sec'y.

MOTHERS' DAY.

Mothers' day has been a great success, greater, indeed, than the most sanguine expectations.

But the success of Mothers' day, this year the same as in other years since The Review first advised the trade of its possibilities, has been in direct proportion to the effort florists put into the work of apprising the public of the significance of the day. While the idea of Mothers' day originated outside the trade and the trade has had the assistance of an act of Congress and numerous proclamations by governors and mayors, the real work of exploitation before the public would have remained undone were it not for the trade—has remained undone where the trade has not risen to the occasion.

Mothers' day makes a strong appeal to the public, but the day is of such recent origin and so lacking in association with history or religion that its significance must be advertised time and again before the date will become fixed in the minds of the public. During recent months literally dozens of members of the trade have written or telephoned to The Review, "What is the date of Mothers' day this year?" If the men who get the profit out of the day can not remember that it always is the second Sunday in May, how can the public be expected to remember?

There are cities from which it is reported that Mothers' day this year was ahead of Easter on the sales of cut flowers. Those are the cities in which the florists got together and worked all the avenues of publicity, or in which the individuals each did something independently. The places where Mothers' day cut no figure are the ones in which the trade did nothing to arouse the public.

LOCK UP YOUR INSECTICIDES.

At Waukegan, Ill., a murder trial was begun May 15, the turn of which will hinge on the cyanide of potassium used for fumigating in a greenhouse.

February 10 the body of Marian Lambert, daughter of Frank Lambert, head gardener on the J. Kuppenheimer estate at Lake Forest, Ill., was found in the woods near her home. There were crystals of cyanide of potassium on her cheeks and right hand. Will H. Orpet, son of E. O. Orpet, superintendent of the C. H. McCormick estate at Lake Forest, was arrested and now is on trial. There is no direct evidence against him thus far disclosed and the jury apparently will have to decide from the circumstances whether young Orpet gave the girl poison from his father's stock of fumigant or whether for the purpose of self-destruction she took some from her own father's supply. The state is trying to prove murder, the defense, suicide; but either side would fall could it be shown the fathers' stock of fumigating materials was inaccessible to any but the man in charge, as it ought to be.

So far as the record goes, there is no other case in which a charge of murder has been based on the easily obtained poison in a greenhouse, but several accidental deaths have come about through persons swallowing nicotine extract by mistake. Near Chicago there have been two cases in which children of florists have thus lost their lives.

Our greenhouse insecticides are sudden death. They should be handled with the utmost care. The time to lock them up is NOW.

CHICAGO.

Special Notice.

The Review is advised that the section north of Chicago is being canvassed by a person who offers The Florists' Review at cut rates or as a premium free to anyone who will subscribe to the Farmers' Review. Any such person is a swindler.

The trade is again advised that The Review employs no solicitors other than the regular members of its staff, whom nearly all florists know; that the paper never is sold at cut rates and that it never is offered with or as a premium.

The Market.

Not one dissenting voice is heard on the market when one advances the opinion that last Mothers' day week was the best the Chicago trade ever has experienced. Some wholesalers say it was sixty per cent better than last year, others say twenty-five per cent, so it may be safely assumed that the increase was gratifyingly large. Many of the out-of-town florists who operate greenhouses in connection with a retail store and depend on their own houses for the major proportion of their supplies were sorely disappointed, as the warm weather the early part of the week, followed by the cool weather the latter part, greatly reduced their cuts and threw them onto the Chicago market as buyers. This went to swell the already heavy shipping demand. The retail trade, owing to weather conditions, did not come off as handsomely

BE SURE YOU ORDER ENOUGH FOR

Memorial Day

YOU CAN COUNT ON US TO FURNISH THE STOCK

LOOK UP what you ordered for Memorial Day last year and send us an order for MORE—you know business is much better than it was last year and you surely will need a lot more stock. You can count on us to fill in full if we book your order in advance, but order NOW. The comparatively light crop of Carnations will make a big demand on us for our other lines of dependable stock. Send us now the full list of what you can use.

A FINE CROP OF ROSES

Remember we are headquarters for Mrs. Russell—the largest supply in America. A wonderful shipper. Also, you will find here a large and fine supply of Milady, Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia and White Killarney. We are doing a splendid shipping business on these Roses every day because our customers like every shipment.

PEONIES

There is, perhaps, greater difference in the value of Peonies than in any other flower. Given the right varieties, grown and shipped by men who know how, there is nothing makes a better show for the money; but if from men who never learned the "how," Peonies are likely to be absolutely worthless by the time the retailer unpacks them.

Our Peonies are RIGHT in every particular—you'll make good money on them.

PEAS

We have a large supply of spring-blooming Butterfly (Spencer) Peas in all colors.

VALLEY

Order Valley of us with the assurance we always can supply good stock.

CARNATIONS

This is the time of year when you must be careful where you order Carnations. Nothing but the best will do. Ours are strictly high-grade.

FANCY CUT FERNS

Good Fancy Hardy Cut Ferns will be scarce for Memorial Day. Send us your order and it will be filled, and filled with stock you will like.

as the wholesale fraternity. The flower buying public did not bestir itself to any great extent until the morning of May 13. For a brief spell the demand flourished luxuriantly, and then came the rain. Of course there were intermissions in the downpour and of these the buying public cheerfully took advantage. Mothers' day was a repetition of Saturday on an intensified scale. All of this did not prevent the day from being a really notable success, but one cannot help reflecting on the possibilities had it not rained.

Beauties in all lengths cleared during the week preceding the holiday. Quality was good, then. This week, as a result of the weather conditions, quality leaves much to be desired. White Killarney has been waiting many long months for its day, but it came with Mothers'. The strongest demand was for short-stemmed White Killarney, and when these were exhausted the longer grades were seized upon eagerly. No one variety of rose, however, could satisfy such a demand as that of last week, and by May 12 almost every variety was rapidly tending to the short side of the market.

Carnations, though decidedly scarce, were not so short as the preceding weeks had led the trade to expect. Pickled stock was much in evidence. The white varieties, it is needless to say, were out of the question, generally speaking. In spite of the glamour and rush of the holiday, sweet peas lost not one whit of their popularity. In direct contrast to them, callas dragged their long lengths into the market, but could not drag them out. Easter lilies fared somewhat better. Valley remained close enough to the short side of the market to be interesting. There was a wonderfully good demand for cattleyas, but there was no supply. Peonies served in many cases as a life-saver. The supply, though by no means large, was sufficient to mark peonies as one of the features of the market. This week the greater part of the receipts are going into storage. Daisies, daffodils, calendulas, snapdragons, iris and gladioli found a reasonably good market, but were necessarily subordinate to the standard items. Gardenias sold well. So too did pansies. Lilac, both purple and white, is arriving on the market in large quantities. As to demand, there is no difficulty in moving all that reaches the market.

Demand for green goods was in every Express Drivers Strike.

Tuesday morning, May 16, the business of the market was thrown into confusion by a strike of the drivers for the express companies. Incoming stock was delivered, but after that the wholesalers were left to their own resources to get shipments to and from the various depots. Up to the hour of going to press it has been possible to handle nearly everything, although an occasional shipment has missed its train because of delay in getting through the picket lines. The strike of course has added greatly to the wholesalers' troubles and costs, but it has not tied up business. The dispute seems to be largely one over the recognition of the union and promises to be of considerable duration. In that event the wholesalers probably will organize a coöperative cartage service, several meetings looking to that end already having been held. As in the case in May eleven years ago, Fred Lautenschlager probably will be placed in charge. At that time the coöperative service was kept up for weeks at a cost of only 6 cents per piece handled, which is less than the express companies' costs in normal times.

Agemco Buys Factory.

Negotiations for the purchase of a manufacturing plant in Cicero have been completed by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., according to P. L. McKee, its president. The plant, which covers half a city block, is completely equipped with machinery and tools and is exactly suited to the company's purpose. A railroad switch runs into the property, and for loading and unloading purposes there are three overhead trolley cranes, two to five tons capacity. All machines are equipped with individual motors. The structural steel capacity of the factory is approximately 100 tons a month.

May have seen more flowers sold than in any other week of the year, but it has become a well recognized fact that, no matter how strong the demand, there is a price limit beyond which the buyers will not go. The result is that quotations on low-priced stock are advancing while those on the best grades are being shaded to tempt the buyers.

There is no likelihood of a heavy supply of carnations for Memorial day. Conditions are such that the only increase over the Mothers' day supply will be such as brighter and warmer weather may make. Roses will be in large supply, offering excellent values, especially in the longer grades. Sweet peas are between crops, but these never are in special request for Memorial day. There will be plenty of giganteum and calla lilies, snapdragon, Spanish iris, cape jasmine, etc.

But the most important flower of the occasion is the peony. The season seems to have been exceptionally favorable for the growers at the south end of the state and they are sending large quantities of stock that looks good and which is being put away in the warehouse of the Western Cold Storage Co., awaiting the week of special demand. The season is so backward there will be no local peonies this Memorial day. The belief in the market, however, is that the supply from south of Chicago will equal all Memorial day demands, with an unwieldy quantity to be contended with when the local crops come on. There is only one concern planning to carry any in storage beyond June 30.

Various Notes.

The Chicago retail florists did more to push Mothers' day than ever before, and consequently had a better trade. The Fleischman Floral Co. and the Alpha Floral Co. published especially strong advertisements in the leading daily. A majority of the better class stores put in special Mothers' day window decorations.

There has been an unusual call for high class funeral work, three successive days being marked by the funerals of leading citizens: Chauncy Blair, of the Corn Exchange bank; W. A. Gardner, president of the Northwestern railroad, and Bryan Lathrop, capitalist. The retailers had difficulty in getting as many orchids as they needed.

Discussion of the plan for a flower show along the lines suggested by O. J. Friedman, at the May meeting of the Florists' Club, has brought out the opinion in influential quarters that it is too late to start a show for this year, but several gardeners have started a lot of plants they may not know what to do with and some sort of a show may eventuate.

A new store with splendid opportunities is that of F. L. Eagleston, 1514 Hyde Park boulevard, near the corner of Lake Park avenue. The room is large, well furnished and makes a show in keeping with the neighborhood, which is one of family hotels, high grade apartment buildings and well kept specialty shops. There is no other flower store in the vicinity. Mr. Eagleston is a new man in the trade, the artist of the establishment being Richard Rolston, formerly of the Fleischman staff.

The big peonies from Evansville began arriving in considerable quantity last week, but it was not until after Mothers' day that there were any to put away in the cooler, according to the E. C. Amling Co., at which establishment the belief is held that the Memorial day supply will be less than some people expect, because of the lateness of the season.

F. J. Munzing, 6101 Broadway, has found one truck insufficient for his needs and May 15 supplemented his Overland with a light car that he intends to use a year or two with a touring body before having a panel body put on.

The sales at Peter Reinberg's for the three days before Mothers' day equaled those of the three days before Easter, according to Felix Reichling.

The bulbs in the parks, especially at Garfield, Washington and Lincoln, have been making a gorgeous show of more than the usual duration because of favorable weather conditions.

Mothers' day now is second in importance on the trade calendar, according to N. J. Wietor, who says his firm's sales last week exceeded those for Easter. He thinks we may look to see Christmas beaten in another year or two.

Sixty per cent was the measure of the increase in Mothers' day sales at Erne & Klingel's.

A fine of $25 and costs was imposed on Oscar Metz, 5525 Harper avenue, last week for selling shrubs without giving the purchaser a certificate from the state entomologist stating they were free from plant disease.

Within two blocks on East Sixty-third street there now are four flower stores. A. F. had the competition of John C. Michal's new store almost directly across the street, selling the output of the greenhouses on Stony Island avenue, but a little extra push seems to have developed enough new business to keep everybody busy.

Field carnation planting was finished by Tony Gabel, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, May 9. Thomas Conlon reports an ever increasing demand for calceolarias. To gain an intimate knowledge of his future life work, Earl Poehlmann, son of August Poehlmann, is working diligently potting plants.

The first cape jasmines to reach the market were received last week by the A. L. Randall Co. Eric Johnson reports a friendly reception for them, and thinks they will prove a most popular Memorial day flower.

At Winterson's Seed Store nineteen pieces of German mail were received May 15. All the flower seeds from Germany have arrived except a shipment of special stock taken by the British off the Danish steamer United States.

A new delivery car has appeared on the streets bearing the name of William Vlk, 5118 South Ashland avenue.

A shipping business for Mothers' day week that runs ahead of that for Christmas and far beyond that for Easter is reported for the John Kruchten Co.

As a means of reducing the cost of cartage, the interests in A. Henderson & Co. some time ago incorporated the Old Fort Express Co., with office at 120 East Illinois street. The equipment has been added to steadily, a motor truck having been bought this spring, and the cartage of a number of concerns, including several in the trade, now is taken care of.

The property of Pyfer & Olsem, at Wilmette, is enhancing in value because of the rapidity with which the neighborhood is being built up, and A. T. Pyfer says the retail business is improving for the same reason.

H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he was satisfied with the Easter business, but much to his surprise the Mothers' day business was even greater.

L. R. Bohannon has closed the branch store on Monroe street run under the name of the Flower Market. The store was started as a temporary one at Easter, 1915, and was successfully maintained for more than a year.

After looking over the books, Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, reports a gain of twenty-five per cent for this Mothers' day over that of last year.

A. A. Lavaque, of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., who is said to sell more greenhouse glass than any other one man in America, will visit the Pacific coast during the latter part of June as a member of the drill team of Englewood Commandery. The team was nosed out of the national championship at the last triennial conclave and hopes to win this time.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, thinks Mothers' day was more generally celebrated this year than ever before. His own house ran close to fifty per cent better than a year ago.

firm did a most satisfactory business Mothers' day, working from early morning until late at night.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Mothers' day was the feature of the market for the week ending May 17. The supply of carnations was heavy and the demand fully kept pace with the supply. White carnations were drawn in from all points within reach. Their price advanced to $5, $6 and $8 per hundred, with some Matchless at $10 and some poor flowers at $3 to $4. Colored carnations advanced to $4 per hundred for the best. The wholesalers were generally satisfied to move their colored sorts with the whites. It was noticed that the larger stores both in and out of town bought white carnations more gingerly than the smaller stores, while the street men bought freely of all. Those street men, with cases that approach the dignity of a small store, bought the finest white carnations in quantities, at top prices. The local press, forgetting that the price of flowers is ruled by supply and demand, devoted space to scathing articles and even editorials on the greed of the middlemen. This was most unjust.

The demand for white carnations had an inspiriting effect on other flowers, particularly roses. The wholesalers varied in their opinions as to whether these other flowers were used for honoring our mothers. Some said they were; some said they were not. Anyway, they all agreed that Mothers' day was generally observed and that the whole market was much, very much, better than the week before. Easter lilies, calla lilies and white daisies were wallflowers—nobody wanted them. There is good outdoor valley, but even at the low price it is passed by when greenhouse-grown spikes can be obtained.

Peonies are coming in more freely from the south. While good, they are not so satisfactory as locally grown stock when keeping qualities are a factor. There is a lot of gladioli in the market, fine greenhouse-grown northern and outdoor-grown southern. Spanish iris, blue, yellow and white, is popular. Sweet peas have been damaged by the heat of a week ago; there are some fine flowers and more are promised soon. Beauties are quite abundant. Cattleya gigas is coming into bloom. Darwin tulips are good. Daffodils are nearly over. The lilac season is waning. There are Peach Blossom baby gladioli to be had.

this busy season, permits our seeing what others are doing in the middle of May, that a description of what is going on in the packing shed at the H. A. Dreer place at Riverton may be of interest. Personally, I must confess it was new. Of course, we all know that no matter to what our greenhouses are devoted, they are run at full steam now, but the extent of the operations at Riverton was a surprise.

The cement-covered courtyard in front of the office and packing shed suggested a great picnic about to start on an all-day trip. There were cars and wagons standing about; men running to and fro and wagons loading. Above all, this certainly savored of business, too much of it for the moment, with the sign that informed all who would read that no orders could be accepted for immediate delivery. Inside the packing shed the long central table that stretches the length of the room was loaded down with plants. There were annuals and perennials; soft-wooded plants and hard-wooded plants; roses and palms and what not. On each side of the bench there was a row of packers knocking out and rolling up the plants as they were brought to them by some forty order clerks, who were picking out the orders and bringing them in light boxes to the packing table. Nearby, other packers were nailing up the boxes and marking them ready for shipment, while every now and then a young man with a box or two on a truck went rapidly past to the scales outside, where the shipments were turned over to the Adams Express Co. agent, to be weighed and hauled away. So great was the crush that the shed beyond the packing room, generally used as a wagon shed or garage, was called into service for the overflow of orders, mostly perennials at the moment, waiting their turn on the packing bench. Getting the orders together was often no small job—many of them called for one or more of each of a good many varieties of plants; sometimes a good many varieties of the same plant. Every plant was carefully labeled, showing a degree of system that is admirable and that has done much to place the business on a sound footing. J. D. Eisele stopped long enough to say: "Well, you have seen it now, and the office is completely filled with orders yet to go out"—with a glad hand he was off. George A. Strohlein seemed as happy and light-hearted as though there was nothing on his mind. He also seemed to be everywhere at once. W. H. Taplin said that, despite every effort from 7 a. m. to 10 p. m., they were not gaining on the orders yet, though they soon hoped to do so. Continuing, Mr. Taplin spoke of the extraordinary demand for every kind of plant for use in garden and border. He said that this demand was ahead of previous seasons in all varieties of plants, without exception; that roses were in strong request, due, in part, to the fine display made at the National Flower Show, and that palms, while they were running low, were still holding out in practically all sizes.

Various Notes.

Rodman M. Eisenhart, violet, sweet pea and pansy grower of Torresdale, Pa., is erecting a Lord & Burnham house, 60x150 feet.

John P. Habermehl says that Mothers' day brought a good general demand for all flowers. His concern is busy with porch and window boxes.

Prof. Macfarlane, of the University of Pennsylvanina, spoke before the Society of Little Gardens on "Historic Bartram's Garden on the Banks of the Schuylkill," May 12.

George Burton is putting in a cold-storage plant on his place at Wyndmoor, Pa.

J. R. Edwards sent fine white carnations to the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange last week.

Among the cut flower novelties for the coming season will be a polyantha rose of the Daily Mail color.

Adolph Farenwald, vice-chairman of the National Flower Show committee, believes that the margin of profit of the show held in this city March 25 to April 2 will reach $2,000, setting a new high-water mark for shows in this country. This is largely due, Mr. Farenwald says, to the fine work of the publicity and trade tickets committees.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

As has been the case in previous years, the florists were early sold out of white carnations for Mothers' day and were unable to replenish their stocks to any great extent. The heavy demand caused the price on all good carnations to go to $8 per hundred. Colored varieties cleaned up well and the business was declared to be satisfactory. The shipping trade to the south was heavy. The weather has been fairly cool and this made the carnations better this year than usual at this season.

There was not the glut of flowers last week that had been present for some time. Business was good in all items, although prices were low. An addition to the market are the peonies that are beginning to come in from the south, and these are moving well as a novelty at from $5 to $10 per hundred. Violets are completely off the market and there are fewer sweet peas. It is getting late in the season for daffodils and a large offering last week failed to sell. Gardenias form a peculiar proposition. They are $2 per dozen if one buys them at wholesale; on the streets they are offered at 10 cents each, three for a quarter, and it is a hard matter for people who dislike patronizing street men to jolly themselves into believing that the opportunity to buy in the stores is worth the difference.

There has been some relief from the tense situation involving the production of valley. The shortage of greenhouse stock continues, but there has been a good supply of outdoor stock and this has been used to fill many orders. Some of it comes with from twelve to fifteen bells and is as good as at least the indoor stock produced from low-grade pips. The one regret is that the season does not last long and conditions will shortly be again as they were.

There are plenty of roses to be had. The whites were in heavy demand for Mothers' day, but there were enough of them to go around. Orchids still are scarce. A few are beginning to come in from the local houses.

Various Notes.

The statement made in one of the papers that the Freeman boys were to close their Thirteenth street store May 1 does not seem to have been correct, as the place is still doing business, and rumor has it that a number of improvements are to be made at the greenhouses and new stock added, and the boom extended to the Thirteenth street store.

was rehearsing a stunt with several large king snakes when one of them became dissatisfied with his treatment and closed his powerful jaws over the fat portion of his charmer's left hand, leaving four fangs embedded in the flesh. It was but a short time ago that a young boa constrictor performed a similar stunt, with Mr. Kramer as the victim, but still he continues to charm.

Local growers are reported to be buying Harrisii lily bulbs in greater numbers this year than usual. Although having had a rather unpleasant experience in producing them, they realize that when they do come good they are profitable lilies to grow. C. L. L.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The present week opens gloomy, damp and chill, but with just the kind of weather the seedsmen and nurserymen want to prolong their season.

In the cut flower market there were no white carnations left Saturday evening and if Miss Jarvis and her champions in the trade will get together and drop the color obstruction everyone will be the gainer. New York does not enthuse over Mothers' day and the smaller cities absorbed most of the white carnations, some, it is said, even realizing $8 per hundred and anything white, of merit, bringing $5 to $6. The best of other colors did not sell above $3 per hundred.

Until Saturday of last week there was practically no business, so Mothers' day was at the foundation of a fairly good week end, but a review of the market in the evening found an abundance of nearly everything, with a virtual flood of roses. Prices of roses in big lots last week actually dropped to 25 cents per hundred. It is easy to imagine it was harvest time for the street merchants and the department stores. The best Beauties last week sold at 15 cents. Hadley was down to 12 cents.

Of carnations there is an enormous supply, especially of Enchantress. Quality is excellent. Outdoor valley is abundant, so that greenhouse offerings are declining. Orchids are back to 35 cents for the best of the cattleyas and the shipments are increasing. Lilies were never so abundant at this time of the year. Everybody is loaded with them and few can be sold above $5 per hundred.

Peonies are here from the south and sell at 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Big shipments of these are looked for.

Seeley presiding. The membership list was increased by the addition of two new names and several applications for membership were received. The committees appointed to arrange for the summer and fall exhibitions reported progress and several substantial additions to the premium lists of both exhibitions. The dates of the summer show, to be held at Mamaroneck, are for June 16 and 17. A special feature of the meeting was the competition open to assistant gardeners for exhibits of outdoor flowers, any variety, arranged for effect. First honors went to Alex

Clarkson. The non-competitive displays were exceptionally fine, the awards being as follows: Cultural certificate to William Graham, for antirrhinums; to James Stuart, for a specimen plant of calceolaria; to Thomas Ryan, for Spencer sweet peas; honorable mention to John Andrew, for Bonnie Best tomatoes; to P. W. Popp, for Gladiolus Non Plus Ultra; to James Linane, for Mignonette Triumph; to William Whitton, for sweet peas. Votes of thanks were accorded William Whitton, for exhibits of hydrangeas and calendulas; to James Linane, for Clarkia elegans, who also was highly commended for a specimen plant of calceolaria.

The next meeting will be held June 9. Exhibits of seasonable plants, flowers, etc., will be in order.

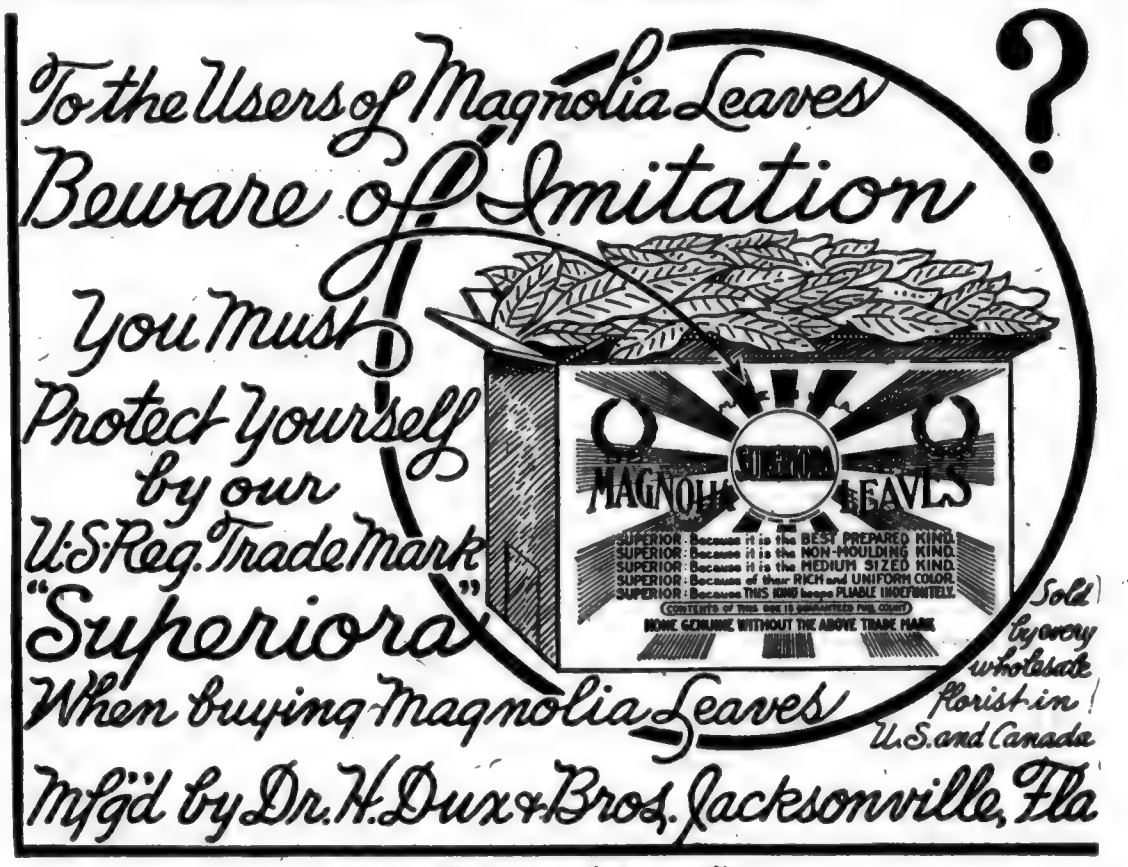
The Market.



Weather conditions made business better last week and a large quantity of outdoor work was accomplished. The bedding season is well under way and stock is moving satisfactorily. Rains and sunshine are bringing things along in good shape.

The cut flower trade was good last week and it is thought that business for Mothers' day was in excess of that of any previous year. Stock on the whole was in splendid condition and plentiful. Roses were exceptionally fine and sold well. Long-stemmed varieties sold well, among them being Maryland, d'Arenberg, Sunburst, the Killarneys and Russell. Ward roses were in heavy demand. Carnations were fine and we received a good supply. Good calla lilies are on the market and sell well. Easter lilies are in fine condition and are used heavily in funeral work.

Valley was exceptionally fine and a few large weddings last week created an extra demand for it. Sweet peas are of good quality and the Spencer varieties are splendid; they sell well. Some good lavender pink and white stocks are arriving. Jonquils are holding on well and sell well. Orchids sold nicely during the week end. Yellow and white daisies move freely. Greens are plentiful and meet all demands. Potted plants, ferns and palms sold freely during the week.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at the Musicians' hall, Monday, May 8. The principal speaker was Lewis A. Toan, manager of the Monroe County Farm Bureau, who gave an interesting talk on "The Farm Bureau and the Farmer." It was decided to postpone the discussion regarding a fall flower show until the June meeting. Frank Newell extended an invitation to the florists to visit his studio on East avenue to view paintings of English and American gardens, by Wyatt. The invitation was accepted and many promised to attend.

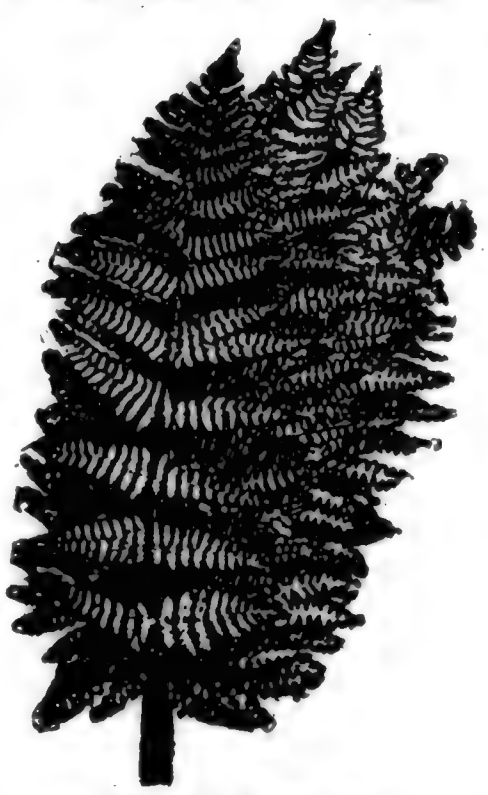
George B. Hart has been away on a fishing trip. There are stories of some good catches.

J. B. Keller Sons had an exceptionally fine window display of American Beauty roses during the week.

Mrs. McNeil, of Wilson's, is away from the store for a week or two on account of an accident that befell her mother.

The Rochester Floral Co. had an attractive window arrangement for Mothers' day—"Flowers to Everywhere," by telegraph. There was a large map of the U. S., with white ribbons connecting the principal cities with Rochester. A number of Western Union telegraph forms for Mothers' day were used alongside the ad.

Crosman's Seed Store is a busy place these days. The new location is diagonally across from the former store. They are doing a fair business in bedding plants. H. J. H.



SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

The florists' business in San Antonio is showing a steady, healthy growth. Three new stores have been opened during the last few months. The owners are Miss M. A. Monard, at 109 Jefferson street; Edward Green, Avenue C and Eighth street; Chris Hauser, of the Star Floral Co., a handsome store at 404 Crockett street.

The monthly meeting of the San Antonio Florists' Association was held May 8 at the home of Chris Hauser. The flower show held by the association and the Women's Civic League, April 13 and 14, was voted a big success. This meeting being the first of the ensuing year, F. C. Suchy was elected president.

Easter trade was good in San Antonio.

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich.:

Please ship via express, promptly, one thousand fancy cut ferns for Memorial Day use. The ferns which we have been getting from you have been so much better than those received from wholesale houses nearby, where they have been rehandled, that we feel justified in shipping them so far. Only wish that we could use enough to ship more frequently.

OMAHA, NEB.

In a hard-fought and closely contested bowling match the Omaha boys went down to defeat at the hands of the Council Bluffs boys, but at that it was only to the tune of thirty-five pins. The principal reason for the victory by Council Bluffs was the heavy bowling of Gardner and Myers and the poor showing of Hines for Omaha.

The score was:

FOR SALE.

Valuable greenhouse property for sale, at 108 Concord St., Nashua, N. H., consisting of about 5 acres of land, modern residence, stable and three greenhouses; one house of tomatoes and the balance of bedding plants. Large steam heating plant heats all buildings on the place and will do double the amount of heating easily. Great location for retail florist trade. Automobile trade is an important item here and can be increased by building one or more houses out onto the street. On the Merrimac Valley Highway, three minutes to end of trolley line, one mile from B. & M. depot, schools and markets, American Express service at door; telephone, electric lights and power and city water. This is a long established and conspicuous place. We have a fine wholesale shipping and local retail trade for all bedding plants, fruit and vegetables that can be produced on the place. On opposite side of highway we have eighteen acres intervale land which would be fine for nursery stock. These two valuable pieces of real estate will be sold together or separately, as desired. Clear title and no encumbrance. Come and investigate or write owner. Stephen Chase, 108 Concord St., Nashua, N. H.

The Market.

Trade was somewhat quiet the greater part of last week. Stock arrived in great quantities daily, but no clearances were reported. Saturday, May 13, there was a big demand for carnations and prices on these averaged about $4 per hundred. Extra fancy white, in some cases, brought $8 per hundred, but these were scarce, while colored stock was plentiful at all times. Roses were abundant and prices went low on left-over stock. The fresh-picked stock held high prices. Russell, Ward and Ophelia were the best sellers in this market. Sweet peas were hard to move all week and the counters at the wholesale houses were filled to overflowing with these. Peonies are arriving and promise to be heavy in supply. Shipments of Texas cape jasmines will help to crowd an already crowded market.

Lilies do not seem to move at all and prices on these are as low as $3 per hundred for extra good stock. Outdoor valley affected the sale of greenhouse-grown stock to a certain extent. Gladioli dropped down in price; $5 and $6 per hundred is now being asked for excellent stock. A heavy crop of gladioli is promised by the county growers. White and yellow daisies and snapdragons in all colors are plentiful. Fancy ferns are not of the best quality at $3 per thousand. The market affords plenty of other greens at regular prices.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its monthly meeting May 11, in Odd Fellows' hall. Owing to the busy planting season, the meeting was not well attended. In the absence of President Bourdet, Vice-president W. S. Wells presided.

W. W. Ohlweiler, chairman of the trustees, reported that the meetings of June, July, August and September would be held outdoors and that invitations from members would be accepted. W. J. Pilcher extended an invitation to the members to hold the June meeting at his place in Kirkwood. The invitation was accepted with thanks. Mr. Ohlweiler also reported for the spring flower show committee. The applications of Oscar Ruff, J. Mandeville, Alex Lorie, George Schmidt and Martin Lechner were reported favorably and their election to membership followed.

John S. Carter brought up for discussion the creation of an associate membership. After a lengthy discussion the chair appointed a committee of three, Messrs. Carter, Jensen and Ohlweiler, to report at the next meeting on this subject.

Alex Lorie, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, gave an interesting lecture on "The Development of the Carnation."

He used a number of blooms of recent varieties to demonstrate. The mentioning of some of the old varieties, such as McGraw, Lizzie McGowan, Grace Wilder, William Scott and Portia, brought smiles from the old-timers who worked with these good old varieties years ago. Mr. Lorie was given a vote of thanks.

The question box brought out some good discussions. The trustees were given full power to arrange the club's annual picnic, to take place the latter part of July. The usual $50 for expenses was allowed. The next meeting of the club will be its thirtieth anniversary, as it was June 28, 1886, that the club held its first meeting.

Various Notes.

The wholesalers furnished display cards for Mothers' day to the retailers free of charge. Several thousands were distributed among the retailers and large business houses, which greatly helped in getting the business.

L. P. Jensen and Dr. J. H. Whitten were the judges at the spring flower show held at Columbia, Mo., May 5. Mr. Jensen says the show was nicely staged and many novelties shown. The attendance was quite large.

The students of the Missouri Botanical Garden, under the directorship of Alex Lorie, recently visited the greenhouse establishment of W. J. Pilcher, at Kirkwood. The next visit will be to J. F. Ammann's place at Edwardsville, Ill.

The chairmen of the spring flower show committees met at the store of Jules Bourdet May 9 and made reports of the workings of their committees. The preliminary list will be mailed the latter part of June.

William C. Smith is some worker. He built a bridge in less than two hours over a stream near his farm in St. Louis county. This week he is directing the building of a concrete dam near this bridge.

All the hard work fell on the shoulders of Frank Windler, of Windler's Wholesale Floral Co., last week. He had plenty of it, as A. Gumz took things easy doing jury duty, which he claims is harder work than waiting on the trade.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, spent a few days here last week. He is always a welcome visitor right after Easter, when the leading west end establishments are in need of stock for their show houses.

W. W. Ohlweiler, general manager of the Missouri Botanical Garden, now makes his rounds on a bicycle and in this way covers the ground in a great deal less time than formerly.

Fred C. Weber has had a busy time since Easter with decorations. A number of fine window boxes were noted here ready for delivery to special customers. Mothers' day business was exceptionally good.

C. C. Sanders, head of the Sanders Nursery Co., on Clara avenue, was head and shoulders in work with plants for bedding out. Several wagon loads of window boxes kept the enlarged delivery force busy all week. The cut flower department was busy with advance orders.

Fred H. Weber had a number of good sized wedding decorations last week that kept the force busy. Mr. Weber's show house faces fashionable Maryland avenue and always attracts a great deal of attention.

W. S. Wells, chairman of the committee to organize a state florists' association, says he has arranged for a meeting at Columbia, Mo., the latter part of this month and expects a good-sized representation from St. Louis.

Joseph Krug, the oldest florist in Alton, Ill., died May 9 at the age of 80 years. The funeral took place May 11 from his home in Alton. Mr. Krug was well known in the wholesale district.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber, Jr., received the sympathies of their friends on the death of Julius Beyer, father of Mrs. Weber, who died May 9 after a lingering illness.

E. Kalisch, of the Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., is making preparations for an early summer fishing trip and can hardly wait for the season to end. Alex Siegel is another in the trade who will take his usual northern fishing trip at the end of June.

John Connon, head of the Connon Floral Co., at Webster Groves, will leave for his yearly visit to Twin Falls, Idaho, at the end of the season. He has a clover seed farm at Twin Falls, of which he is quite proud.

W. A. Rowe reports a visit from the stork May 10. Mr. Rowe installed a new delivery car. His business and the duties of alderman keep him busy early and late.

William A. Seeger, head of the Mullanphy Florists, says he will return with Mrs. Seeger from a several months' stay in Florida, where he went for his health. He is greatly improved.

Ernest Strehle, superintendent of parks, says the local parks will need twice the quantity of bedding stock used last year. They are rushing the work. J. Moriz, head of the big greenhouses in Forest park, is furnishing ample stock of fine quality.

Windler, Schoenle, Bergstermann, Eggeling and Beyer, all South Grand avenue florists, report a satisfactory Mothers' day business. Carnations had the call. Other stock, too, came in for some demand.

A heavy rain, hail and wind storm swept our city May 13 and played havoc with the greenhouses in the southern part of the city. The loss of glass will run into the thousands of dollars. The greatest loss fell to the Meyer, Charles Beyer, Fred Pape, C. Bergstermann and Max Herzog also suffered considerable loss of glass. The Bourdet Floral Co. and the Missouri Botanical Garden escaped, as the heavy part of the storm did not reach any farther north than Arsenal street. The heavy wind did a lot of damage to trees and flower beds. The heavy losers say the storm came so suddenly that it was impossible to guard against the damage. All are now busy figuring the losses, as nearly all carried insurance in the Florists' Hail Association. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

After several days of poor business a welcome, if temporary, improvement manifested itself May 12 and 13, the demand for Mothers' day being accountable for a sharp stiffening in carnation prices and a little advance in medium and short-stemmed roses. White carnations made $5 and $6 per hundred and colored varieties $3 and $4. There was no special jump in rose prices, but the clean-up was much better. Other flowers, such as sweet peas, marguerites, snapdragons, irises, etc., made no advance.

Roses this week are in heavy supply, with prices unstable. American Beauties are abundant, but the demand for them is only moderate; from $10 to $20 is as much as the best grades are bringing. Hybrid teas are selling from 50 cents to $8 per hundred, a small number only reaching the higher figure. Carnations, which had a temporary boom for Mothers' day, have declined sharply and are now cheap. I have never seen flowers of better quality at this season. Sweet peas are seen in great numbers and prices continue low. Yellow marguerites are in the same position. Snapdragons are not in good demand, excepting pink. Tulips and narcissi are now grown outdoors; the season for the third will soon end. Lilies and callas are still glutty. Mignonette is practically unsalable. Pansies are cheap. Of Spanish iris there is a heavy supply. Gladiolus nanus finds a fair sale so far, as does the larger-flowered America.

Gardenias are of poor quality. Cattleyas have been selling exceptionally well. Asparagus meets with a good demand and all growers of bedding plants are on the jump.

Club Field Day.

The field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at the estate of General S. M. Weld, at Dedham, May 15, was a great success, there being an attendance of more than 100. The special feature here at present is the rock garden, unquestionably one of the finest of its kind in America. A rocky stream, opening out here and there into pools and spanned by rustic bridges, well protected and adequately shaded by trees, makes an ideal spot for the culture of great numbers of rock and alpine plants, and at the present time the showing of aubrietias, alyssums, primulas, violas, arabis, gentianas, silenes and a host of other beautiful spring plants, all tastefully planted, is most attractive.

There are other features of interest here, such as splendid specimen rhododendrons and standard wistarias, and many fine outdoor specimens of trees, shrubs and bulbous plants. A lunch was served by General and Mrs. Weld and short speeches were made, thanking them for their hospitality and the pleasure and profit derived from an inspection of their estate, which Thomas Coles, the superintendent, has in splendid shape.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 16, the day following the club's field day at the estate of General S. M. Weld, at Dedham, was well attended, there being about 100 present. A report was made of the field day and Thomas Coles, gardener to General Weld, was given a vote of thanks, as well as a cultural report of superior merit for his work in creating what is undoubtedly the finest rock garden in the country. As scheduled, Mr. Coles gave a splendid practical lecture on rock gardening, which was followed by a lengthy, animated discussion. The interest in the subject of the evening was unusually keen.

The exhibits included Statice Suworowi and Begonia knowsleyana, by Thomas Coles, who was given a report of merit for each. Robert Cameron, of Cambridge, received a report of merit for an exhibit of Fritillaria rubra maxima. W. N. Craig had a collection of hardy primulas and aubrietias.

The club voted a message of good cheer sent to Jackson Dawson, who is seriously ill. Three new names were added to the roster.

Various Notes.

Mothers' day brought a larger demand for flowers in Boston than in previous years, but it was noted that few people were wearing flowers. It is something of a rarity now to see anyone wearing flowers. One or two florists, one especially, advertised heavily, and a coöperative advertisement appeared in one of the Boston dailies, the money for this being collected by a representative of the paper and not by the growers, retailers and wholesalers themselves, as had better been the case. With one or two notable exceptions, all the mention of Mothers' day to be seen in the stores consisted of a cheaply printed poster pasted in the windows, which would hardly attract business.

The May flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society attracted a fair number of visitors from a distance, but the season was too strenuous a one for many to attend. Now that the experiment of holding a large May show has been tried out fairly, the management responsible for the show are no doubt convinced that, while the exhibition was a good one, it was not superior to the March show, where only one-third the money was offered in premiums. The general public will not take the same interest in exhibitions in a hall when the public gardens, parkways, arboretum and private estates have more attractive open-air displays.

Thomas F. Galvin did some Mothers' day advertising and had a good call for flowers. He made special features of Beauty roses, Spanish irises and white carnations.

S. J. Goddard finished planting out his carnations in the field May 15. He has purchased another parcel of land adjoining his carnation field. At the recent Boston show he exhibited some fine standard geraniums and fuchsias.

At Penn's the demand for Mothers' day was exceptionally heavy. The newspaper and attractive window advertising combined to boom sales remarkably. Their silver medal exhibit at Horticultural hall was the best of its kind I have seen there. Other retailers, I hope, will follow this example at other big succeeding shows.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. report a strong call for all colors of carnations and a fairly good call for roses for Mothers' day. Other flowers were not in special demand. This concern is making great preparations for Memorial day, which they expect will be a banner one for flower sales.

Yellow marguerites are seen in great numbers now in the Boston markets. Specially fine shipments are coming from James Wheeler, Natick; G. W. Simpson, Woburn, and William R. Nicholson, Framingham.

The Welch Bros. Co. states that Mothers' day gave a decided fillip to cut flower business and helped to clean up stock nicely.

Business at the seed stores is now slackening, but everyone had a strenuous time for some weeks. Local nurseries all had far more business than usual, but the scarcity of labor, added to freight embargoes on the railroads, made it hard to deliver orders. Quite a number of orders have been canceled for landscape work, owing to the high cost of labor.

May 14 was tulip day in the Boston public gardens, the beds being at their best. Specially fine were Pink Beauty, Proserpine, Duchess of Parma, Couleur Cardinal, White Joost van Vondel, Chrysolora and Keizerskroon.

Visitors last week included F. R. Pierson and J. R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, N. Y.; W. A. Manda, South Or-

At the Arnold Arboretum the display of malus is at its best this week. The lilacs should be in full beauty on or about May 28, and unless we get a severe heat wave there will be an abundance of them for Memorial day.

Boston will hold a large spring show in March, 1917. Schedules for this show have already been issued. Over $4,000 in premiums are offered and many additional specials will be added later.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

There was a large attendance at the monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, held at Glen Cove May 10. President James MacDonald presided and much routine business was transacted. Final arrangements were made for a tulip show May 19 and a rose show in June. It was found necessary to change the date of the rose show, which previously had been set for June 14, and it was left to the executive committee to set another favorable date. Ernest Westlake was appointed manager. While the main classes in these exhibitions will be for tulips and roses, as the case may be, there also will be classes provided for other seasonable flowers, plants and vegetables.

Secretary Gibson read a large number of letters which he had received, offering prizes for our autumn exhibitions. The essay, "Horticulture as a Profession, From the Standpoint of a Gardener," by John Johnson, from the National Association of Gardeners, was well received by the members.

The judges of the exhibits for the evening were Henry Gaut, James Gladstone and Harry Goodband, who turned in the following report: Gladioli, John W. Everitt, first; cauliflower, Robert Jones, first; pansies, Thomas Twigg, first; roses, honorable mention to John W. Everitt. Frank Dinda, of Farmingdale, exhibited cut flowers and plants of his novelty chrysanthemums, Alex Guttman and Emma, for which he was given the thanks of the society.

James McCarthy, Cor. Sec'y.

DAYTON, O.

Mothers' day business in Dayton and vicinity broke all records for that day since its inception, carnations, of course, being the favorites. These soon disappeared and flowers of all kinds were used. Many potted plants also found a lively sale. The florists all report a clean-up of everything salable early in the day.

The demand for bedding plants has commenced in earnest. The season promises to be the largest this city has ever had. Good geraniums are not any too plentiful here; many inferior ones are seen in the market. G. W. B.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles, Feb. 25, 1916. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

Auburn, Wash.—Robert Filby, formerly grower for Hopkins Bros., has been succeeded by Roy E. Erb, who until recently was propagator for Mrs. L. W. McCoy.

Seabright, Cal.—W. R. Woodard is a newcomer in the freesia bulb business. He is preparing to market his first commercial crop, with the intention of going in more extensively next year and of adding gladioli and other bulbs to his list.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Announcement is made of the marriage of Hilda Alice Richards and Clarence Vandeburg, at Montebello, May 11. The bride is the daughter of H. R. Richards, of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., who has many friends in the trade in the east as well as on the coast. Mr. Vandeburg is a rancher at Fullerton, where the couple will reside after a honeymoon in the mountains.

A SELECTION OF VARIETIES.

If you were planting 300 or 400 chrysanthemums, what varieties would you use so as to cover the full season?

C. F. B.—Wash.

I would suggest the following varieties: White—Smith's Advance, Early Frost, Mrs. Rager, Wm. Turner, Lynnwood Hall and White Dean. Yellow—Comoleta, Chrysolora, Robt. Halliday, Lena Baum, Nagoya and Dolly Dimple. Pink—Unaka, Chieftain and Maud Dean. These will follow each other in the order named and will cover the season.

A. V. AMET'S HEART.

Nowadays the clever designer in preparing a piece for any occasion tries to have, if possible, some sort of motif or idea embodied in his design that will harmonize with the circumstances of the occasion. This rather abstract phase of the designer's art is clearly typified in the design pictured in the accompanying illustration, which shows a heart-shaped piece made entirely of wild flowers and shrubbery picked from the hills around Santa Monica bay, in California. The piece was one of the floral tributes at the funeral of Judge J. J. Carrillo, who was the first mayor of Santa Monica. The deceased was a native of California and the idea was to produce a funeral piece that would be truly representative of the California outdoors near the late judge's home. With this end in view, wild flowers and shrubbery were gathered from the country around Santa Monica, and A. V. Amet, of Venice, Cal., made from the material the heart-shaped design shown in the illustration. The piece was 4x4½ feet. The inner heart was formed of bicolor lupines, blue, with gray tips, and the outer whorl consisted of Indian paint brush (painted cup, or castilleja?) The top of the heart carried native maidenhair and brodotias, and even the moss about the frame was from the Santa Monica region. The piece undoubtedly was strikingly appropriate as a floral tribute to a well-known and much respected Californian. Perhaps the only thing it needed was better arcs at the top, in order to conform more accurately with the lines of the proverbial St. Valentine's heart.

the week was the sweet pea, some splendid flowers having been on the market. Gladioli are increasing in quantity and improving in quality. Herbaceous and hardy stock generally is in good supply. Roses are poor in quality, extremely poor, in fact, for the season, and the price is down. A large quantity of outdoor stock was on the market and really was better than stock grown indoors. Carnations are of fair quality but not first-class, and there are enough of them to go around. In the retail stores funeral work has been the principal outlet for flowers and energy, some good work having materialized. A few weddings also have helped out. The greens situation is clearing a little, but there does not seem to be any great supply in sight.

Various Notes.

George W. Eischen was a visitor last week, looking up stock for his new store at Ocean Park. Mr. Eischen is well pleased with the business already done and says it is keeping up remarkably well.

George W. Smith has made many improvements in his store at Seventh and Figueroa streets. The new nursery at Beverley Hills is taking shape, a fine new lath house having been completed. The Wall street place is gradually being cleared out and the stock is being removed to the new location as fast as possible.

There is a good deal of local interest in a new rose called Los Angeles. It is being sent out by Howard & Smith. It is one of a number of seedlings grown at the nurseries of this firm, not unlike Willowmere in general appearance. It attracted attention at a flower show held at the Ninth and Olive streets store, which, by the way, is one of a series of clever advertising stunts arranged by Fred Howard. While no doubt they get the principal advantage of this advertising, it is a good thing for the trade all around, as it engenders an interest in floriculture generally, the value of which can hardly be overestimated.

Murata & Co. have been shipping an exceptionally fine line of America gladioli and other popular varieties. They report business fine for this season.

The California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. will be well supplied for Memorial day business. The Mrs. Francis King gladioli offered here are of exceptional merit.

Everyone who knew him heard with regret of the death of L. H. Fellows, lately of Fullerton, but more recently of Tucson, Ariz., where he had gone to try to regain his health. Mr. Fellows came here from the east many years ago and invested in land, as well as running a nursery and florists' business. He was for a time connected with the L. A. Floral Co. A genial, companionable man, well versed in horticulture and kindred topics, he will be missed by the many friends he made while here. His wife survives. The remains were brought from Tucson to Fullerton for interment.

Fine business for the season is the report of the Los Angeles Floral Co. The excellent system of packing and icing followed here and the careful timing of shipments to meet trains make the long-distance work successful.

H. W. Turner has put a new, handsome delivery car on the road. The color is the same as that of the rest of the equipment and the only decoration is his trade-mark, as used in his advertising.

The Radiance rose has proved a magnificent outdoor variety in the nurseries of the Germain Seed & Plant Co.

cool days held back certain varieties and a more active demand caused the supplies to clean up fairly well. Many white flowers were held in reserve for Mothers' day, although an effort was made by the local florists to get away from any particular flower or color as emblematic of that day. Ample stock is in sight for Decoration day and the local trade is looking forward to a record business.

Little change has taken place in the offerings. Roses are a drug on the market, but the cut shows signs of a slackening during the next week or two. As it is, really fine roses of some of the newer varieties are rather scarce. American Beauties are holding their own with remarkable persistency. Russell, Hadley, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty are all popular. Many Ulrich Brunner roses are being used, but the Killarneys are not so popular as formerly. The supply of carnations is holding up well and prices remain fairly steady. White carnations were a little scarce for several days and everything cleaned up well. A few dahlias are coming in, but the limited supply and rather poor quality keep them from being a feature in the market.

The America gladiolus is being received and the supply is readily absorbed, while many small gladioli are being shipped. Sweet peas are plentiful and the demand is large enough to leave no ground for complaint. Many good peonies still appear, but the crop is about over, after being in great favor for some time. There is plenty of miscellaneous stock, such as gypsophilas, cornflowers, mignonette, marigolds, stocks, statice, sweet williams, etc. Many fine lilies still are to be had. Spanish iris is going off crop. A nice cut of gardenias is coming in, but the demand is rather light. Potted stock moves fairly well and the offerings are not excessive by any means. They include a few rhododendrons, some fine French hydrangeas, a few rambler roses, primulas, etc.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society on the evening of May 6 showed a larger attendance than the preceding meeting, and several matters which had been under consideration for some time were disposed of. The amendments to the by-laws providing for the membership of persons interested in ornamental horticulture, but not connected with the business, and the establishment of a sinking or reserve fund, came up for final vote, and were carried after considerable discussion. A letter of thanks was read from Burns, the florist of San Rafael, in behalf of the Marin Floral Pageant for the prize offered by the society for the best group of flowering plants arranged for effect in the Marin county flower show, May 18 to 21.

An application for membership was submitted by Robert MacFarland, of San Rafael. The finance committee reported that some accounts are still outstanding for advertising in the convention program of last year. For the field day committee, D. Raymond announced that a field day would be held in San Rafael May 21, in conjunction with the flower show there on that date. He invited the members of the society to hold a field day any time, probably in September, at the Garden City Pottery Co. place at San Jose. A committee, consisting of H. Plath and A. J. Rossi, was appointed to confer with exposition officials about awards for exhibits, which have not been received by certain members. An invitation was extended to the members by the E. Gill Nursery Co., of West Berkeley, to attend its annual spring rose show.

Plans for the fall flower show came up for discussion and H. Plath and E. James reported that they had drawn up a provisional prize list, the schedule being the same as that of last year. The committee hopes to get the use of the Civic Auditorium free. Much interest is shown in the show and it promises to be one of the best ever arranged by the society. Announcement was made that the sweet pea show next month will be held in the Palace hotel.

The question box provided food for some interesting discussions at the close of the business session. The evening's exhibits made a good showing. The MacRorie-McLaren Co. received ninety-five points for some sprigs of Leptospermum Nichollii, an Australian shrub, which does well in California. A pot of French hydrangeas, by H. Plath, took ninety points, and a showing of several varieties of snapdragons, by J. A. Shilling, of San Mateo, took eighty-five points.

Various Notes.

The E. Gill Nursery Co., winner of the P. P. I. E. gold medal for roses, last week sent out invitations to members of the trade and their friends to attend its grand spring rose show to be held at the West Berkeley grounds, San Pablo and Marin avenues, May 19 and 20.

THE only commercial colored Freesia in the world. A truly wonderful novelty that took many years to produce. The above cut will give some idea of its beauty. It represents a bunch of only twelve sprays photographed side by side with my new GIANT WHITE. One glance will satisfy anyone of its wonderful commercial merit, and no words are necessary to describe it except to say that the bunches figured measure nearly three feet tall, not including the vase. It is much larger and stronger in every way than Purity, one of its parents; has the same fine habit of growth and is very fragrant.

I offer it in two shades of color, a bluish lavender and a reddish lavender. Only good-sized, flowering bulbs sold freesia bulbs since he issued his new catalogue.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is bringing in a nice cut of gardenias. They still are cutting quantities of Ulrich Brunner roses, but report really fine roses of the newer varieties rather scarce. This company is disposing of all its Killarneys, both white and pink, and is planting more Russell, Hadley, Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia roses. It is putting up two new houses.

M. H. Ebel came down from Sacramento, Cal., a few days ago. He reported business good in that city. Easter business, he said, was the best he ever had, and he anticipated some extra business during the Causeway celebration.

Sacramento florists are working on plans for a fall flower show, the date of which will be set soon. Growers are being impressed with the fact that they should go in with a view to increasing the demand for flowers, whether cash prizes are offered or not. S. H. G.

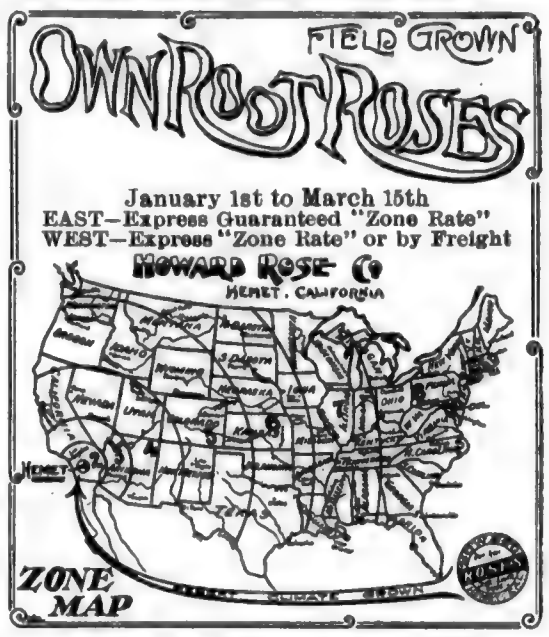
PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

An unusually late season has been further retarded by a series of cold rains, with several frosts—a condition that prevailed nearly all of last week. Serious damage was done to fruits, bedding stock and early garden truck. The florists' rule that May 1 is the proper date to put out porch decorations and beds did not prove a safe one this year. The weather held back the cut of carnations so that the shortage for Mothers' day was unusually acute. The cut of roses continued fairly heavy and the blooms were of prime quality.

Business for the week was good, taking all the stock offered. Outdoor flowers were more plentiful. Nurserymen who have had time to glance back at the results of the season's business express themselves as well satisfied. Collections, perhaps, are coming in better than last year. This is the last season that long-time extensions of credit will be generally permitted, as the new rules of the national association will be put into effect.

Various Notes.



Niklas & Son displayed some good potted schizanthus last week.

J. G. Kelly, of the Kelly Homestead Nursery, has been serving on the jury panel of the Circuit court for several weeks. His nursery is at Kelly's Butte and he has opened a sales office at Fourth and Main streets, the former location of the Epperson Nursery Co.

Mrs. Rahn, the wife of Albert Rahn, of the Rahn & Herbert Co., has been seriously ill and for a short time was at one of the hospitals.

J. A. Wilson, of the Wilson, Crout & Gehr Co., was hurriedly called to the telephone a few days ago by Fred Brotje, the driver of his delivery car, who had taken a load of stock to town. Fred reported that he had met with an accident and could not get back as soon as he expected. Mr. Wilson anxiously inquired: "Where are you now? What has happened?" "I am at the minister's and have just got married," was the reply. It was the most surprising "accident" Mr. Wilson ever heard of. Fred is a nephew of Julius Brotje and has the good wishes of his many friends.

Mothers' day business was good. Carnations were the greatest in demand, roses next and plants third. The bedding season is here and all the florists are extremely busy. Baskets and boxes are being filled in large numbers. Peonies have appeared in the market and indications are for a large crop of them for Decoration day.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons cut about 10,000 carnations for Mothers' day and sold all of them; in fact, they had to turn down orders. Business is good in plants.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

THE latest reports from Ollioules indicate that crops of merchantable bulbs will be short.

THE supply of lily of the valley pips in good condition is so small and in so few hands that prices are likely to advance steadily.

THE bulbs in the open appear to have bloomed as well as ever, in spite of the fact that bulb forcers complained of much blind stock.

ROUSTAN, SERVAN & Co., St. Remy, France, one of the ten seed firms accused of enemy trading, have been acquitted of the charge.

CATALOGUES of Holland bulbs recently received show many price corrections with pen and ink, all of them advances. The increases on narcissi are especially numerous.

PACKERS of peas in Utah, a comparatively new district for the packing of peas on a large scale, are said recently to have cleaned up a surplus of about 125,000 cases.

BUSINESS is good for May, but nevertheless it is the fag end of a season fraught with an unusual number of difficulties and not up to general expectations in the total sales.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, is one of the claimants to the right of way of the disused Illinois and Michigan canal, on both banks of which the seed concern owns property. A section of the canal is being filled in by interests seeking a test case in the courts.

THERE is a gradual departure from the use of the disclaimer, the employment of which was world-wide a few years ago. Grass seed is offered from Europe subject to a guaranteed analysis and now a Danish firm guarantees that all seeds in its sealed parcels are true to name.

GROUND has been broken for the first two units of the new plant of Northrup, King & Co., at Minneapolis. One of the warehouses is to be 74x302 feet, two stories and a basement. The main warehouse will be 100x300 feet, four stories, of concrete construction. In addition to these buildings there will be a cleaning house with grain tanks, a box factory, a garage and heating plant.

WILLIAM A. TAYLOR, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., states that there is no foundation for the rumor which has been current for some weeks that the government is to discontinue its bulb-growing experiments at Bellingham, Wash. Chief Taylor states: "Local changes of location are necessary to afford adequate facilities

The month of May is the proper time to sow seed of snapdragons for fall blooming. Plants started now from seed will be ready to bench in July. We strongly advise growing your own seedlings, as plants do not ship well in hot weather. We list the good ones as follows:

Seed of our famous Silver Pink (the 5-to-1 variety), at $1.00 per pkt., 3 for $2.50, 7 for $5.00.

Seed of Melrose, Garnet, Yellow, Buxton, Phelps' White and fancy mixed, at 35c per pkt., 3 for $1.00.

All orders cash. Free cultural directions. No plants to offer.

Stock is arriving for our new patented square dirt bands and pots. As soon as we can get our machinery by the freight embargoes we will be ready with samples. In the meantime we can furnish any size square plain band.

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming Giant Pansies

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and their unusual hardiness. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March, or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for autumn planting for early bedding, and early cut flowers supplied in yellow, white, sky blue, velvety purple, blue and mixture. Seed ready July 1.

PRICES of the better varieties of gladioli are higher in Holland today than they were before the war. Also, the supply is smaller.

JAMES VICK'S SONS, Rochester, report a heavy spring business. They are unusually busy at their wholesale store and are employing extra help to cope with the increased business. At the Stone street store they are doing a good retail business, both in seeds and plants, moving large quantities of stock. They have planned a more extensive acreage this year at their seed farm at Ogden, N. Y.

PARCEL POST SEEDS RELEASED.

Hearings have been resumed in the prize court at London, England, in regard to parcel post packages seized by the British authorities and a decision was rendered May 8 releasing to American importers represented by A. G. Hays consignments of garden and flower seeds taken from the Danish liner United States. The court followed the recent decision under which it released gloves for America on the deposit of their invoice price pending final determination of the facts concerning their purchase.

''ROCKY FORD'' MELONS.

Muskmelons of the Rocky Ford type, grown in localities other than Rocky Ford, Colo., may be labeled ''Rocky Ford,'' provided the name of the state or territory where the melons are produced is stated on the principal label, according to a recent decision of the U. S. Bureau of Chemistry. This decision was reached for the reason that the term ''Rocky Ford,'' as applied to muskmelons, has come to mean a particular type of muskmelon grown in various localities of the United States.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., are reorganizing their business to adapt it to the conditions of the period. A large warehouse will be built adjoining the railroad, affording additional facilities for storage and handling of garden seeds. ''We feel the loss of E. J. Sheap keenly,'' said Vice-president E. R. Reithmiller. ''He was a loyal and earnest worker and we esteemed him highly.''

The Mohrmann Seed Co., of Detroit, Mich., reports exceptionally good business at its two stores. The stores are handling a full line of hardy roses and shrubbery, but these require much time, which is hard to spare during the busy seed tide.

The Jones Seed Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., reports exceptionally good sales of heavy seeds. The company is fortunate in having about 1,000 bushels of seed corn of the 1914 harvest, which tests out almost 100 per cent germination, whereas the crop of 1915 tests out only about fifty per cent. ''We shall sell all our stock at retail, possibly around $4 per bushel. Even at $5 per bushel planters will get a more satisfactory return, and I shall not be surprised if $5 is not the average price before the season is over,'' commented Manager J. Beach.

George H. Hunkel, of Milwaukee, said: ''Hereafter we will let the other fellow handle onion sets and let him do the weeping.'' It is understood that

IMPROVEMENT

The biggest room in the world is the room for improvement. All of us know that whatever our line of business may be, there is room for improvement in it. Satisfaction in business means business decadence. This is especially true in the florists' business. There is more room for improvement in the flower business than in any business we know of. There are many ways to improve the business. One way is to improve the quality of flowers sold. This gives the public a better opinion of flowers. It pleases them. A florist in selling flowers must sell satisfaction with them or he is scheduled for the greased chute. He must sell his customers flowers that are attractive, refined and that will keep. One of the best flowers to sell your customers is white and pink lilies. They are beautiful, make a good display, they keep well and are the acme of refinement. Of course, they must be good lilies and good plants. If you are a grower and want such flowers and plants, get Ward's lily bulbs by all means. You can't get better and you might get worse.

Not how cheap but how good.

RALPH M. WARD & CO.
THE LILY HOUSE
71 Murray Street
NEW YORK

this has been an unprofitable season for onion sets for both the grower and seller.

The Currie Bros. Co., of Milwaukee, was exceedingly busy and expressed the opinion that the total business would show up satisfactorily at the end of the season. "Who says wax beans are scarce?" queried James Currie.

The H. W. Buckbee Seed Co., of Rockford, Ill., is optimistic, while R. M. Shumway, who has a large southern mailing trade and is able to form an earlier estimate of the total, reports an advance over previous years.

The Olds Seed Co., of Madison, Wis., reports excellent business from the catalogue trade. Counter sales are later than usual.

Piper Bros., of Madison, handle quantities of seed potatoes, which appear to be of good quality, considering the wet fall. The circumstances reminded Henry Piper of the story of a Mrs. Higgins, who was always grumbling. One day a friend congratulated her upon having the finest crop of potatoes in the village. The old lady retorted: "They're not so poor, but where are the bad ones for the pigs?" W. M.

TEXAS BERMUDA ONION CROP.

Reports and telegrams received in the U. S. Bureau of Crop Estimates indicate that the total production of onions in Texas will be about 4,650 carloads of 460 bushels each, as follows: Webb county, 2,250 cars; Lower Rio Grande Valley, 350 cars; Dimmit and Zavalla counties, 1,550 cars; Lasalle, Frio and Atascosa counties, 400 cars; and scattering, 100 cars.

March 7 the bureau issued a report as of March 1 on the Texas onion crop, estimating the acreage at 10,657 acres, the condition at 65.6 per cent of a normal crop, and the yield per acre at 230 bushels, indicating a total yield of 5,328 cars of 460 bushels each, and stated that a revision would be made as of April 1. Accordingly, April 4 a revised report was issued, and it appearing that the acreage in Nueces and San Patricio counties had been overestimated, owing to a lack of information as to methods of planting, and that a reduction of 200 acres seemed advisable in Webb county, such reductions were made. The revised acreage was stated to be 10,057 acres, the condition fifty-five per cent, a reduction of 10.6 points, forecasting a yield per acre of 192.5 bushels, the equivalent of 4,200 cars of 460 bushels each.

The demand for a further revision was so persistent that a special onion condition schedule was sent into Texas to be returned April 15, and April 20 a revised condition report was issued, the condition estimated at fifty-eight per cent of a normal crop, an increase of three points over April 1, forecasting a yield per acre of 203 bushels, the equivalent of 4,438 cars of 460 bushels each.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

D. Hill Nursery Co., Inc., Dundee, Ill.—Two catalogues, one of them a special list of boxwoods, bay trees, araucarias, window-box plants, evergreens, etc.; the other a wholesale list of general nursery stock, ranging in size from large specimens to young stock for lining out.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

THE force of laborers at the D. Hill nursery, Dundee, Ill., has been between 125 and 150 per day this spring. The company maintains a camp for its workers.

THE Lookout Nursery, of Chattanooga, Tenn., has been capitalized at $10,000, with S. R. Howell, F. D. Landis, W. L. Frierson, Fred Grindler and L. M. Coleman as incorporators.

THE American Peony Society will hold its annual meeting and exhibition at New York June 9 to 11. Copies of the premium list will be sent to any nurseryman who writes George W. Nash, secretary New York Horticultural Society, Bronx park, New York city.

C. R. BURR, manager of the C. R. Burr & Co. nurseries, Manchester, Conn., recently found trouble in getting laborers at $2.50 per day, so he consulted with a state labor commissioner, who discovered that there were idle men at Norwich. Mr. Burr went to Norwich, engaged seventeen men and carried them to Manchester by automobile. He could not find a boarding place for the men, so the old office building was fitted up as a bunkhouse. A cook was hired and the place became a merry spot. Later Mr. Burr went to Waterbury for twenty more men. When the Burr nurseries need men, they need them badly.

CENSORING SHIPPING PAPERS.

In further explanation of the British Orders in Council issued May 6, 1916, in reference to the examination of shipping documents by the British censor and saving valuable time in transmission of these papers to American importers, the British embassy at Washington has sent out the further statement as follows:

"It will, however, not be practicable to carry out the arrangements contemplated unless the documents, whether bills of lading, consular invoices, or other similar papers, are forwarded unaccompanied by any other mail matter, in special bags labeled or marked 'shipping documents.' These bags shall be forwarded by the vessel carrying the cargo to which the documents in question relate." Curtis Nye Smith.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS.

The federal statute which authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to establish, by regulations to be made by him from time to time, quarantine boundaries against dangerous plant diseases and insect pests, and forbids common carriers to receive for transportation goods covered by such regulations unless such goods have been inspected and the package containing them is certified by the proper officers, was involved in a recent case of the United States versus the Adams Express Co., in the District court of Massachusetts. court decided that the information filed by the government against the defendant, charging that a shipment of uninspected "deciduous nursery stock" had been received for transportation, was incorrect, it appearing that there were no quarantine regulations or notice specifying such stock. The court said:

"The statute itself does not forbid shipments of 'deciduous nursery stock,' which is the expression used in the information. It provides, in substance, that the Secretary of Agriculture shall promulgate regulations specifying, among other things, what classes of nursery stock are subject to quarantine, and that it shall be illegal for a common carrier to receive for transportation 'any class of nursery stock specified in the notice of quarantine,' except such as has been inspected and certified in the prescribed manner. The quarantine regulations in question in this case were issued by the Secretary of Agriculture June 24, 1913. 'Deciduous nursery stock' was not specified therein, nor was the notice sufficiently broad to cover everything that could properly be so described." S.

W. P. STARK'S REJOINDER.

William P. Stark, owner of the W. P. Stark Nurseries, Neosho, Mo., against whom a suit has been filed by the Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., of Louisiana, Mo., alleging unfair methods of competition, as reported in The Review for May 11, last week explained his side of the controversy as follows:

"I own more than one-fourth of the capital stock of the Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co. at Louisiana, and I went there May 3 to visit the nurseries and see how the business was getting along. I talked to my brother, E. W. Stark, president of the company; my nephew, Lloyd C. Stark, vice-president, and my nephew, Paul C. Stark, assistant secretary, and also the other officers of the company. My conferences with them were pleasant and agreeable.

"While I was in Louisiana a constable handed me a copy of what purported to be a petition and summons to the Louisiana Court of Common Pleas at the September term of the court. The so-called petition was amusing and absurd.

"When I left the Louisiana company several years ago I went to Neosho, Mo., and some time thereafter organized the William P. Stark Nurseries "Far from making any effort to confuse the public as to the two companies, I placed on my letterheads the following: 'We have no connection with any company of similar name.' I followed the same idea in our catalogues, circulars and all other forms of advertising. We have never filled any orders at Stark City that were intended for Louisiana.

"The policy of our company has been to attend to our own business. Whether or not I have a right to use my name in conducting my own business is a matter for the lawyers and courts to decide. I have always assumed that a man could use his own name in his own business.

"In the suit at Louisiana the company alleges that in our publications we have used the expression: 'You cannot forget our address—the town is named after our nurseries.' It seems to me that this would indicate that we were not try-

Belle Washburn THE BEST RED CARNATION

Plants in 2½-inch pots, ready for bench or field

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; also of Silver Medal of S. A. F. and O. H., at St. Louis, 1916. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family.

Price of 2½-inch plants is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate ing to confuse the public as to the Louisiana company, but to the contrary.

"The relief which is asked in this suit is that my son and I be ordered to cease using our names in the nursery business, and that we be ordered to cease using the Stark City address. Stark City is a postoffice established by the government, for which my son and I are not responsible, except that we have 500 acres of nurseries at that place. Neither did we give ourselves the names we bear, and we hardly think any court would require us to change them."

William P. Stark for more than a third of a century has been prominently engaged in American horticulture. He formerly was president of the American Association of Nurserymen.

E. W. Stark, president of the Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchards Co., issued the following statement in reply to W. P. Stark's rejoinder:

"W. P. Stark evades the vital issues of our bill. We were forced to take this action after continued infringements and damaging practices against our business and our reputation. Briefly, we have entered suit against William P. Stark, of Neosho, Mo., to restrain him from practicing methods of unfair competition, deceptive advertising, infringement upon our trademark, 'Stark Trees,' and asking that he be enjoined from so doing and a referee be named to assess damages."

The Market.

During the early part of last week business in the cut flower market was only fair. The demand for Mothers' day was nothing extraordinary. Stock in general was in good supply and there was no shortage, even of white carnations, of which there were enough to supply all demands and still leave a few. Prices ranged from $2 to $5 per hundred. The colored varieties sold at $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Good whites sold fairly well, but many of inferior quality remained. Roses have shortened in supply and the demand for them has fallen off. Peas are plentiful, and they are moving slowly, even at reduced prices.

There is quite a surplus of lilies, both Easter and calla. These have held on longer than usual this season and both varieties are hard to move at any price. Many Darwin and May-flowering tulips are to be had at practically the buyers' prices. The market of this city does not take kindly to bulbous stock after Easter Sunday and many florists find it hard to move. Greens are becoming more plentiful and prices have receded somewhat.

Various Notes.

The Flower Mart, held under the auspices of the Women's Civic League, at the base of Washington's monument, May 10, was a success. The following

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Although preparations had started for Mothers' day a week prior to the event, there were not nearly enough carnations for the occasion. As other flowers were substituted, they also cleared readily. Beauties were a little more abundant than in the previous week, but, although the quality was not extra good, they sold with no difficulty. Other varieties of roses also cleared rapidly. On Saturday night at the wholesalers' closing time there was little more stock to be had, with the exception of a few daisies and some lilies. Carnations, as was expected, were extremely scarce. Peonies, however, have returned. Easter lilies were plentiful and the demand was rather slow. Callas were not so abundant and they continued to clear fairly well. Sweet peas were as popular as anything for corsages. They, too, experienced a great demand. Snapdragons could be had, but were mostly inferior in quality. Daisies were plentiful, but the demand was irregular. Calendulas, mignonette and myosotis were available in moderate quantities. Valley and orchids were on the scarce side.

Jonquils and daffodils are done for. The indoor stock is a thing of the past, while the outdoor output is poor. Good gardenias are available and the demand is active. Spanish iris is always in great demand, but the supply is not large as yet. Pansies are selling well. Gladioli are clearing daily. Greens of all kinds are available, with the exception of smilax, which has been scarce for the last three weeks.

"Sold out," was the Mothers' day plea from the growers to the wholesalers. Everything went along nicely as long as the carnations lasted, but these were sold out early Sunday morning and then the demand turned to sweet peas and roses. As the supply of those was none too large, they also were sold out soon. The last resort was gardenias. The price of these was a trifle more than the average customer cared to spend, but toward the last there was no hesitation even about them. In fact, all kinds of cut flowers were sold out. Then it was a case of pushing the plants, which was done with little difficulty.

It is evident that the business for Mothers' day is increasing yearly and better preparation must be made in order to supply the public desire.

Various Notes.

E. J. Fancourt was a recent visitor to Buffalo. He reports that business is excellent.

Jerry Brookins was kept on the jump all last week, picking sweet peas and getting them ready for the market. His daily picking averages high in the thousands. A. E.

GRAFTED ROSES

NEW ROSE
"CLEVELAND"

The true Rose-pink; a color that positively glows under artificial light. It is well to be cautious in buying new Roses, but it is easily possible to be too cautious and let the "other fellow" buy the cream, while you are waiting to be sure the "newcomer" will sell. A new Rose with merit always makes its own market. Cleveland won two Silver Medals last fall and the Silver Medal at the International Flower Show in New York last spring, as the best new Rose. It has petalage enough to make it an all-year Rose, a valuable consideration when you want a pink that will stand the summer sun as well as open freely in midwinter. Our stock is limited this year. We have only to sell, so get aboard early and get your stock. Price, $35.00 per 100; $300.00 per 1000 for first-class 3-inch plants. When these plants are gone we will not have any more to sell for another year, as I refuse to injure the vitality of a variety by overpropagation.

All other standard varieties, except Double Pink and Double White Killarney: $15.00 per 100; $125.00 per 1000.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Market.

Trade last week was fairly active, with plenty of stock to meet the requirements. Roses and carnations are plentiful. Snapdragons and sweet peas are in fair supply and prices are low.

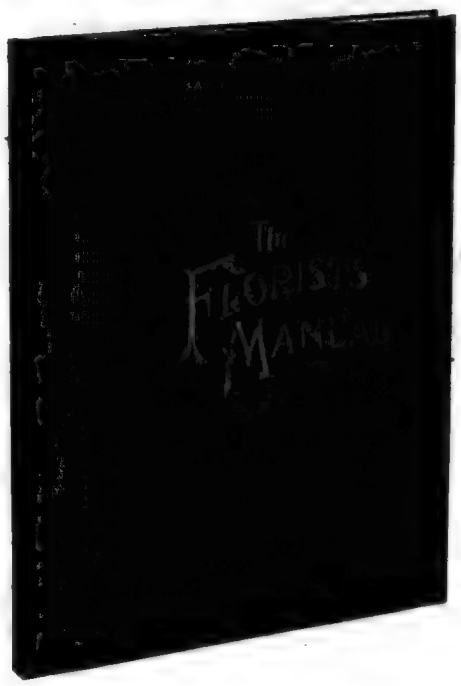
The call for bedding stock is unusually large. The downtown stores' demand for window boxes bids fair to exhaust the local supply of potted plants, ferns and vines.

Mothers' day proved a record breaker. Not only did white carnations sell well, but the demand for carnations of all colors and for roses, as well as other flowers, was greater than formerly. Many persons preferred the flower that individual taste suggested, which made it easier for the florist and more satisfactory for the purchaser.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Rose Waltman, of Davenport, says she made a special effort on boxes of spring flowers for Mothers' day, with most satisfactory results.

Miss Tearney, of the Bills Floral Co., says it was the biggest Mothers' day they ever had, flowers of all kinds and colors selling well.



Mrs. Forber, of Forber & Bird, Davenport, reports a big sale of white carnations, but found it easy to sell other colors and other flowers. They report the demand for window boxes and bedding stock unusually large.

Henry Pauli, of Davenport, reports business unusually good and, while white carnations were in big demand and he could have sold more if he had had them, the demand for flowers of other kinds was good. He reports bedding stock and window boxes selling well but cold, wet weather holding back orders for immediate delivery.

A number of Davenport churches observed Mothers' day with special services, each person in attendance receiving a white carnation.

Wm. Knees, of Moline, reports Mothers' day sales as big. White carnations were in demand, but roses as well as pink carnations sold well.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Mothers' day business was good. The heavy demand cleaned up practically everything in the market at a good price. The demand from out-of-town customers was exceptionally large. Roses and carnations are each in heavy supply. The Easter lily market is still rather crowded. Sweet peas are in good supply and Spanish irises meet with a good demand. Gladioli are excellent and are selling well, the offerings including both local greenhouse-grown stock and outdoor cuts from the south. Other offerings include orchids, valley, snapdragons and cape jasmines. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some fine greenhouse-grown gladioli from William Gardner, of Newcastle, Ind., and outdoor batches from the south.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bruggemann spent several days of this week in Cincinnati and vicinity.

The William Murphy Co. reports that last week's business was the largest Mothers' day business it ever had.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schlachter celebrated the silver anniversary of their wedding May 13. C. H. H.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

A more awkward time could not have been set for Mothers' day than this year's. All the growers were found short of stock. The demand for flowers was unprecedented and, although most of the florists in the cities thoroughly comprehended the importance of the occasion, those in the towns and smaller places left ordering until the last moment and in most instances could not secure five per cent of the stock they needed. Orchids, valley and sweet peas were much in demand and prices were slightly better than those of last year.

Spring is moving slowly and rains have been so frequent that planting out has not yet begun. The labor problem is troublesome and, although higher wages are now paid than in the history of the flower business in Canada, the conditions are anything but hopeful. W. G. P.

Columbus, O.—Four large greenhouses are being erected on East Main street by the John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago. S. S. Myers is the buyer.

ROBERT CRAIG CO., 4900 Market St. (Branch: Norwood, Pa.) PHILADELPHIA, PA

COLUMBUS, O.

Business was heavy here for Mothers' day. While white carnations were in great demand, there were not so many orders for them booked ahead, which was well, as a white carnation was the one flower that was not much in evidence. There was a large crop of roses, with valley from outdoors. Sweet peas, lilies and roses were especially fine, and when the people saw there was little chance of getting white carnations they went after anything. From all reports, each item was cleaned up in fine shape.

There was a good lot of potted plants that came in for a share of the business, such as hydrangeas, spiræas, tuberoses, begonias, potted roses and even geraniums. There were a number of porch boxes ordered up for the occasion—it was not a day for white carnations alone.

The trade is exceedingly busy with bedding plants, porch boxes, etc., and most of the florists are swamped with work. Geraniums are in great demand and there are more of them than ever before. Everyone reports business heavy, with a number of June weddings looming up to keep things moving after planting time. J. M.

LANCASTER, PA.

The regular monthly meeting of the Lancaster Florists' and Gardeners' Employees' Fraternity was held at the Chamber of Commerce rooms with a good attendance. Seven new members were admitted, increasing the membership to sixty.

Prof. John Weimer addressed the members on "Fraternity" and Alphius Peters, who attended the National Flower Show at Philadelphia as a delegate of the association, gave a splendid report. Mr. Peters firmly believes that Lancaster county carnations can not be beaten.

John Weiss, L. Brenner, E. Geiter, H. Brenner and A. Peters, the committee to arrange the Grand Flower Festival, to be held May 27, at Third and Coral streets, Lancaster, submitted a favorable report. The festival will be held for the benefit of the death fund of the society. A special meeting of the society will be held May 23 for the final arrangements of the festival.

Long Branch, N. J.—Walter Lindhart, of the firm of Lindhart & Sodemann, welcomed the arrival of a male heir at his home April 23.

Morristown, N. J.—The members of the Morris County Florists' and Gardeners' Association will assist in the flower show to be given by the Garden Club in June.

HYDRANGEAS FOR SUMMER BLOOMING

We have an unusually fine stock of these plants, which have been kept dormant during the winter and are now starting into growth. They will begin to bloom in July and will remain in flower during August. These plants are in great demand at summer resorts for lawn and piazza decoration. We offer the following varieties in 14-inch tubs:—Otaksa and the new French varieties, Avalanche, Fraicheur, E. G. Hill, La Lorraine, Mme. Maurice Hamar, Mme. E. Mouillere, Mlle. Rene Gaillard and Radiance, $2.00 to $3.00 each.

Also Otaksa, very large, fine symmetrical specimens in half-barrels, unusually heavily budded, $10.00 to $15.00 each.

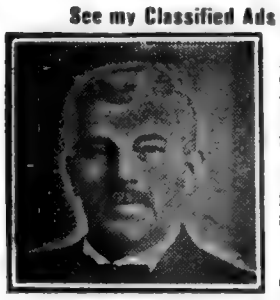
Only a Few Thousand Plants for Sale at Any Price.

MAIL US YOUR ORDER TODAY.



Grow this canna and you will never grow any other yellow canna with green foliage. Flowers larger than King Humbert, lightly spotted red; not affected by sun and heavy rains; five and six clusters, larger than a peck measure, on one stalk. A very healthy grower. Plant design beds with red and yellow King Humbert Canna, same as red and yellow coleus, and you will have a wonderful show. Florists who have seen this canna growing on our place, say without exception, that it leads anything for show and rank growing and free blooming they have ever seen. Received Certificate of Merit at New York Flower Show. Do not fail, under any circumstances, to try at least a few plants. Order today.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¾ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

MOSTLY FOR PROPAGATING.

I have a house 36x75, which I have been heating to a temperature of 52 degrees without forcing the boiler. I wish to build another house, 15x30, placing it so it will run parallel with the present house, only it will be six feet away and the east end of it will join the boiler room on the west. I wish to heat the new house to 60 degrees in zero weather. Please tell me how to pipe it. It will be used for propagating geraniums and coleus, for starting vegetable plants, and for ferns. It will contain two side benches and one center bench. The walls will be entirely of concrete and will be five feet high. The pipe to be used is all 2-inch and a hot water system is used. Will gate valves be needed in each house, and how many, to keep the right temperature? F. C. F.—Ind.

To heat the proposed house, 15x30, to 60 degrees, we would run a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each plate and connect each of these flow pipes at the farther end of the house with a coil of four 2-inch returns, placed under the side benches. With a downhill system of piping, there will be no occasion for any air valves if the highest point in each flow pipe is connected with the expansion tank. Without knowing how the pipes in the present house are arranged, we cannot advise definitely regarding the number and location of the gate valves. It is generally a good plan to have either a gate or an angle valve upon each of the flows. Unless a break in the system occurs, there is seldom any occasion for valves on the returns.

WOULD OVERTAX THE FLOW.

We have a greenhouse 32x100, heated with hot water on the downhill system. The piping consists of one flow and six returns on each side, and four flows and four returns in the center. This piping heats the house with ease. We should like to add a house 20x50, at one side, and heat it by placing returns in it and connecting the returns with one of the side flows in the present house. We want a temperature of 60 degrees in the new house, in zero weather. Can this plan be carried out and how many 2-inch returns will be needed? The side flows are 2½-inch. J. A. F. & S.—O.

The present radiation is well planned so far as the side coils are concerned, and we would not care to make the change just as suggested. The flow pipes now supplying the side coils are providing for 450 square feet of radiating surface, which is the maximum amount that can be handled to advantage by a 2½-inch flow pipe. The new house should have about 400 square feet of radiation and for this two separate 2½-inch flow pipes should be provided.

If there is no glass in the side walls of the house 32x100, two of the flow pipes in the middle of the house can be spared and it is suggested that the returns to which they are now connected be joined to the other two flow pipes. If these flow pipes are carried overhead, the two spare ones can be cut off at a point even with the end of the new house, and carried into that house just below the level of the plate. Each of these flow pipes may be used to supply a coil of 2-inch pipes, located on the walls. To give a temperature of 60 degrees with hot water, a house 20x50, with one wall exposed but having no glass in the wall, will require seven 2-inch returns in the coil on the outside wall and six returns on the inner wall.

In case these two flow pipes are removed from the present house, which

What Makes Merit?

The value of the advertising space in a periodical depends first of all upon the way that periodical is regarded by those for whom it is published. Anybody who has the price can print a paper—it is not so easy to get it read. That is why letters like these have a value:

I could not begin to tell you how much I enjoy every issue of The Review, but I read every number from cover to cover. Your report of the National Flower Show at Philadelphia certainly was complete and I was able to enjoy the show almost as much as if I had been there. As for the illustrations, well, they were fine!—Robert W. Yeo, North Bergen, N. J., April 12, 1916.

We have the pleasure to inform you that we always are interested by The Review, as in it we are able to see communications regarding the horticulture of the world. Indeed The Review is the very best journal in this line.—Saitama Engei & Co., Ltd., Tokyo, Japan, March 29, 1916.

Sending out free copies to those who don't care enough about a paper to pay for it does not bring letters like the above. Nor does a free circulation produce results for advertisers like the following:

You receive so many compliments from advertisers in The Review, about good results obtained, that we are afraid you will not care very much for our mite of acknowledgment. But to state facts: We owe The Review the establishment of our business. The kind information you have given us at times has helped us along wonderfully and last year, when the time came to offer our stock for the first time, we concluded to advertise in The Review only. The expenses for that year's ads were $8.40, and this year $7.20. As for the results: Last year we sold over 6,000 bulbs; this year so far, over 12,000, and the few we have left will surely go with another two insertions of a classified ad.—Gerbing Floral Garden Co., Fernandina, Fla., April 12, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

Benj. Dorrance Greenhouses, Dorranceton, Pa., equipped with a "Detroit" System.

Here is a device you need

Are you wasting millions of heat units a year?

If you are not utilizing your condensation, you are wasting heat and therefore money.

This waste can be easily overcome by the use of the "Detroit" System—simple, automatic, economical.

There are thousands of gallons of water condensed in your steam system each year. This condensation can be returned to the boilers and converted into steam again by a small amount of heating.

Here is a simple illustration of the importance of condensation: First draw cold water out of a tap into a teakettle, place it on the stove and watch how long it takes before steam begins to issue from the spout.

If you draw the water from the hot water tap very near the boiling point, in an instant you have steam. And it takes only one-tenth the time and fuel.

Stop and realize how much more fuel is used when a great amount of cold water is drawn into the boilers to be converted into steam.

There is no harder place to test the worth of a steam trap than in the heating plant of a greenhouse.

With the "Detroit" System condensation is removed from the pipes above or below the water level in the boiler. There is no pumping necessary, and it is automatically returned.

Choose the "Detroit" System, because it has the most efficiency. It delivers the condensation to the boilers at a temperature at which it has been made liquid. Unlike the pump, it does not wait for it to cool.

Let our experts show you how a "Detroit" System is adapted to your particular needs.

They have had years of experience in the handling of steam trap installations.

You can investigate the results of this device without obligation or cost.

Ask about System No. 5-A.

can be done without impairing the efficiency of the system, and are run overhead in the new house, it will only be necessary to use six and five returns, respectively, in the wall coils. We advise that the flows run downhill and that the expansion tank be connected with the highest point in the system.

BETTER USE LARGER RETURNS.

Please tell me how to pipe a greenhouse 12x100, using 2-inch pipe for flows and 1½-inch pipe for returns, to get a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather. There will be two feet of glass in the sides, and three feet of wall below the glass will be boarded. The ridge will be about nine feet high. How many square feet of radiation will be required for 50 degrees at zero? This is the way I figure the piping for the house: Run two 2-inch flows under the ridge to the far end and then drop them under the benches, so that one flow will feed four runs of 1½-inch pipe on the west side of the house and the other flow will feed three runs of 1½-inch pipe on the east side. What temperature would that piping give? If that plan is not correct, please suggest a better way. How should a boiler for this house be rated?

W. R. D.—Pa.

The radiation suggested in the inquiry is exactly the same as we figured it out independently from the data given. The actual radiation will be not far from 350 square feet, and, while different makes of boilers are rated differently, it will most likely be safe if a boiler rated at 450 to 500 square feet of radiation is selected. Unless the top of the boiler is considerably below the returns, or the water is carried under pressure, we prefer to use 2-inch pipes for the returns in houses over seventy-five or eighty feet long. While the sizes suggested would give good results, we would prefer to use six 2-inch returns, and five would answer for 50 degrees in all except the coldest weather.

The Market.

Delightful weather for the last two weeks seems to have had a good effect on the flower business. Narcissi and tulips are at their best; lilacs are in bloom and this week will bring the first of the local peonies, but it seems that the sight of the outdoor flowers only causes the people to buy more than formerly. Mothers' day was a big day for the florists. Each year it gets better and it can now be classed with St. Valentine's day as a cut flower day. Of course carnations were in greatest demand and they were the only flowers which advanced in price, but everything that looked like a flower was sold, and by Saturday night the wholesalers closed with empty refrigerators.

The retail stores that do a plant business are certainly busy, now that the warm weather has arrived, and all want their porch boxes at the same time. The local growers were kept back in their planting, as the wet weather prevented them from getting the ground ready, but all now have their stock of carnations planted out. There is some difficulty in getting labor, as the mills are paying common labor much more than florists can afford to pay, for there does not seem to be so much money in the flower business as in making ammunition.

Various Notes.

Schenley park has been a blaze of glory since the tulips have come into bloom. The delightful effects of tulips planted among shrubbery and in the grass—colonies of them distributed all over the park—certainly are showing the people the proper way to get the best results. This arrangement is much more beautiful than planting in the form of crosses, anchors and what not, as one usually sees them.

William Turner, on Sunday, May 14, helped his father and mother to celebrate their golden wedding. Every member of the family was present, as there has not been a death among the children or grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Langhans motored to Washington, D. C., last week, to see the graduation of their daughter, Miss Marion, who has been a pupil at Chevy Chase.

Capt. John H. Elliott, at one time in business in this city, died May 11. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column. Clarke.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

There was a large sale of bedding plants last week. Thousands of baskets of pansy plants were brought into the market and sold. Potted geranium plants are more plentiful than they have been, as well as potted heliotropes, double petunias, etc. Rambler roses have been popular. Both yellow and white daisies have been plentiful and have sold well. Forget-me-nots were more abundant during the last week or ten days than at any other time this season. There are some irises in the market, but they are not at all plentiful. Primulas, snapdragons and begonias are in considerable demand. Sweet peas are as popular as ever and large quantities of them are sold. Their quality is fine and their prices reasonable.

Carnations were of excellent quality last week. Whites brought a high price for Mothers' day, making $8 per hundred. The high prices of carnations on special occasions of late have caused much unfavorable talk on the part of the retailers.

Purple lilacs now are coming in abundantly. There is but little of the white variety seen in the market here. Valley is of fine quality.

Various Notes.

W. R. James reports business as being good. As a part of his window display last week he had a window box filled with flowers and painted in the city's anniversary colors, orange and black.

Richard Youell has returned from a two weeks' stay at his summer home at Atlantic Highlands, where he went for a short rest following the Easter season.

Joseph D. Kroehl, Jr., has been confined to his home for the last three weeks with an attack of rheumatism.

M. Gahr has moved from 311 Springfield avenue across the street to 312. The new quarters are larger than the former and are unusually well lighted by means of a skylight in the rear.

Charles Luthy finds business slow compared with what it was before Easter. His Easter business was exceptionally good, however, only one plant remaining of his large Easter stock.

R. B. M.

Las Animas, Colo.—A. C. Hartman says the season now drawing to an end is the best within his experience, the spring trade having been particularly good. Easter was satisfactory, the demand for plants and cut flowers being about even.

The Market.

The last two weeks were record-breakers in the sales of bedding plants. Salvias, good geraniums, petunias, and, in fact, most of the bedders, are well cleaned up, with the demand as heavy as at the beginning. Stock was, on the whole, better this season than I have ever seen it before. This may be the reason why it moved so rapidly, but the weather has had its effect. It seemed as if summer never would come, but now that it has it probably will stay. The only complaints are of the lack of rain.

This has been an iris and peony year. I have never seen finer peonies at an exhibition than in private gardens during the last week.

The cut-flower trade keeps up well, there being little that does not move at a good figure. The spring entertaining season is on and has helped business. Then school commencements have cut some figure. The best sellers in plants this season have been salvias, Poitevine geraniums, petunias, cannas and then red geraniums and the general range of plants. Snapdragons are growing in popularity, while lantanas are on the wane. The call for cannas is heavier than it has ever been and many are asking for varieties by name. Vincas are among the plants that are losing their popularity.

Various Notes.

The irises at the Hillcrest School Farm are attracting many visitors. There are more than 100 varieties in bloom at present. They still have a few late daffodils.

Tom Joy has been away with the Boosters' Club for a week, making a tour of the surrounding cities. His brother, Harold, took his place as manager of the store while he was away. They report a heavy plant business, most of their good stock having sold.

I visited the Geny Bros. houses last week and was surprised by their emptiness. Two weeks ago the houses were full of plants of all kinds. Oscar is much improved in health.

Floyd Bralliar has an acre or so planted to up-to-date cannas. He plans selling the plants to the trade.

I noticed great improvement in some of the city parks this spring. Mr. McBride is trying to make the parks more educational as well as more beautiful.

McIntyre Bros. report a clean-up of salvias in all but small-sized plants. They tried this season to propagate enough for all comers, but the trade was too heavy. F. B.

DETROIT.

The market was turned topsy-turvy by Mothers' day. About $500 were spent in advertising and calling this day to the attention of the people. The advertisements were run in the daily papers and any florist who cared to contribute was assessed according to the amount of business he did annually and his location.

The carnation growers who supplied the demand agreed among themselves to insist on $8 per hundred for carnations for Mothers' day. The price and the idea of the growers forming this sort of temporary combine did not appeal to the retailers at all; many refused to handle any carnations at all. Those who did put in a supply, however, realized well on them, as the blooms sold like hot cakes at $2 per dozen. Still, the writer is of the opinion that many bad friends were made when such an exorbitant price was charged for carnations, the quality of which was poor, as the stock had been pickled.

The call, however, was not for carnations alone. Everything sold, even to Boston ferns. By Sunday noon most of the stores closed because of the lack of stock or facilities with which to handle the orders, as no special preparations had been made. "A second Easter," is how many retailers described Mothers' day. Next year an effort must be made to get the public out of the notion that carnations are the only appropriate flowers for the day. H. PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Although weddings and funeral work kept the trade busy last week, Mothers' day gave a decided impetus to the business of the week and caused a dearth of white flowers. Notwithstanding that the florists made little effort to advertise the day, the occasion brought results that were highly satisfactory.

Potted and bedding plants were especially active. Prices ranged about normal.

Various Notes.

The Quidnick Greenhouses were incorporated last week by Courtland C. Earle, Marten Schoolman and Robert M. Lamont, all of Coventry. The capitalization is $30,000.

Florists donated generously to Baby Flower day, Saturday, May 13, for the benefit of a hospital.

Conrad Schultz, of Westerly, was a business visitor to Boston last week.

A legacy of $5,000 was left to Frederick C. Hoffman, of Pawtucket, by the will of his late brother, William H. Hoffman.

George W. Fraser has taken over the Westcott greenhouses on Public street.

The foundation of a new office building and show room has been put in by Laurence Hay, at Rumford.

E. E. Howard has opened a store at 261 Weybosset street.

The Quidnick Greenhouses have started the erection of three new houses, two of which each will be 35x250 feet and the third, a propagating house, 20x200 feet.

Oakley & Powers have opened a store for the sale of plants for Memorial day, on Empire street. W. H. M.

THE FUNNY SIDE OF LIFE.

Nearly every florist has been pestered by the man or woman customer who wants $2 worth of professional advice for a smile or with a quarter's worth of Beauties. It happens in the best of families. Some are tickled by such occurrences; others merely say: "And then they shoot men like Lincoln." Here are two stories, rather tame, by George Hammer, of Van Horn, Ia., vouched for by him as being true to life:

"One day a gentleman came in, looked all over the place, priced many things, taking up about two hours of valuable time, and finally asked for a bucket of 'dirt,' saying: 'I just received some plants from Blank & Co. I tell you they are fine.' The nerve of some people! Why couldn't he patronize the home trade?"

"A young man recently ordered flowers to be delivered at the home of a bride. Time flew by, but there was no payment of the bill. One day I met the young man's father. I mentioned the unpaid bill. Thereupon he turned on me angrily and said: 'You're a fine business man, you are! You send bill after bill, although the account has been paid long ago.' A little inquiry, however, brought out the information that the young fellow had obtained a money order for the amount due and was carefully keeping it, thinking it was a receipt. The next day I received the money order, and I mailed a receipt, as customary. Now father, son and relatives have declared a feud."

ROOTING BEGONIA CHATELAINE.

Can you tell me what to do with old Chatelaine begonia plants? How and when should they be propagated?
A. F. J.—Mass.

If you have no special use for the old plants, throw them away. They cannot be bedded out with safety in your latitude before the last of May. Cuttings of this splendid begonia can be rooted at almost any time, but it roots freely from November until May, in a cutting bench where there is some bottom heat and a top heat of 60 degrees. C. W.

Tionesta, Pa.—A local improvement association has been arousing interest in the planting of flowers and shrubs in vacant lots, along the streets, etc. This has created a lively demand for hardy perennials and annuals. "The season has been backward, but stock of all kinds is beginning to move out and we anticipate a bigger business than last year," says C. A. Anderson.

...NEWS NOTES...

Atlantic City, N. J.—The London Flower Shop, of Philadelphia, has sent out advertising matter announcing the opening of a branch store here at 2517 Boardwalk, about June 1.

South Haven, Mich.—Mrs. Liberty H. Bailey, mother of Liberty Hyde Bailey, instructor, author and editor of the Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture, died at her home here May 7. Her husband died four years ago.

Hannibal, Mo.—The real estate, greenhouses and business of E. A. Hodge have been sold to Michael Sedlmeier, formerly of Quincy, Ill. Additional greenhouses will be built and other important improvements made to aggressively promote the business.

Lincoln, Neb.—Mothers' day business certainly was an eye opener to the florists here. Say Chapin Bros., of 127 South Thirteenth street: "Easter business, with all the preparation and hullabaloo, only exceeded Mothers' day business by three per cent, and if there had been stock Mothers' day would have beat Easter a mile. Believe us, it was some business!"

Newcastle, Ind.—"When the roses bloom in Newcastle, I'll be there." This is the slogan developed at a recent citizens' meeting, at which Myer Heller, of the South Park Floral Co., spoke on "Rose Planting for Newcastle." Newcastle years ago was nicknamed the "Rose City," but now when visitors arrive to look over the roses they have a hard time finding them, unless they visit the greenhouses. To make the city true to name, Mr. Heller and the city's fathers have started a campaign for the planting of roses outdoors. Mr. Heller in his address gave cultural directions and named a number of good hardy climbers.

Butte, Mont.—A fortnight or so ago the Butte Floral Co. had a large surplus stock of ferns, about 1,700 plants. It was desired to convert at least seventy-five per cent of these into cash. The idea was to move the lot in a jiffy, economically, at retail. Now, William J. Day, James H. King and Philo H. King, the men who constitute the Butte Floral Co., believe that advertising pays, and pays big. So advertising space was reserved in one of Butte's dailies and one morning the people were informed of a special fern sale at the Butte store. The sale was a success—plant and flower sales are not regular things at Butte. "We sold everything offered and had to turn down many orders," says Philo King in speaking of the coup.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

"HERE COMES THE BRIDE"

The bride is the most interesting figure in our social life and her flowers are the finest feature of our business, affording widest scope for the display of our artistic abilities and the competence of our designers. It is on wedding flowers our best professional reputations rest.

HOW many brides will there be in your town in June? What, you don't know? Surprisingly unscientific management! Tell you how to find out? Certainly, it's the easiest thing imaginable and as exact as the mortuary tables of an insurance company. Vital statistics show that florists can count on ninety weddings per year for each 10,000 population; that thirteen per cent of these weddings will occur in June.

The distribution of weddings through the year, not taking count of fractions, is in the following percentages; January, eight; February, five; March, six; April, eight; May, nine; June, thirteen; July, seven; August, eight; September, ten; October, ten; November, nine; December, seven per cent.

June the Leader.

So anyone interested can "dope it out" that there will be slightly more than twice as many weddings in his city next month as there were in March.

But the figures do not convey the real importance of June on the florists' calendar, especially not if the florist chances to be one of those favored by the patronage of the social element in his community. For this reason:

While it may be true that "in the spring the young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love," the fact is the laboring man gets married when he can, with little regard for the season, while those more fortunately circumstanced await the conventional period, June, or choose the months of early autumn. Thus it is that the weddings of June, and of September and October, average of better quality than do the weddings of the rest of the year, considering them from a florist's viewpoint—they call for more and better flowers.

However, the importance of June lies no more in the extra quantity of work it brings the florist than it does in the opportunity to make or mar his professional reputation. A big wedding is an advertising opportunity par excellence.

"Watch Your Step."

When a woman weds it is the most momentous event of her life. Neither she nor her family will overlook any shortcoming in the wedding flowers, but, on the other hand, the florist who gives complete satisfaction with the flowers for a bridal party, nine times out of ten has made friends for life.

The reason perfection is so necessary in wedding flowers is that next to the bridal costume the flowers must stand the most critical inspection. If they meet with approval, well and good, but if they do not measure up to the mark, woe betide the florist, for he has caused his patrons to humiliate themselves in the eyes of their guests; he has wounded their self-respect; he will see them only once again if at all.

The fact that quality is paramount affords a splendid argument for the florist who is seeking to raise the character of his trade. With it he can checkmate the competitor who seeks the order on price alone.

If wedding flowers are subject to such critical inspection, if they are more discussed and longer remembered than any other work turned out by florists, it stands to reason that the retailer who undersells and then skimps his work to make up for it is cutting his own throat. The wise policy is to charge a fair price and then in return give the best obtainable.

Use Good Stock.

Not many men can do good work without good materials, and no man can be sure of his wedding decorations and bouquets unless he uses first-class flowers. Never is it so well as in June to sacrifice a dollar or two of immediate profit as an insurance against the loss of much trade and many fat checks should a wedding job go wrong through the use of inferior stock. Buy dependable flowers, even if they cost a little more.

Remember that each wedding means a new home—a new customer. The florist who has the wedding order has the inside track: He can cement the bride's family to himself, and can gain the new family as his customer, or he can lose them both, irretrievably. If ever it is "better to be safe than sorry" it is with wedding flowers.

Once get a reputation in the matter of wedding flowers and the work will come, including orders from many of those who have patronized other florists on less important occasions.

Provide All Accessories.

To gain a reputation for one's wedding work something more is needed than good stock and the will to please. The florist should have a complete equipment of the up-to-date accessories and he should keep them in perfect condition. When not in use they should be carefully protected from deterioration. A dirty, dusty kneeling stool is neither an asset nor an advertisement.

The florist who has equipped himself to take care of anything that comes along in the way of wedding work has a great advantage over the man who tackles the orders catch-as-catch-can.

The Latest Styles.

There is little change, from year to year, in the character of bouquets carried by bridal parties. Since the "cauliflower" type of bride's bouquet passed out, being replaced by the open, loose style of arrangement, there has been no change except in the size of the bunch. Increased size has characterized the bouquets for the entire bridal party—season by season they keep getting larger and larger. Even if the ladies are small, the bouquets are big. But they are not heavy and do not appear so. Wherein lies the test of the florist's skill. It takes a good man to make a big bunch look light and graceful.

Along with increased size and improved arrangement has come the use of finer flowers. Besides valley, there are orchids in many of the wedding bouquets of today.

The Illustrations.

Examples of the latest in wedding bouquets are shown in the accompanying illustrations. On the preceding page a daughter of Gov. Dunne is seen descending the stairs of the gubernatorial mansion at Springfield, Ill., and on this page she stands with her bridal party. The bouquets were the work of George Wienhoeber, of Chicago.

Also on this page is a bride's muff with a shower, a unique style so heavily flowered that it conceals the "muff," by Max Schling, New York, who at the same time contributes the bride's shower bouquet on the opposite page and the two bouquets of orchids on page 17.

On page 16 is a bouquet by A. Kottmiller, New York, that will be specially interesting for the fact that the excellent result is obtained by the use of only 150 valley. Which leads to the caution that an advance in the price of brides' bouquets is necessary this June for the excellent reason that valley is scarce because of the war and will cost the retailer from twenty-five to fifty per cent more than it did last year.

A Muff With Shower.

MISSOURIANS ORGANIZE.

The Missouri State Florists' Association was organized at a meeting at the Columbia, May 24. The following was the program:

10 A. M.—Meeting called to order by chairman. Address of welcome: Missouri official. Nomination of officers.
12 M. to 2 P. M.—Informal luncheon, guests of Prof. H. F. Major.
2 to 4 P. M.—Inspection of grounds.
4 to 6 P. M.—Election of officers and other legislation. Plans for 1917.
6 to 8 P. M.—Buffet supper, guests of Dr. Whitten and Dr. Lawrence.

A GROWER'S APPROVAL.

Sunday closing has been a burning question in St. Louis, where the wholesale florists have been trying it out. Considerable opposition on the part of the retailers and a few growers has developed, but gradually is disappearing and in the end shorter hours for the whole body of florists may result.

As an indication that Sunday closings is gaining friends, the St. Louis wholesalers were pleased to receive the following letter from J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., who has been a shipper to the St. Louis market for over a quarter of a century:

In this progressive age, as in all past ages, I appreciate the amount of courage required and the amount of abuse to withstand, to in only a small measure inaugurate a reform in any line of business.

I, too, appreciate the lack of compliments coming even from those who fully agree with such reform and who in many cases are largely benefited thereby. I therefore take this opportunity of congratulating you as a body of high-minded business men for the courage of your convictions and especially for the hearty cooperation on the part of each one of you in recognizing Sunday as the one day in seven to refuse to do business.

I fully appreciate the temptations you must resist, and the abuse you surely receive, but I predict you will win out in the end. And I sincerely hope to see the day when all those who are now heaping this abuse on you will thank you for having taken the initiative in this great reform.

The Review thinks the use of the word "abuse" in Mr. Ammann's letter perhaps is open to misconstruction; it is unlikely that one business man will "abuse" another to any serious extent simply for the reason that the second does not care to sell on Sunday. The Sunday closing of wholesale houses works no real hardship on retailers, for nowadays every retailer doing any con-

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Cleveland, O.—The trustee of the James Eadie Co., bankrupt, has filed an application with the referee in bankruptcy for leave to sell at public or private sale the stock in trade and fixtures of the defunct company. May 27 is the date of the hearing upon the application. In its voluntary petition of bankruptcy May 1, the James Eadie Co. scheduled its liabilities at $6,249.27 and assets $3,857.21. The claims are scattered among the local and eastern houses.

Norfolk, Va.—A petition in voluntary bankruptcy has been filed by the Art Floral Co., with liabilities listed at $2,468.50 and assets at $1,198.86. Martin & Martin, of Norfolk, are attorneys for the petitioner.

OUR SYMPATHY WITH THESE.

Ossining, N. Y.—Mrs. Annie B. Dunscomb, wife of John H. Dunscomb, died here May 11 at the age of 59. Her husband, two sisters and two brothers survive.

Port Huron, Mich.—Mrs. Mathias Ullenbruch, the wife of Port Huron's pioneer florist, died unexpectedly last week of heart failure.

Somerville, Mass.—Mrs. Katherine J. McGarry, wife of William J. McGarry, died at her home, 5 Brook street, Tuesday, April 25. She was born at Cambridge in 1870 and for twenty-five years was associated with her husband, who is a florist on Broadway.

PLANTS FOR PORCH BOXES.

Please advise me what plants with yellow flowers or foliage are suitable for porch boxes. F. G. G.—O.

Such cannas as Beethoven, Buttercup and Hohenzollern; yellow abutilons, yellow achyranthes, Coleus Golden Bedder, yellow lantanas, yellow nasturtiums, crotons, antirrhinums, intermediate strain; yellow tuberoses, begonias, if in shades; celosias, calendulas, Coleus Yellow Trailing Queen.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB'S SHOW.

Preparations are completed for the first annual summer flower show of the International Garden Club, to be held at its grounds, Pelham Manor, Pelham bay park, New York, June 1 to 4. Two large tents and smaller tents have been erected on the grounds. Sunken gardens will be arranged in the tents for the display of groups of plants, etc. The schedules are ready, with entry blanks, and may be had from the secretary-manager of the show, Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J.

The grounds are easily reached by automobile, as they are on the main Boston road from New York. The park also is on the Harlem division of the New York and New Haven railroad. Freight and express shipments should be sent to City Island station, which is nearest the grounds. People from the east may change at New Rochelle, or they may take the Third avenue elevated trains to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, thence by train to City Island station.

A generous prize list of nearly $5,000 is being offered, about equally divided between the trade and the private growers. Additional premiums will be given to owners of meritorious exhibits.

Governor Whitman opened the grounds last year for the club and it is expected that Mayor Mitchel will be on hand to open the flower show. For further information address Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J.

CLEVELAND TO HAVE FAIR.

Announcement has been made of an industrial exposition and fair to be held September 2 to 9 at Cleveland, under the direction of the Cleveland Chamber of Industry Exposition Co. The exhibits have been divided into eight separate shows, one of them being a flower show. Committees representing organizations in Cleveland interested in floriculture have been invited to coöperate with the management in making the flower show one worth while.

M. A. Vinson, who managed the big Cleveland flower show last November, has been secured to take charge of the business end and the general promotion of the event. Through his efforts the Cleveland Florists' Club, the Ohio Horticultural Society, the Cleveland Garden Club, the Lakewood Garden Club and the Shaker Heights Garden Club have been asked to appoint committees to meet and prepare the flower show premium list, which will be printed early in June. Herman P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., and chairman of the last Cleveland flower show committee, is on the board of directors and a member of the executive committee of the exposition company. As this organization was responsible for a successful show four years ago, it is predicted that this one also will be a success.

Those desiring to receive premium lists are requested to send their names and addresses to M. A. Vinson, care of the Chamber of Industry, 2515 Franklin avenue, Cleveland, O.

THE REST THAT ROSES NEED

HOW HUMISTON RESTS ROSES.

Echoes of "Putting Roses to Sleep."

It was with more than usual interest that I read the article in the May 11 issue of The Review entitled "Putting the Roses to Sleep," from the virile pen of Charles N. Cotter. It brought to my mind an earlier article written by Mr. Cotter—"When Lack of Light Makes Roses Lag." Articles such as these, written by one who is a practical grower in every sense of the word and who substantiates his practical knowledge with scientific data, are not only of great interest but also of inestimable value to rose growers, and it seems to me that the articles should bring forth a general discussion on the part of growers.

While not in the least presuming to criticize any of Mr. Cotter's theories, it seems to me that in certain instances he takes rather too narrow a view of Mother Nature's ability to provide rest for her children. In other words, should we as growers assume that Mother Nature has only one method of providing rest for vegetable bodies and that this method is the one she uses in the northern temperate zone in lulling her children to a sound sleep for two, three or four months during the year? Will the real facts of the case, particularly as regards roses, hold good in this assumption?

Observations in the South.

From observations in the far south and southwest, I find that the more tender tea roses, and particularly is this true of the hybrid teas, planted outdoors, will go through practically the entire year without being entirely defoliated. I have seen Killarneys and many other forcing roses in Texas and New Mexico hold the old foliage or a portion of it until new foliage the following spring was well developed, providing no pruning was done. I believe this same circumstance holds good in southern California. At the same time I find practically all classes of roses thriving more vigorously in the south than in the north. While all forcing roses need and demand rest in order that they may reach the highest degree of productivity, I do not believe they require that absolute rest of complete dormancy that takes place with outdoor roses in the north.

Methods Governed by Climate.

With our under-glass conditions, to my mind partial dormancy—brought about by withholding water, followed by proper pruning and then, with the advent of new growth and new foliage, close attention in pinching the first crop of buds—is of the greatest importance, but the method used to arrive at the given end must be governed by local climatic conditions.

To return to Mother Nature's methods, I find that in the extreme south roses will become partially dormant during the mild winters, but they are ready at any time to spring into active growth with the first warm spell accompanied by sufficient moisture. In the early spring the plants will throw out a crop of flowers. With the arrival of drier and warmer weather during June they frequently seem to become partially dormant again, practically no growth being made and the plants at times losing considerable foliage. As the hot, rainy season of July and August approaches they will spring into the most active growth and, as this growth matures, they will commence flowering and sometimes continue flowering until Christmas.

A Month's Rest Enough.

In my own experience the methods used in resting roses under glass in the northerly states will not always obtain in climates such as we have in the south and southwest. I find that it is impossible to dry our roses so long or so severely here in Kansas as we did at Chicago. I find that it is absolutely necessary to spray nearly every day and that we must watch the edges of the benches carefully in order that the plants may not dry too rapidly. I have found that three to four weeks of this drying process is sufficient, and in this ripening process I endeavor not to dry the plants so severely as to cause any great degree of defoliation, even though most of the foliage may be taken off when we prune. Our main object is to stop the growth completely, thereby throwing the strength of the plant into the lower eyes.

As soon as pruning has been accomplished, I see that the benches are thoroughly cleaned of all old mulching and rubbish, using short-handled hoes for this purpose. I am opposed to the removal of any of the soil or the disturbance of the root system in any way whatever. After the benches are thoroughly cleaned and all rubbish removed from underneath the benches, I give the first watering, and this I consider to be one of the most important operations in the whole process of carrying over the roses.

Watering and Mulching.

The benches must be gone over with the water again and again, until every particle of soil is saturated. All cracks and fissures in the soil caused by the drying process are completely closed and the water is soaked into the heart of the root system of every plant, and this causes the soil to form again into one homogeneous mass.

Of late years I have followed the practice of never applying mulch to my benches until the first growth of new foliage is out and has assumed a good, healthy color. After the first thorough saturation, the plants will only need light sprayings for the most part, until the first growth has been made and the mulch put on. For mulch I prefer using a thorough mixture of equal parts of fibrous sod soil and cow manure that is not too well rotted. Before applying this mulch I give the benches an application of bone meal, at the rate of ten to twelve pounds per 100 square feet of bench surface, following this immediately with the mulch. As soon as the mulch is applied the benches get the second heavy watering and this watering should be as thorough as the first one. In the course of a short time the first growth will begin forming buds.

I believe it is an established fact that, with the exception of the period that a plant is flowering and ripening a crop of seed, there is no period of growth that taxes the vitality of the plant to the extent of that of the development of a crop of flowers. For this reason I am of the firm opinion that if we expect to reap the best results and obtain the highest degree of productivity from the plants during the winter months, it is essential to see to the pinching of the first crop of buds at an early stage.

The efforts from this time on should be exerted toward producing a sturdy growth of a large quantity of foliage. During the early fall months I never allow my plants to throw a full crop at one time, but continue pinching them until early November, allowing, of course, enough buds to develop to give me a fairly steady cut. It is during this period in the fall that the greatest care must be taken to retain all the foliage possible on the plants. One must be constantly on his guard against conditions that will cause mildew, black spot and yellow leaves.

Treatment for Christmas Cut.

If we pass through this period successfully, retaining most of the foliage in a healthy condition and all growth intended for Christmas cutting beginning to set bud freely by November 15 or 20, our prospects for a profitable crop at Christmas are good. In growing roses for a retail establishment such as ours, I never have considered it advisable to attempt to secure a full crop at Christmas, but have aimed to pinch the plants in such a manner as to have a succession of blooms during January. However, in spite of all our efforts, we are bound to experience a period of light cutting at this period. In cutting our Christmas crop we have removed immense quantities of foliage, and have caused a retardation of root growth. We have at this time used practically all the stored energy in our plants and, with weather conditions against us, it becomes a delicate task to bring our stock back to productivity. I have always found it the safest plan to allow them a partial rest at this period. We do not gain time by being impatient and trying to push the plants to immediate growth. They are in no condition to accept food and the hose must be handled with care until the eyes begin to swell. At the same time, with the heavy firing at this time of the year, we must not let the soil become too dry at the bottom of the benches.

Little Details Important.

At this stage I prefer to have my benches fairly clear of all refuse from fall mulchings, as an excess of surface moisture is apt to create trouble. With the advent of increased sunshine, and as the stock begins to take on growth, we may safely increase the quantity of water and may carry a slightly higher temperature, feeding lightly as the plants seem to demand it. With careful attention to the little details and never-ceasing vigilance—in fact, becoming acquainted with every plant in the benches—we will reach the goal of maximum productiveness and materially reduce the period of unproductiveness during the short, sunless days of winter. H. E. Humiston.

VARIOUS LIQUID MANURES.

In making a liquid fertilizer for general use, with chicken or pigeon or horse manure, what is the right proportion of the fresh manure to use in fifty gallons of water? I do not refer to the use of all three manures together, but each one separately, making fifty gallons of each. M. B.—N. Y.

The general practice is to use one-half bushel of fresh horse manure to fifty gallons of water. Chicken and pigeon manure, which are of the same composition to a large extent, are about three times as strong as horse manure and so only one-sixth bushel of these manures should be used with fifty gallons of water. Great care should be exercised to use the chicken and pigeon manures in the right proportion.

J. Hutchinson.

Louisville, Colo.—Word comes from Herbert Chambers that the spring days are just right for crops and business.

Stow, N. Y.—Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Whitford opened their summer store at the Chautauqua Assembly grounds May 8 and have enjoyed a good business. This store makes a specialty of annual summer flowers, which are much in demand by the city people who make that place their summer home.

ROSE SOCIETY AT WASHINGTON.

Inspects Arlington Test Garden.

The American Rose Society issued an invitation for all those interested to meet at Washington, D. C., May 23, to inspect the test rose garden at Arlington Farm, conducted by the government in coöperation with the society. The weather proved to be inclement, the attendance small and the affair something of a disappointment. The collection of roses is large, is increasing and has excellent care, but it was impossible to do any judging under the conditions of the day. W. F. Gude therefore was appointed chairman of judges, with authority to form his own board and to make another attempt to score the best varieties at a favorable time, probably next week.

Following an automobile ride to Arlington and such inspection as the rain permitted, the entire party visited Twin Oaks on invitation of Charles Bell, to see the rambler roses just coming into bloom. These won favorable comment and the collection of German irises also is of special excellence.

Discussions at Dinner.

Dinner was had in the Oak room at the Hotel Raleigh, President S. S. Pennock calling on many of those present for remarks. Admiral Ward was the first speaker and discussed bedding roses. He said growers must qualify their recommendations, taking into consideration differences in soil and climate.

Prof. L. C. Corbett spoke on the necessity of developing varieties specially suited to America and said that when this is done America will lead the world in rose production, as we have every variety of climate. Prof. Corbett said that we must use care in the selection of stocks, securing first those adapted to specific soils, seeking secondly congeniality of variety and the stock which is to carry it.

E. G. Hill told of the interest taken in English rose shows and predicted that the Arlington test garden eventually will take its place on a par with the Bagatelle garden in Paris and the rose section of the Kew garden in London.

J. H. McFarland urged that the services of a pathologist be secured to make a study of diseases of the rose. This was favored by many and was referred to the executive committee for action.

Robert Pyle told of the indefatigable industry and effective labors of W. F. Gude and the latter welcomed the visitors to Washington. Prof. F. L. Mulford urged greater support of the rose garden and more contributions of plants, particularly from the west coast.

Following dinner the visitors were guests of Superintendent George Hess, at the botanic gardens.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had some cool weather, with frost several mornings in the lowlands. Business generally has been good. As stock has not been plentiful, it has cleaned up nicely ever since Mothers' day and, from appearances, will continue to clean up for some time. There is likely to be a shortage Memorial day. There will be no local peonies, and the cool weather seems to hold everything else back.

The wholesalers have cleaned up nicely every day and stock is selling at good prices for this season of the year. There are no gluts on anything. The retail stores are all busy. Those handling plants are especially busy with porch boxes. The landscape people are rushing their work, so that they may get their orders of trees and shrubbery planted. The cold weather is a blessing to them at least, as it holds stock better for them, but it will keep the cemetery planting back and make a greater rush the last of the week.

Horticultural Meeting.

The last meeting of the Horticultural Society of Western Pennsylvania was held in the Annex hotel. W. E. Marshall, of New York, was present and gave an enthusiastic talk on flower shows, especially a local flower show. He suggested that the florists and others get the vision and then talk on it until it became a reality, as that was the experience of other cities. Mr. McCallum, of the U-Bar Co., gave a talk on vegetable growing, relating his personal experience. Michael Curran, gardener for Mrs. Elizabeth M. Horne, read a paper on vegetable growing, referring especially to the best varieties to be grown in this neighborhood, and his remarks led to considerable discussion. An interesting paper on annuals, read by William Murphy, gardener for Henry L. Mason, Jr., Sewickley Heights, also called forth much discussion. It was pretty generally conceded that Mr. Murphy's favorites, asters, antirrhinums, salpiglossis, cosmos and sweet peas, were the best suited to our local conditions.

Walter James, gardener for W. Henry Hilliard, was present with a collection of hyacinths and a splendid plant of Spiræa Gladstone, and for the latter received a cultural certificate. Michael Curran showed a splendid collection of calceolarias, the best ever shown here, and was awarded a cultural certificate. After the reports from the members who visited the Philadelphia and New York shows, the enjoyable meeting adjourned.

Various Notes.

Uncle John Weiland celebrated his seventieth birthday Tuesday, May 23, at his home at Allison Park, and kept open house all day to entertain his host of friends.

Andrew Forsyth, who has been ill and who spent the winter in Hamilton, Ont., and Lenox, Mass., has returned, much improved in health. Mr. Forsyth is gardener for John Dank, in the east end. Clarke.

Ghent, Belgium.—The spring shipments of nursery stock, especially bay trees, have gone out under difficulties and have not been so large as was expected in view of the unusual demand from America. Business is slow and vexatious, since all correspondence and foreign transactions of every kind are subjected to the scrutiny and pleasure of both the British and German censors.

London, England.—A special meeting of the council of the Horticultural Trades' Association of Great Britain and Ireland was held May 2 to receive the report of a special committee appointed to consider the state of the nursery and seed trades, and to frame recommendations as to the best steps to be taken to protect the interests of the trade, now and after the war. The committee submitted a lengthy schedule of recommendations, which was discussed clause by clause, after which the council passed a resolution approving generally of the proposals made and agreed to submit same to the members at a congress May 24.

Boskoop, Holland.—The reports of damage to late shipments of bay trees, boxwoods, araucarias, etc., are alarming the exporters here, who see a large part if not all their season's profits disappearing and an unprecedented number of claims and disputes to adjust. The irregularity and uncertainty of cable and mail communication makes the full extent of the losses still a matter of conjecture, but there is no doubt it is extremely large.

Amsterdam, Holland.—As an indication of the difficulty in obtaining space for nursery stock, bulbs, etc., on the boats sailing from Rotterdam for America, it can be noted that the total value of the exports from the Amsterdam district to the United States during the first three months of 1916, according to invoices certified at the Amsterdam consulate, was $8,413,029. This total exceeds all previous totals for the same period. The amounts for the first three months of the preceding two years were as follows: 1914, $5,782,302, and 1915, $3,009,724.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

This week opened with clear, cool weather, still most favorable for the nurserymen and seedsmen, while the long hours of sunshine will end speedily the short shipments of cut flowers of the last ten days.

There was no surplus of anything but lilacs at the closing hour May 20 and prices of nearly everything were satisfactory to the growers and wholesalers, while retailers generally reported a satisfactory week and an especially good weekend. Easter, Mothers' day and the memorial celebration have been so close together that the market between times has not had opportunity to slump seriously.

Prices for roses of all varieties are steady or a little stronger, because of short supply. Selected American Beauties sold at 20 cents May 20, Hadley, Brunner and Prima Donna at 12 to 15 cents each for the best, with Ophelia as high as 8 cents for the long-stemmed stock. Hoosier Beauty, Russell, Stanley, Key, Mock and Ward were not overabundant and none, even of the Killarneys, sold below $10 per thousand.

Carnations have had a splendid season. Growers must be more than satisfied with their returns. Mothers' day was a big money-maker for them, as its influence continued during the following week. There is a flood this week of outdoor valley, the best of it selling at $1 per hundred. Longiflorum lilies have made no advance as yet, anticipatory of Memorial day demand. The supply is large and no great increase in the asking price is expected. Gardenias are scarce and there is no demand for the few arriving. They have had a poor season, as most of the stock has depended on the street merchants for relief. Orchids sell from 40 cents, for gigas, down to 15 and 20 cents. Some large funeral orders last week aided in steadying the orchid market, but the day of high prices is over for the season.

Sweet peas, except the Spencers, have to be sold at a sacrifice if at all. There has been much waste of the low-grade shipments. Some splendid tulips continue to arrive and prices for these are well maintained. Daisies are too plentiful, as are irises, pansies and lilac, especially the latter. Peonies have been slow, but are coming heavily this week and are likely to dominate values in most lines for the next month.

Various Notes.

June 11 the last meeting of the New York Florists' Club for the season takes place. The club's annual outing is shelved, but the Greek-American Florists' Association will make a special effort to beat all records.

June 1 the open-air flower show opens at Pelham Bay park and will continue to Sunday. The location is ideal and a large attendance of the social set is a certainty.

Joseph Trepel had the big order, the same as in 1915, from a Jewish organization, for 100,000 flowers to be delivered at 100 different centers before 9 a. m. May 21. His buyer, "Brother Jack," was a live wire in the wholesale district all day Saturday and motored may loads of flowers to the Lewis avenue headquarters, Brooklyn.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., lectured May 18 before the Harford County Garden Club and May 23 before the Eklo Club.

A. Marck, for eleven years foreman for A. L. Miller, of Jamaica, has located at New Springville, Staten Island, in business on his own account, having 6,000 square feet of glass and an acre of land, growing geraniums, salvias, petunias, asters, cosmos and heliotrope for the New York market. The houses will be devoted to smilax, asparagus and mums. Mr. Marck was born in Switzerland and came to America in 1892. He has worked for Schmutz, Meissner, Hession, Messburg and Miller, of Flatbush and Jamaica.

John Kral, for many years head salesman for Moore, Hentz & Nash, died at his home in Port Chester, N. Y., Sunday, May 21, of pneumonia. He was a young man universally beloved and respected.

Jonathan Nash still is confined to his home, 490 West End avenue, after two weeks of suffering with pneumonia.

Frank Duggan is no longer with the H. A. Bunyard Co.

Several local lights of the American Rose Society went to Washington May 23 to inspect the new rose test garden at Arlington.

Roman J. Irwin has returned from a successful trip and appeared on Twenty-eighth street May 20 in a new auto, to let his wholesale friends know that everything is lovely.

Walter Siebrecht, who has been ill for two weeks with a severe attack of lumbago, is recovering.

William, son of George J. Polykranas, who has been severely ill with blood poisoning from rose thorns, is greatly improved.

The personnel of the George W. Crawbuck Co., which will open its doors to the trade June 1, at 57 West Twenty-eighth street, is as follows: President, George W. Crawbuck; vice-president and secretary, Herbert T. Phillips; treasurer, H. W. Gallaer. During the last eight years Mr. Crawbuck has been manager of the Greater New York Florists' Association, in Brooklyn.

May 20 Frank Meyer delivered a lecture on "Plants from China," at Bronx park.

Frank Goods has cast his lot with M. A. Bowe, "in the heart of New York city."

The successful candidate for the office of president of the Greek-American Association was Kostas Sakelos.

One of the biggest decorative orders of the week went to Samuel Woodrow, who secured the contract for decorating the Seventh Regiment armory for the General Federation of Women's Clubs. MacKinney, the Florist, of One Hundred and Ninety-eighth street, was associated with Mr. Woodrow in the work.

J. Austin Shaw.

A discharge from bankruptcy has been granted J. Frederick Hanft, of Hanft Bros., 684 Madison avenue. Liabilities were $17,536. The business was established in 1880.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that Rudolph Fischer, of San Gabriel, Cal., offers for registration the freesia described below. Anyone objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date, May 22, 1916.

Freesia Splendens, seedling of Purity, with strong, heavy growth of foliage, reaching well into the stem. The stems are from two to three feet in length; the flower heads are large, the individual florets opening wide. Color, bluish and reddish lavender, two distinct shades.

John Young, Sec'y.

New Haven, Conn.—The handsome store of C. C. Buck and Mr. Buck himself came in for pictorial and verbal comment in a recent issue of the Courier.

Nashua, N. H.—Alfred Goyette, until recently with Gaedeke & Co., has joined his brother in the cattle business at Viola, Wyo. Edward Foisie, of W. W. Powers' store, has accepted a position with Morse & Beals, of Lowell, Mass.

Portland, Me.—Dennett, the Florist, has purchased the Portland Flower Store, which is directly across the street from the old establishment. Both stores will be operated by Mr. Dennett, Miss Helen Nixon being manager of the new store.

Millington, Mass.—Mrs. S. A. Vineca has returned from the south, where she spent several weeks in selecting dagger ferns and other greens for the Memorial day business of the Crowl Fern Co. She reports a fine trip and is much improved in health as a result of the change from New England winter.

Milldale, Conn.—Peter Grillo, who has been in the business here, is serving in the Italian army.

Hartford, Conn.—The Hill Floral Co. has been incorporated by A. P. Pitner, J. H. Peck and R. M. Grant, at $50,000.

Cromwell, Conn.—A. N. Pierson, Inc., has installed a steam shovel to be used around the greenhouses for handling soil.

New Britain, Conn.—A 7-acre farm has been acquired by the Volz Floral Co. as a site for its second range of houses. Business has been more than good this spring.

Providence, R. I.—The Rhode Island Horticultural Society will hold an exhibition of roses, peonies, sweet peas, etc., in the ball room of the Narragansett hotel June 16. The premium list, which may be obtained by addressing E. K. Thomas, secretary, Kingston, R. I., also contains the schedules for the September and November exhibitions.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was good. Stock was plentiful and there were many large decorations and plenty of first-class funeral work. The only scarcities noted were in orchids and valley. Orchids sold quickly on arrival at 50 cents to $1 each. Greenhouse valley continues to bring $5 per hundred, but there has been more or less complaint against its quality. Outdoor valley still is to be had in good quality and moves well at 50 cents to $2 per hundred.

Gardenias are overplentiful. They bring from $1 to $2 per dozen, but are offered on the streets at 10 cents each. There is an abundant supply of carnations at $1 to $3 per hundred. The market has been good and they clean up well daily. There has been no shortage in roses, and while a few move at 12 cents each there are plenty to be had at much lower prices. Short-stemmed stock can be bought at $5 per thousand.

The summer crop of sweet peas is coming along in fine shape and these flowers are in good demand at 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Gladioli are selling well at from $5 to $8. America, Augusta and Brenchleyensis are good. Pink snapdragon is plentiful and sells at $3 to $6 per hundred. Some extra fine white and yellow snapdragon is being offered at $6 to $10 per hundred. The local peony crop has shown up with a vengeance.

Various Notes.

Growers are finding it difficult to handle the enormous crop of peonies which has made its appearance. The Gude Bros. Co. had several men sorting and packing these flowers as they came from the houses, but they did not seem to catch up. On one day alone this firm sent more than 6,000 first-class peonies to Philadelphia, New York and Boston. Other growers are doing the same thing, so that the local market is materially lightened. A price of $4 to $8 per hundred is being maintained.

The retailers are well pleased with the business they now are enjoying on account of commencements. Washington probably has more young ladies' schools, seminaries, academies and colleges than any other city in the country. At a recent commencement one order called for sixty-five shower bouquets of red roses, and another order has been booked by a local house for nearly 100 shower bouquets for a similar affair.

The Brookland rose show, scheduled for the latter part of this week, has been postponed until Monday and Tuesday next.

J. H. Small & Son has booked the Grayson-Gordon wedding, which is to take place in New York. It is expected that the wedding will call for large numbers of floral remembrances.

The colored population of Washington is staging a floral parade May 27. Contestants must be colored, but any firm may enter delivery cars with colored drivers. If such cars win, the drivers are to be awarded the prizes.

C. L. L.

Decatur, Ill.—The new greenhouses of Daut Bros. are being rushed to completion. Peter Hus, of Chicago, is one of the builders.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Heavy rain storms visited Rochester last week and did considerable damage. The ground became so water-soaked that farmers and growers were at a standstill in outdoor work. The weather cleared Friday and Saturday, however, and business was quite good. Business for the week was fairly good and included some large wedding decorations. Funeral work was heavy and the stores were well occupied with counter trade. The filling of window boxes and jardinieres is well under way and much bedding stock is being sold.

The cut flower trade is brisk and the daily shipments arrive in good order. Some fine outdoor Pheasant's Eye narcissi are in the market and sell well. Darwin tulips, with stems about three feet long and with many shades of color, sell well. Jonquils are gradually falling off. American Beauty roses sell well, and they have a good, rich color. Other varieties, such as Russell, Taft, the Killarneys, Sunburst and Ward, move freely. White and yellow daisies sell well. Pink snapdragon is selling nicely and is used freely in basket work, but lilac moves slowly. Sweet peas are plentiful in pink and white and they sell easily. Easter lilies are in good condition; callas move freely. Valley and orchids are used considerably in corsages. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

H. P. Neun, of North street, had an effective window display last week, consisting of red azaleas and cibotiums. Business at Mr. Neun's North street store is good, as well as at the store in Hotel Rochester.

George T. Boucher says electric signs are the best means of advertising his business; so he recently gave his order for an outdoor sign. He has placed window boxes around his East Avenue and East Main street windows.

We now are confronted by Memorial day. According to reports from local growers, there is a large quantity of stock ready for the day. As usual, the school children will contribute thousands of plants to be placed on the graves of soldiers.

H. E. Rogers, of Spencerport, N. Y., is making a fine display at his greenhouses. Thousands of geraniums, many in bloom, and a large quantity of filled hanging baskets make a good showing.

The good Easter experienced by growers in Rochester and vicinity has stimulated greenhouse building. J. B. Keller Sons have contracted for a pipe-frame cyclamen house, 21x58 feet. Charles Curtis, of Irondequoit, has material for an iron-frame chrysanthemum and sweet pea house, 20x58 feet; H. S. Morgan, of Auburn, two 26-foot additions; D. S. George, of Penfield, two cast-iron boilers to replace a horizontal tubular boiler that proved unsatisfactory. This last-mentioned order was placed with the Lord & Burnham Co. local office.

Salter Bros. report good business. They are making a good display of bedding stock.

H. J. H.

Paducah, Ky.—At a recent meeting of the park commissioners a contract was let to Schmaus Bros. to furnish trees, shrubs, etc., for the park during the present year.

McKinney, Tex.—Memorial day in the south was May 13, but it rained and the local committee postponed the observance a week, thereby inflicting a considerable loss on florists who had laid in a good-sized stock of cut flowers. Even those of the public who had ordered in advance did not want to accept delivery after the postponement. The call for flowers for Memorial day is increasing annually.

Alvin, Tex.—The cape jasmine season is in full swing, the first shipments having gone north May 15 and in quantity beginning May 22. The prospect for Memorial day is excellent, as more orders than usual are on file with the principal shippers. The high prices of carnations in some of the northern markets for Mothers' day has helped shippers of cape jasmine buds, as offering a cheap substitute for Memorial day. The quality of the stock this season is excellent and the crop large.

Bisbee, Ariz.—L. Phillips, an easterner, has opened a handsome store on Main street.

Fort Smith, Ark.—Every greenhouse in the city sustained damage in a big storm May 20. At George Rye's, on the Plaza, nearly every pane of glass was shattered. The same occurred at his Grand avenue greenhouse. He carried insurance. B. B. Freeman, 202 Towson avenue, sustained a loss ranging from $175 to $200 as a result of the hail smashing the glass and ruining the plants.

Dallas, Tex.—The trade still is talking of the splendid success that attended the coöperative advertising at Easter, when a full-page ad was printed in the Times-Herald. The copy was a general boost for flowers for Easter, nothing specific being possible where so many participate, and the page carried the names of the Dallas Floral Co., the Lang Floral & Nursery Co., the McKinney Nursery Co., the Lone Star Seed & Floral Co., the Rische Floral Co. and A. Harris & Co. It was the first time anything of this kind has been done in Dallas, but it will not be the last time.

OBITUARY

Patrick Larkin.

Patrick Larkin, or "Paddy," as he was familiarly known, florist and politician of Kansas City, Mo., died May 16 at St. Joseph's hospital of injuries received in an automobile accident twelve days previously. The deceased, who was in his thirty-fifth year, was delivering flowers May 4 by automobile, from his store at 1208 Baltimore avenue. According to the press, Mr. Larkin was standing in the body of the car and was thrown head foremost against the street curbing when the car rounded a curve sharply. He suffered concussion of the brain and was taken to St. Luke's hospital, later being removed to St. Joseph's hospital.

For many years Mr. Larkin was a power in Fifth Ward politics and practically controlled the Italian vote. The Fifth is known as Kansas City's "Little Italy." He was born and reared in the ward and knew nearly every man, woman and child there. Two years ago he was secretary of the city police board.

Mr. Larkin supported a widowed mother, who survives him. He was a member of the Kansas City Athletic Club, the Elks, Woodmen of the World and the Eagles. Burial was at Mount St. Mary's cemetery.

John Kral.

John Kral, for twenty years manager of the wholesale cut flower business of Moore, Hentz & Nash, New York, after two weeks of intense suffering from pneumonia, died at his home in Port Chester, N. Y., Sunday morning, May 21, leaving a wife and daughter. His age was 42.

Practically Mr. Kral's whole business life had been spent in the florists' business. Commencing in the employ of Hobson, a retail florist then on Fifth avenue, and afterwards two and one-half years with Alex. McConnell, he began his experience in the wholesale business over twenty years ago, with the New York Cut Flower Co., going with the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash upon its formation. He was held in the highest esteem by the members of the firm and by everyone who knew him.

The funeral services, at Rye, N. Y., May 24, were largely attended by his associates and many floral offerings attested their respect and affection. Mr. Kral was a thirty-second degree Mason, and chief of the fire department of Port Chester. He was buried with Masonic honors. J. A. S.

Alfred Ross.

Alfred Ross, a pioneer of Wichita, Kan., and head of the Ross Bros. Seed House, died unexpectedly of heart failure at his home in Wichita on the morning of May 14.

The deceased was born July 23, 1849, at Mill Creek, Va. His father, brother and himself were millers. In 1884 Mr. Ross and his brother, J. M. Ross, moved to Wichita and opened a produce and seed business at 319 East Douglas avenue. Within three years the firm engaged in the seed business almost exclusively.

Alfred Ross never married. Until three years ago he made his home with his brother, J. M., and after the death of the latter in 1903, with his sister-in-law.

He was successful in the business and owned considerable property in and around Wichita. It is probable that the business will be continued under the old name, under the management of L. B. McCausland, who has been with the house seventeen years and now is manager of the concern, which is a member of the American Seed Trade Association.

Funeral services were held May 16. The pallbearers were L. B. McCausland, F. W. Brose, J. Christopher, W. Christopher, J. Crane, Charles Dye and M. J. Koenigsman.

George Haigh.

George Haigh, of Saginaw, Mich., died May 16 of paralysis at the home of his son near Saginaw. Mr. Haigh was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1840, and immigrated to America with his parents in 1859. They located at Hamilton, Ont., where he met and married Miss Ruth Cull, in 1860. Shortly after the marriage Mr. Haigh moved to Detroit, where he found employment as a gardener. In 1898 he engaged in the florists' business at Evart, Mich., and carried it on successfully until 1911, when he sold the business and retired, moving to Saginaw to live with his son. His son and two daughters survive.

Charles A. Marquet.

Charles A. Marquet, formerly president of the village of Rhinebeck, N. Y., and one of the most widely known violet growers in that section, dropped dead in a yard near his home May 13. Death was caused by heart disease. The deceased was in his sixty-fifth year and is survived by his wife and one daughter.

John Wright, V. M. H.

Many American gardeners of British nativity will regret to learn of the death, May 2, of John Wright, V. M. H., for many years editor of the Journal of Horticulture, London, one of the oldest of British gardening papers. Mr. Wright was born in 1836, so that he was in his eightieth year.

Carl Gilmore.

Carl Gilmore, a well known grower of Kenton, O., was found dead in his room May 15. He had been in poor health for a long time.

STAMP TAXES TO GO.

The administration forces are thought to have decided to abolish the stamp taxes provided for in the so-called war emergency revenue law of October 22, 1914, to take effect July 1. This would do away with the necessity for placing revenue stamps upon express receipts, bills of lading, conveyances, notes, telegrams and other legal and commercial documents. The special taxes will also be eliminated and this will relieve commission florists and florists' exchanges from the payment of the tax provided for them.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Pyfer & Olsem, of Wilmette, Ill., report a steady increase in local trade, in addition to the daily city shipments.

The Holton & Hunkel Co., of Milwaukee, believe the sale of cut flowers for Mothers' day exceeded that of Easter, which is pleasing information. Mrs. Russell roses, grown at the Deer Park place, were of exquisite color and had perfect foliage.

The C. C. Pollworth Co., of Milwaukee, handles considerable landscape work, which provides an outlet for much of the stock carried. Every department was busy.

Sol Garland, of Des Plaines, Ill., has built a corrugated boiler shed 34x70 feet, to eliminate the risk of fire, which created such havoc not long ago.

Frank Garland, of Des Plaines, finds a demand for all the adiantum he can grow, an improved type of A. decorum.

David Vogt, of Coldwater, Mich., has a snug place that bespeaks thrift. It is situated in a small park and is decidedly attractive at all seasons of the year. Mr. Vogt is a veteran of the old school, one of his pets being a grand Marechal Niel rose. He is ably assisted in the management of the business by his wife and son.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., consider cattleyas a leading feature of the business and give figures that make interesting reading. Two houses, each about 24x90 feet, produced 3,600 blooms of Cattleya Trianæ during the season; a total cut of 8,000 blooms was recorded for the year. Samuel Hudson, the grower, is particularly proud of a specimen of Cattleya gigas, carrying fourteen buds and blooms, in a 4-inch pot. C. Mendeli, a beautiful flower, but not commercially popular, is unique in that it is not counterfeited as the purples. White scale, the greatest enemy, is kept under by careful watching and spraying.

W. D. Rettie, of South Bend, Ind., expressed the opinion that the demand for Mothers' day flowers eventually would be similar to that of any other red-letter day and would depend largely on what the retailer has to offer. He bases this opinion on this year's sales. A shipment of carnations of inferior grade was received. As the price was high, he pushed the sale of flowering plants to good advantage. The idea is, he had the plants.

The Beyer Floral Co. and the South Bend Floral Co., of South Bend, were well pleased with sales and have fine stock for Memorial day business.

The West View Floral Co., of Elkhart, Ind., find the Hill range, recently acquired, a big asset to the business. At the present rate it will be necessary to still further expand. Landscape work is heavy.

The Van Aken Bros. store at Elkhart reports good business. The range at Coldwater, Mich., is being enlarged to meet the increasing business. Messrs. Van Aken are giving up market gardening and substituting the growing of high-grade alfalfa-fed cattle, which they figure will be more profitable. They have a fine stand of this profitable clover. W. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.
Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

THE trade is asked to contribute funds for the use of Miss Jarvis and her Mothers' Day Association, which exploits the white carnation as the official flower of the day.

NEARLY everyone in the selling end of the business approves of having special flower days at intervals of two or three weeks, like Easter, Mothers' day and Memorial day this year, and votes to make it custom.

ONE of the European items no longer available because of the war is the supply of immigrating gardeners. Some of the eastern concerns that have been using and placing these European-trained men are said to feel the shortage keenly.

NOT often is a florist asked to pay for glass a price that consists of a single discount, and that discount less than ninety per cent. But current quotations on the first three brackets, D. S. A., are not below eighty-nine per cent off the list.

THE committee on exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society believes in taking time by the forelock, as it last week issued a pamphlet containing the preliminary schedule of prizes for the spring exhibition to be held March 21 to 25, 1917.

IT is reported that one of the leading Boskoop exporters of florists' plants has a representative making headquarters at Chicago, engaged with a stenographer in adjusting claims for losses on spring imports. It is said these claims exceed 200 in number, most of them being on small lots, insured, and the effort is to protect the exporter by transferring the claims to the insurer.

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

The value of a publication to its advertisers is in direct proportion to its value to its readers; if a publication cannot maintain its circulation without employing solicitors it will not have the value to advertisers that is found in the one that can command prompt mail renewal of subscriptions. Like these, from east and west:

The enclosed dollar for another year's subscription to The Review is being sent to you with our heartiest congratulations and to show you in a small way our appreciation of your splended paper.—Lawrence A. Whitford, Stow, N. Y., May 20, 1916.

In renewing our subscription to The Review we would like to say that we admire your up-to-date publication.—Shenandoah Nurseries, Shenandoah, Ia., May 17, 1916.

Please renew our subscription for one year. We do not know how we would get along without The Review, as it always is up to the minute with the news.—G. L. Curry & Sons, Valencia, Pa., May 17, 1916.

For many years The Review has discontinued sending the paper when the subscription expires and it does not employ subscription canvassers; a smooth canvasser can induce almost any kind of man to subscribe but cannot make him read the paper or buy the advertised goods.

FOR THE BLOOMINGTON SHOW.

At the recent annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Moline, it was decided to hold a fall meeting and, if possible, a small show in connection with it, at Bloomington, Ill. Since then A. Washburn & Sons, of Bloomington, have stated that they will contribute $250 towards premiums for a fall show to be held there. Secretary J. F. Ammann considers this extremely liberal on their part and has taken it upon himself to write the members asking for a small contribution towards raising a fund to the extent of at least the same amount.

"We think," says Secretary Ammann, "a premium list carrying $500 will give us a creditable show for a beginner. Won't you please pledge us something? Just say on enclosed postal card what you will agree to donate—cash from $5 to $10 or a definite number of roses, carnations or mum blooms by November 1, 1916." A reply postal is enclosed with his letter.

CREATING DEMAND.

An interesting experiment is being tried by French & Salm, of Union Grove, Wis., who devote their entire establishment to the Mrs. Russell rose. Believing that better demand and better prices, though both already are good, will follow a wider acquaintance with the rose, the growers have undertaken the unprecedented work of popularizing the rose through advertising it. A means to this end was exhibiting to the public at the Philadelphia and New York flower shows. Later a trade paper campaign to the retailers, in addition to what their commission man does, was begun with a full page advertisement in The Review for May 4. As a further step in the plan, French & Salm participated in the Mothers' day coöperative advertising of the retail florists of the near-by city of Racine, taking one of the spaces for the same copy that had appeared in The Review, only changing the phrases that applied to trade buyers and substituting a head directing that purchases be made through Rehl & Benz, proprietors of the Flower Shop, where the French & Salm Russells are a regular item of stock.

Of course the grower can not go beyond certain limits in the effort to create public demand on the retailer and by him on the commission man, but it is interesting to note that in the Racine attempt the results were so good that Rehl & Benz wrote expressing appreciation and stating that not only did calls for Mrs. Russell increase greatly for Mothers' day, but that since then they have handled more Russell than any other rose. Other retailers at Racine also have been buying Russell in larger quantity than before.

The factor that heretofore has deterred growers from attempts to influence the public and the retail distributors has been that there is as yet no practicable way of branding or trade-marking the grower's stock. French & Salm have not been deterred by the fact that they are not the only growers of Russell and that others also profit by the publicity.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business during the last week has been good. That does not mean that it could not have been better, but that the time of the year, the quality of the stock and the supply considered, there is little room for any complaint. This is more especially true of shipping business; city trade in cut flowers is not notably active for the season.

A touch of real summer weather the first part of this week brought out the street venders, who disposed of large quantities of inferior lilacs and sweet peas.

Good Beauties have experienced a brisk demand, but quality, generally speaking, is decidedly poor. Roses, regardless of variety, were none too plentiful. Russell, Ophelia and Sunburst enjoyed their usual popularity, but, as a matter of fact, it has not been necessary to push any roses with the possible exception of short Wards.

The supply of carnations was much easier than during the preceding week, but cleared regularly. Quality is generally good for the time of the year, but there are still too many splits. Valley continues on the short side of the market. It is almost impossible to get cattleyas. This crop of Easter lilies is about done for and callas have retired to the wings. Sweet peas are in heavy supply. Really fancy stock clears easily, but the numerous offgrades are inclined to drag. There is a good demand for daisies, particularly yellow. The supply of snapdragons and calendulas is not large and those received meet with a normal demand. Daffodils and jonquils have ceased to figure in market considerations. Spanish iris clears with little difficulty. There are a few greenhouse gladioli on the market, but not enough to cut any figure. Narcissus poeticus may be found in small quantities, but it will soon be off the market. White lilac is in small supply and less demand. Purple lilac in large supply fares much better.

Peonies, though not unusually plentiful for this date, are seen on every hand and meet with a ready demand. Large quantities have accumulated in cold storage in preparation for the big DON'T let anything keep you back this Memorial day—it will give you a chance to make a fine increase over last year if you order enough.

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

We are western headquarters for Sweet Peas—a large supply in all colors. They are making a hit everywhere.

A FINE CROP OF ROSES

Remember our Mrs. Russell—the largest supply in America. A wonderful shipper. Also, you will find here a large and fine supply of Milady, Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia and White Killarney. We are doing a splendid shipping business on these Roses every day because our customers like every shipment.

CARNATIONS

This is the time of year when you must be careful where you order Carnations. Nothing but the best will do. Ours are strictly high-grade.

PEONIES

$4.00 to $8.00 per 100

There is, perhaps, greater difference in the value of Peonies than in any other flower. Given the right varieties, grown and shipped by men who know how, there is nothing that makes a better show for the money; but if from men who never learned the "how," Peonies are likely to be absolutely worthless by the time the retailer unpacks them.

Our Peonies are RIGHT in every particular—you'll make good money on them.

Read This Carefully

Many points will not accept shipments to Chicago, therefore there is a Peony shortage here, but in placing your orders with us you will absolutely be taken care of, as we ALREADY are assured of our supply, and will have even more than last season.

You will not be taking any chances at all if you send your orders to Peony Headquarters, which is KENNICOTT BROS. COMPANY. Don't gamble on the other fellow's chances of getting the stock in the last minute. We have our Peonies and are ready now to take care of you.

Because we seem to plug Peonies, do not think that we have not got all other flowers suitable for Memorial Day, too. Try us on Cape Jasmine, Sweet Peas, Russell and all other roses. Our flowers are all coming in by special trucks, and we are getting every order out. We have one of the largest supplies in this market and can take care of you right.

Memorial day demand. Cape jasmine is the latest arrival and buyers on the Chicago market are not slow to show their appreciation of the excellent stock being received.

Green goods are moving in a satisfactory manner, but flat ferns are extremely scarce, owing to the refusal of the express companies at many points to receive perishable goods consigned to Chicago.

The Express Strike.

Considering that all the drivers employed by the express companies in Chicago struck without notice May 16, leaving the market without either delivery or pickup service, the trade has been doing wonderfully well. The first day it was every man for himself, but the trade promptly organized the Wholesale Florists' Special Cartage Service, with E. C. Amling as treasurer and Fred Lautenschlager as general manager, the latter giving his time and experience without cost, for the good of the cause. May 18 it was necessary to send motor trucks to Riverside, Harvey and Hammond to put outgoing shipments on the trains, but since then Heinlein cartage wagons have been getting the outgoing shipments to the depots without serious delay. The strikers have permitted wagons marked "Funeral Flowers" to pass their pickets. It has not been possible to make trains with the accuracy of the regular express company service, especially the early trains, but by early evening everything gets to its depot.

More difficulty has been experienced with the incoming shipments than with the out freight. With the first tie-up the express companies notified their agents everywhere to refuse all shipments of perishable stock for Chicago. That made trouble. In the course of time each wholesaler and grower completed individual arrangements for getting the stock to market, many by motor car, others by rail to a nearby town and thence by motor truck to the city and store. Almost before these means were thoroughly organized Mr. Lautenschlager's wagons began hauling freight from as well as to the stations and arrangements with express companies and growers had to be revised in the interest of speed and economy. the whole the situation was splendidly in hand by May 22 and no trouble is expected, although the quantity of stock to be shipped out May 27 and 28 will be something enormous.

While there is little danger of the Memorial day shipments being delayed, wisdom will prompt most buyers to order their stock shipped a few hours earlier than usual—it will be unwise to wait till the last train this time.

May 24 the indications were that the drivers would return to work at any moment, in which case service immediately would become normal.

Various Notes.

A flower store in which no detail is overlooked that goes to the making of a really first-class establishment will be opened in the North Edgewater hotel building, June 15, by John Mangel. The fixtures, which will correspond in every particular with those in the Palmer house store, are being furnished by Buchbinder Bros. Mr. Mangel has a way of never doing things by halves and this latest venture will prove that he makes no exceptions.

After applying himself most diligently to his business for twenty-five years in the same location, Peter Sroczynski, 1523 North Harding avenue, has come to the conclusion that it is time he was taking a rest and enjoying the fruits of his labors. With this end in view, he is offering his place for sale and making plans to retire to a picturesque suburban home and spend his declining years smoking his pipe in his chimney corner or motoring about the country.

The Warren Park Floral Co., of Cicero, was incorporated last week with a capital stock of $2,500. Those named as incorporators were John Grant, Alexander Grant and William Scott.

Elaborate preparations for the rapidly approaching season of fashionable weddings is occupying the time of the George Wienhoeber store force, 41 South Wabash avenue.

The blooming qualities of a carnation are what count with the average grower and N. J. Wietor says that for the man who retails from his own greenhouse he knows of no variety that will compare with Washington, the Enchantress sport A. T. Pyfer sent out from the greenhouses of the Chicago Carnation Co., a few years ago. Mr. Wietor says it blooms so much more freely than any other variety in the Wietor establishment that it pays handsomely in spite of the fact that it does not bring so good an average price as some others.

CARLISLE & SON, Florists

Successors to MRS. J. W. CARLISLE,

ALVIN, TEXAS

by the express drivers' strike Peter Reinberg put his new light truck on the road a little earlier than intended. The Reinberg trucks made several trips to out-of-town junctions last week to avoid strike-bound depots.

Charles Erne says the peony growers will be the chief sufferers from the express drivers' strike, many of their shipments having been refused by the express companies, while others lay for days in the local express offices without notice to the consignee.

One of the principal effects of the strike of express drivers, according to A. T. Pyfer, was a shortage of ferns early this week. Incoming shipments were lost sight of in the great accumulation of freight in the express offices.

There has been such a steady growth in the business of W. L. Palinsky, 2865 Palmer avenue, that another and a larger delivery car will be necessary, according to Herman Wallace. Funeral work in particular has been unusually heavy.

Strike or no strike, the E. C. Amling Co. comments that its sales last week exceeded those of a year ago by $3,500.

An excellent demand for corsages in which cattleyas figure is reported by O. J. Friedman, in the Congress hotel. He also finds a ready sale for the more expensive conservatory and sun parlor accessories.

War or no war, Winterson's Seed Store had advices that its Belgian bays reached New York May 19. They are rolling westward now.

C. W. McKellar, while far from being himself again, is once more able to be out.

Work on the east half of the new Wittbold apartment house is progressing rapidly. The west half will follow at once and will be completed during the summer, so that by autumn the Wittbold retail store will be in extremely fine new quarters.

E. F. Kurowski, president of the John C. Moninger Co., May 20 received delivery of a new Cadillac motor car that gives him and his son, R. E. Kurowski, much pleasure.

The floor space of the University Florist, 1121 East Fifty-fifth street, H. C. Mulder, proprietor, has been practically doubled by the removal of a partition. The depth of the store is now seventy-five feet, with a separate work room and cut flower room, while new electric lighting fixtures add much to the attractiveness of the place. The surrounding neighborhood has been building up rapidly during the last year with high grade apartment buildings, and Mr. Mulder reports an unusually active general demand.

A new, panel-topped Vim auto truck belonging to the Everette R. Peacock Co. has appeared on the streets.

There can be no doubt that H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is satisfied that the Saxon car is good, as he bought his second last week.

A new touring car adds to the pleasure being derived from life by Joseph Weis, 3445 Southport avenue.

Complaint has been made that someone with a perverted sense of humor has been annoying members of the retail trade with counterfeit telephone C. O. D. orders. So far, these fake orders have been confined to cut flowers, but even at that there is no joke in delivering a box of cut flowers to a residence only to be met with the statement that no order had been given.

Co. is always interesting, but early this week it proved unusually attractive, as the front porch of a modern bungalow was being erected against the east wall. The supporting columns, walls and railings appear to be constructed of various colored rocks, and that is just where the interesting part comes in. The surfaces are of a novel composition that may be used for interior wall decorations, window displays or any purpose where it is desired to reproduce the appearance of a stone wall.

The Market.

The weather last week continued unseasonably cool and business in general was fair. No large quantity of stock is arriving and prices, while not high, are fairly steady. Roses have shortened in supply, but carnations are holding up well; their keeping qualities, owing to the weather, are rather above the average. Sweet peas are in good supply, but their stems are shortening. Peonies are to be had and are in good demand. They come principally from points south of this city. The local crop is rather backward and, other than red, few are coming in. Indications are for a full crop about May 30.

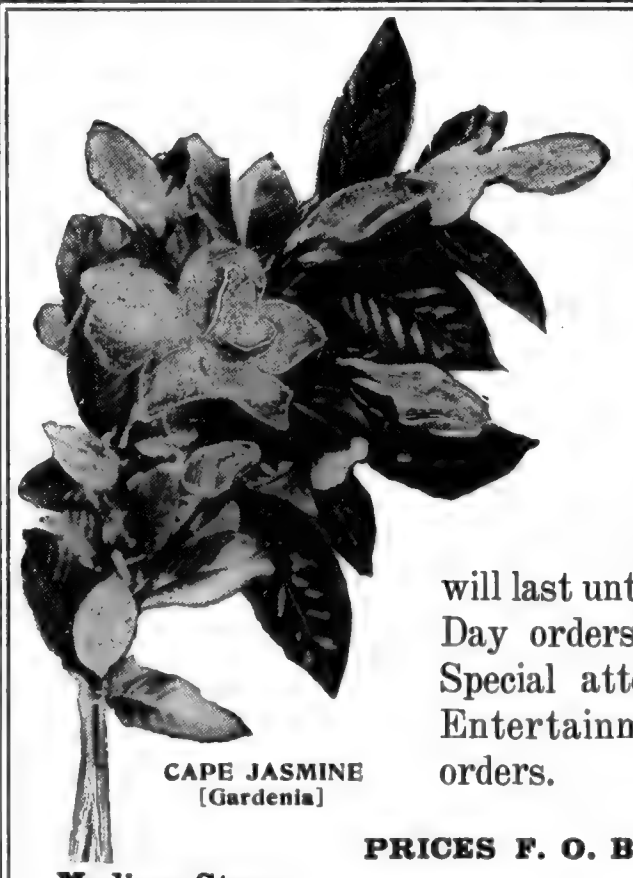
The bedding plant trade is at its height and every one engaged in this line reports an extremely busy season.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held May 22. As the night was stormy, the attendance was light.

Miss O'Neal, of the Women's Civic League, was present and asked the club to coöperate with the league in holding an amateur rose show this spring. The club heartily endorsed the project and offered the use of the club rooms. A committee consisting of I. H. Moss, F. C. Bauer, William F. Ekas, George Morrison and William J. Johnston was appointed to assist in the affair. It is desired to secure from club members suitable plants, both decorative and flowering, for the hall decoration at the show. Those who wish to aid should get in touch with Mr. Moss and advise him as to what they may send.

Various Notes.



The Hamilton Flower Shop has been using large quantities of Darwin tulips for window displays and finds these are in greater demand each year. The public is becoming educated to the possibilities of this late spring flower.

The Baltimore Cut Flower Co. has been handling a fine lot of Roosevelt ferns in regular sizes and specimen plants. These are of good quality and sell quickly at a good figure.

Samuel Feast & Sons have set aside a section of their display window for the showing of a good line of bird houses.

Max Fierstein, of the Moore Seed Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor last week and said the surest sign of good business was the promptness with which florists are paying their bills.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ekas celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage May 17, with a reception to their friends and relatives at their

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market has undergone a decided change not usual during the second half of May. The supply of flowers has decreased decidedly, causing a shortage at times. This is due to a number of causes. Many growers with houses not particularly well ventilated threw out their flowering plants after the hot spell of a fortnight ago; others devoted their space to bedding plants or vegetables; still others are off crop. The most potent influence of all is the lateness of the peony, relied on at this season, when showy decorative flowers are needed. Usually by May 24 local peonies are quite plentiful; today they are scarce. This is particularly unfortunate, as the peony at Memorial day is a necessity. There will be peonies next week, but they will not be plentiful enough to fill all orders, and this means a certain amount of dissatisfaction and loss of business, although it also means a livelier market for other flowers. Take it all in all, the wholesalers are inclined to think that the interests of the business are best furthered by local peonies reaching their height May 25; this will not be the case this season.

To return to the cut flower market for the present week, the May processions in the churches have had a stimulating effect. The cool weather and a certain amount of entertaining have helped. There is no especial change in the supply, excepting that carnations seem to have gone off a bit and that Spanish irises and outdoor valley are nearing the end of their season. Prices generally are better than usual at this time; so, too, is the quality of much of the stock, aided by the cooling.

The Brothers Michell.

The problem that confronted the Henry F. Michell Co. was how to fill plant orders fully, and on time. The policy of the house had been to buy from its customers, a policy of reciprocity that had borne fruit. Every customer liked to have the house take some of his product in part payment of his account. There were, however, difficulties. It was extremely hard to fill orders properly. Sometimes the growers were slow; sometimes it was necessary to get stock from several of them to fill an order. This required time and blocked the store at busy seasons. In this emergency, the Michell place at Andalusia was planned. It had other features—the development of the perennial, advertising value and so forth.

To put the producing end of the business on its own merits, the place at Andalusia was run separately from the store. It is owned and operated by Henry F. Michell and Fred J. Michell, and what it produces is sold to the Henry F. Michell Co. Of course, this is merely a matter of bookkeeping that is given here only to show that the place must be self-supporting. It is doubtful whether either of the brothers knew exactly what Andalusia would do; certainly the street did not. For instance, the street expected that great quantities of vegetables would be grown there, tomatoes, eggplants and so forth. Yet today there are practically no vegetables on the place and Mr. Richester assures me that they play no part in the production.

Do you want to know just what is going on at Andalusia? It is extremely interesting, and I will try briefly to give you an idea of it. There are a dozen greenhouses, connected by a long corridor house through the middle, that are filled with pot plants. Most of these plants are of the soft-wooded bedding type—geraniums, including Helen Michell, salvias, coleus, heliotropes, etc. Then there are great quantities of roses, cannas, dahlias, cyclamens and hardy chrysanthemums. A large motor truck makes daily trips from Andalusia to the store and then delivers plant orders in outlying districts. A team takes the express orders to the Torresdale station.

McCALLUM CO., PITTSBURGH, PA.

Outdoors active operations are in full swing. Frank B. Michell was hard at work with a force of men planting gladiolus bulbs. Two hundred thousand, I think he said, were to go in the ground. Beyond these a field of peonies—apparently last season's divisions were coming up. Opposite was a large field of Spanish irises, while beyond lay the newly acquired 9-acre farm, just being plowed. The advertising value of the place rests in the handsome lawn, with its beds of choice evergreens and cannas, which lies along the New York tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad. The natural advantage is enhanced by a unique, white-lettered enameled sign, which Mr. Richester pointed out with a smile. It bore the familiar words: "Always Sow Michell's Evergreen Lawn Grass Seed." The perennial bed contained specimens of all the perennials grown on the place. Only the early blue phlox, divaricata, and the hardy golden alyssum were yet in bloom.

George Saville is in charge at Andalusia. The way in which he has filled the new King houses is evidence of the fact that he means to make things go. His bed of many thousands of carnations, forcing varieties, looks well. Before closing these notes, it occurs to me that perhaps some readers have not met Mr. Richester. To them, allow me to present Paul F. Richester, one of the ablest business men of the day, who has made it a lifelong rule never to require that anything be said twice and never to miss a chance to advance the interests of the House of Michell.

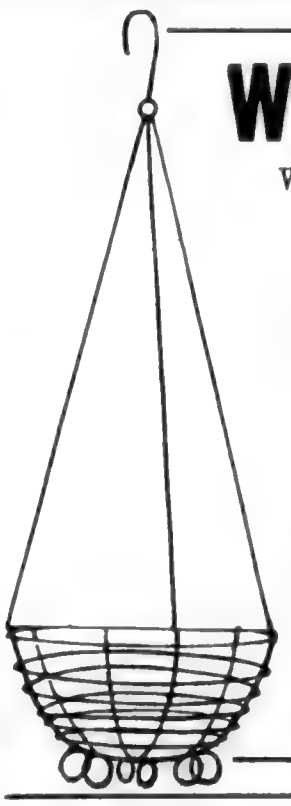
Various Notes.

Adolph Farenwald, vice-chairman of the National Flower Show Committee, believes that the profit on the show held in this city March 25 to April 2 will reach $12,000—not $2,000 as stated last week.

A. H. Pike plans to sell his retail flower store at Bryn Mawr, Pa., in order to return to England to serve in the British army. This will be a great loss, as Mr. and Mrs. Pike have built up a successful business with the Bryn Mawr College during the last few years.



M. J. Callahan says that the cool weather has retarded outdoor planting until now. This week it is in full swing. Mr. Callahan says that cut flowers have been in active demand. His window of blue irises, yellow daisies and ferns was pleasing.

Aschmann Bros. own and operate ten acres of land at Bustleton avenue and Cottman street, in addition to their place at Second and Bristol streets; not two acres, as stated last week.

Raymond Brunswick comments on the heavy Memorial day business of the M. Rice Co.

Stuart H. Miller has had some large shipping orders.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer is confident that needed supplies will be forthcoming next season. This means that, war or no war, we shall have what we require. Mr. Bayersdorfer adds that business is extraordinarily brisk at this time.

Founders' day, May 20, was observed at Girard College by appropriate exercises and a drill of the college boys. The outdoor planting is not yet at its best, owing to the backward season. The indoor decorations were most effective. There were handsome flowering and foliage plants from the greenhouses, tastefully arranged; also some choice cut flowers and two large wreaths from the alumni of eastern Pennsylvania.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. has put a new rush car into commission.

Phil.

Butte, Mont.—J. W. Thompson has leased the greenhouses of his employers, W. Inch & Son, and is doing business under the name of Park City Greenhouses.

The Market.

In regard to supply, the market was excellent, but the demand was not up to what it should have been. It seemed that retailers had only funeral orders to work on, as light-colored stock was in good demand. There was plenty of it at most reasonable prices. Weather conditions were fine. The consignments of the week were heavy, especially in carnations. The prices of carnations were considerably lower than during the week before. All varieties were of fine quality. Roses, too, are in large supply, with prices somewhat low, except on extra select stock of Russell, Ophelia, Ward and Beauty. The daily shipments of peonies are heavy and the prices on these are down to $3 per hundred. Texas shipments of cape jasmines began last week and from now on there will be large daily supplies. Callas and Easter lilies continue to arrive in large supply. Splendid lots of Shasta daisies arrive each day. Valley, snapdragons, irises, sweet peas and a fine lot of gladioli make up the daily market. Extra good smilax brings 20 cents per string. Prices on other greens are unchanged.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting May 15, at the Mission Inn Garden. Much important business was transacted and the Easter and Mothers' day business was reviewed. The attendance was fairly good.

Alex Siegel spent a day at Chicago last week, looking over the wholesale market. He reports splendid market conditions there.

Frank X. Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, was confined to bed last week, but is around again. During his illness the buying at the market was done by his brother, Vincent. This firm had a busy week with funeral work.

One of the busiest stores along Washington avenue is that of the St. Louis Seed Co., which was taxed to its capacity last week. The large force of salesmen could hardly serve the many customers and Messrs. Rau and Hummert were pressed into service.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold its monthly meeting June 1, at the Eleven Mile House. The installation of the new officers will take place and a program for the summer meetings will be arranged.

David Geddis, head of the flower department at Vandervoort's, reports a heavy sale of plants and bulbs last week, especially in hardy perennials.

Frank Sanders, who has charge of the Grand Leader flower department, says business was good in plants and hardy stock and never before have the sales been so heavy as last week.

The Shackelford Nursery Co. will start this week cutting thousands of Coreopsis lanceolata grandiflora. This is one of the best early sellers. The Shackelford daisy is in so large demand at present that the cut is confined to local consumers.

The wire department of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has had a busy season in wire trellises. "Billy" Vogel also is kept busy with the manufacture of wooden easels, which find a good market at all times.

week. He was on his way to spend a week's vacation at his old home in Indianapolis, Ind.

Carl Beyer, who did jury duty last week, found a little time to visit the market. He says business could hardly be better and the enormous stock of bedding plants will soon be cleaned out.

Geo. H. Angermueller has a large number of shipping orders for Memorial day supplies already booked. Business in this line has been excellent all the season.

The Art League of this city will offer a prize of $50 for the best exterior display of flowers during the Democratic national convention, in the week of June 11, open to all downtown business houses. This is a splendid move and should bring a lot of business to local florists.

The leading hotels and banks in the downtown district are making grand window-box displays. Those of the Jefferson hotel and the Mercantile Trust Co., the latter put up by David Geddis, are most noteworthy.

A visit to Edwardsville, Ill., last week to view the new greenhouse range of Henry Blixen proved interesting. One house, 40x150, is completed and two others are under construction, each 35x150. All are of Dietsch material and have Evans ventilators. A large-sized Kroeschell boiler will be installed. Mr. Blixen will have nearly 20,000 feet of glass. Roses, carnations and chrysanthemums will be grown. Splendid offices, storage rooms and cooling rooms are being built. A large tract of land around this new place provides plenty of room for additional houses. Mr. Blixen was in the employ of the J. F. Ammann Co. for the last twenty years. The output of the greenhouses will be shipped to this market and the place will be known as the Woodlawn Gardens.

W. S. Wells and his committee mailed out 500 letters to florists in Missouri asking them to be at Columbia, May 24, to attend a meeting to organize the Missouri State Florists' Association. About fifteen local florists left here May 23 to attend the meeting.

A visit was also paid to the establishment of the J. F. Ammann Co., just across the way from Mr. Blixen's greenhouses. In the absence of J. F. Ammann, Mr. Smith and Mr. Klein showed us through the range. The big rose and carnation houses still are producing, as usual, a high quality of stock and plenty of it. J. J. B.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

The weather was unfavorable to the growers in this vicinity last week and there was a little jump in the price of some kinds of flowers in consequence. Carnations, especially, were affected, and jumped to 4 cents each at wholesale. The cool, showery weather also affected the retail trade, which, though generally satisfactory, had a tendency to sag. Tulips, hyacinths, jonquils, daffodils and other bulbous stock have practically disappeared from the market, but other flowers and plants are arriving for the first time this season, keeping up the general supply. Violets have disappeared and some florists substitute for them dark blue sweet peas, when called upon for a blanket of that color. Outdoor valley is beginning to come to the market, and is generally long-stemmed and of good quality. These flowers cost 1 cent each now. Excellent calla lilies are arriving and are of moderate price. Easter lilies also are plentiful. Sweet peas are abundant and cheap, costing 50 cents per hundred. Both white and yellow irises are beginning to appear, and, considering it is the beginning of the season, are quite reasonable. White lilac has appeared within the last ten days, and sells for 15 cents per bunch. The purple lilac is plentiful now, but continues in good demand. Stocks are abundant. Miniature indoor gladioli have just made their appearance for the first time this season.

Potted geraniums are daily growing more plentiful and by the latter part of this week the flood of these will be at its height. By Monday, May 29, it is probable that the large supplies which the growers now have on hand will be nearly exhausted because of the Memorial day decorations on the next day. Potted fuchsias are beginning to appear here, as well as potted verbenas, marigolds, etc. Potted heliotropes are becoming more plentiful. The season for bedding plants has been a little late this year, but large quantities of them are being sold now.

Club Meeting.

On account of the hall being used by the Tall Cedars of Lebanon on the regular night for the May meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club, the meeting was called for the night before. The change of night proved disastrous as far as attendance was concerned, there being a little less than a quorum present. Those who had come, however, talked over informally matters of interest to the florists of Essex county. Most of the discussion was in regard to preliminary plans for the second annual chrysanthemum show, to be given next fall under the auspices of the Essex County Club. Some of the members of the club favor hiring some centrally located hall for a period of two or three days, planning to hold a big show and charge admission. Others think it is already too late to plan for so elaborate a show, although heartily in favor of trying to produce a somewhat larger show than the first one, held last fall. While that was a creditable effort for a first affair, the members want to see each year a bigger and more attractive show. The June meeting of the club will be held on the regular meeting night.

Various Notes.

George Muller states that he has had considerable funeral work, but business otherwise has been rather quiet for the last two weeks.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co., at 14 Branford place, reports a large demand for rose bushes.

McLaughlin & Murphy report much funeral work, and they believe the indications are that business generally is picking up, though it has been a little quiet for a few days on account of the weather.

J. Rose complains that, on account of the cold, cloudy weather, flowers in his greenhouses have not developed as they should during the last week or ten days.

"Taken as a whole, business has been excellent during the spring," is the report given by Mr. McKnight, grower for August Begerow.

Edward Jacobi complains of the scarcity of help. Business has been good, as a whole, during the spring, and at present there is much funeral work. He is crippled in getting out his stock because of his inability to get sufficient competent help in the greenhouses.

R. B. M.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A decided improvement of business set in May 17 and it still remains. We have had unusually cold weather for May, with much rain and heavy skies. As a consequence the arrivals of stock have fallen off sharply and May 20 and 22 there were surprisingly good clean-ups at much improved prices. Roses have cleared without any trouble. American Beauties drag somewhat, but the price on specials shows an advance. Hybrid teas are doing well. Hadley, Russell, Shawyer and Francis Scott Key roses make from $1 to $12 per hundred; other varieties are somewhat lower in price. Even the small varieties, such as Mlle. Cecile Brunner and George Elger, have sold well. Carnations have been making better prices on the average than for Mothers' day, $4 to $6 per hundred for good flowers being secured without trouble. Probabilities are that growers are holding back many flowers for local retail orders and in anticipation of the higher prices nearer Memorial day.

Sweet peas have come into their own again and are bringing double last week's prices. Marguerites, which had been selling down to 50 cents per hundred, advanced to $1.50, being selected in lieu of carnations, owing to the high price of the latter. The supply of bulbous flowers is much reduced. Some good outdoor Darwin and cottage tulips are included. Valley remains stiff in price. Snapdragon, lilies and callas remain about the same. Cattleyas are a little easier, but gardenias are in shorter supply. Some of the regular Memorial day flowers are beginning to appear. These include feverfew, Gypsophila elegans, stocks, candytuft and spiræas. Trade in bedding plants is good, but it has been restricted somewhat by the continued cool weather.

Various Notes.

Probabilities at the time of writing are that many growers will fail to get a large proportion of their Memorial day crops in on time. A few warm days would help, but so far we have seen few of them. Indications are that greenhouse flowers will be scarce and expensive. Outdoors there will be an abundance of splendid lilacs, Darwin and cottage tulips, Narcissus poeticus, lily of the valley and German irises, but pyrethrums, deutzias and other Memorial day favorites will not be in flower. Retailers have for weeks been making larger preparations than ever to supply an adequate number of magnolia and artificial flower wreaths. But for these, it would be impossible to fill one-half the orders for Memorial day stock.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, cut 30,000 carnations for Mothers' day, of which 20,000 were white. For Memorial day he will cut at least as many. Matchless at this season proves especially profitable, owing to its good keeping qualities on the plant.

A. H. Hews & Co. report tremendous activity in the flower pot trade. They have hard work to keep their customers supplied with 2¼-inch, 3-inch, 3½-inch and 4-inch pots.

Ranson's formerly among the largest growers of greenhouse lettuce and cucumbers near Boston, are planning to go into carnation culture heavily and have bought about 250,000 rooted cuttings. They have formed a stock company, secured a competent manager and probably will drop vegetable culture in favor of flowers after this season.

A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, has a nice crop of double feverfew in just the right condition for Memorial day. His yellow and white marguerites are doing splendidly and net excellent prices.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club June 20 the regular lecture will be omitted and the meeting will be observed as ladies' night. There will be a small admission charge, similar to that made a year ago. Interest in the club's Bar Harbor trip is growing. The steamer on which reservations have been made leaves Boston July 14, at 6 p. m., arriving at Bar Harbor at 10:30 the next morning. The show of the American Sweet Pea Society and the horticultural attractions of this noted summer resort are sure to draw a large attendance.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, has a splendid crop of Rosette, Matchless, Beacon and Pink Delight carnations for Memorial day, as well as a fine crop from his new crimson seedlings.

Patrick Welch is well equipped for Memorial day trade and his shippers are sending him excellent lots of roses, carnations, late tulips, sweet peas and other seasonable stock.

At Penn's, heavy Memorial day advertising is being done and a large staff is busily employed preparing thousands of wreaths of magnolias and artificial flowers, for which the flood of orders is already coming in. Ladies' hats trimmed with natural flowers are being featured. Henry Penn says an increasing number of ladies come in to have their headgear trimmed in this way.

Some excellent prizes are offered in the schedule for the show of March 21 to 25, 1917, which has been issued by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. A gold medal and $300 for first and $200 and silver medal are offered for a commercial group of orchids.

An inspection of Harry Quint's special Memorial day store at 34 Bromfield street last week showed a large force at work on artificial wreaths. Some thousands of these are being made up and a heavy advertising campaign is being conducted. A wide variety of make-ups were noted and the display certainly was an imposing one.

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, report heavy advance orders for Memorial day and they have many extra hands working in anticipation of record sales. General business has been good of late.

While the season here is ten to fourteen days later than the average, due to the cooler and more moist weather prevailing—and while many growers of vegetables and flowers are bemoaning the absence of hot, dry weather—lawns, trees, shrubs, hardy perennials and bulbous plants have reveled under the humid skies. Bulbs were never so fine and they have lasted wonderfully. Rock gardens are glorious and such a season as this has naturally greatly boomed this delightful branch of gardening.

F. J. Dolansky is marketing a fine lot of ficus and nephrolepis. His Cattleya Mossiæ now is in good crop. He also has a nice lot of Phalænopsis amabilis and miltonias. Gardenias are somewhat off crop. W. N. C.

Jamestown, N. Y.—G. H. Heelas is much pleased with his new delivery truck. He bought the chassis of a light touring car and had a special body built, with glass ovals in the sides. A rack below the "windows" brings plants up where they may be seen from the outside.

A STRIKING WINDOW.

The window of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco, always is one of the bright spots on Kearny street. Not only is the window modern in its equipment, but the decoration always is skillfully done. The overcrowding frequently seen in flower store windows is carefully avoided and striking effects are obtained by the use of a small number of large, bold arrangements of choice flowers. The accompanying illustration gives an excellent idea of the style of decoration in vogue.

Beautiful Window of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Funeral work has been the mainstay of the market this week, helping to clean up a lot of stock that was not first-class by any means, and proving profitable to the retailers. Really good carnations and roses have been on the short side and some orders for these for Mothers' day had to be turned down. Sweet peas are maintaining their quality remarkably well, as the cool nights keep the vines in good order. No rain has fallen to date during May, but the cool, dull weather is fine for newly planted stock. It is not often that the northern stock is superior to that locally grown, but at present the northern growers have a shade the better of us. Some of the roses coming from the San Francisco growers are excellent. The Beauties, Russells and Ophelias are particularly good. A number of outdoor flowers are in the market, but not as many as usual at this season, especially in herbaceous stock. There has been practically no valley on the market for the last few days, the supply being short and uncertain. Orchids are about equal to the demand. Greens are plentiful. Good pot ferns are scarce.

Various Notes.

A novel and attractive Mothers' day window, representing a telegraph system crossing a rough country in miniature, was a great drawing card at the store of the Redondo Floral Co., at 218 West Seventh street. Everything was worked out in perfect detail, and incoming and outgoing telegrams were also displayed in the window. As usual when a thing is well done, it attracted a crowd of interested onlookers, and, what was more to the purpose, brought in the shekels in the form of a big demand for flowers "to be sent to Mother."

A highly successful rose show was held at Hamburger's, May 15 and 16, under the management of E. Hunt, who runs the flower department there. Though run primarily as an advertisement for the firm, such shows do a great deal of good to the trade generally, by arousing in amateurs a spirit of rivalry. Several fine silver cups were awarded. The judges were William Clark, of the nursery department of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., and Fred Hills.

Paul Staiger, of Staiger & Fincken, and Mrs. Staiger are mourning the loss of the latter's father, Mr. Rohde, who died at his home at Glendale, May 15, and was buried May 17. An immense number of fine funeral pieces were sent by friends, a large auto truck being necessary to carry them.

Murata & Co. are featuring an exceptionally fine strain of double Shasta daisies, which they say are wonderful keepers and sell on sight. Mothers' day trade was exceptionally heavy here.

At the store of the L. A. Floral Co. there were some Mothers' day orders that could not be filled, owing to shortage of stock fit for shipping long distances. The first of the new-crop carnations are in and there are already many advance orders for Memorial day.

At the new home of M. L. Germain, president of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., one of the features of the landscape work is to be a California wild garden. A miniature cañon is to be worked out and gradually planted entirely with native species. Several other large landscape contracts are being carried out by the nursery department of this house.

Geo. W. Smith has his new lath house finished and practically all the stock moved out from the Wall street place. He is now figuring on his propagating houses, one of which is to go up at once, the others to follow as required. A good deal of work still remains to be done, but a good start has been made in what will be a perfectly laid out nursery.

Rapid progress has been made with the new greenhouses at the range of Walter Armacost & Co., at Sawtelle. At the time of writing, three of the new houses are ready for the glass and two others will be ready shortly. The replanting of the new rose stock is finished, 10,000 young plants having been set in the new houses. When all are complete, the new additions will just about double the area this firm has in glass.

Frank Lichtenberg reports a more than usually good prospect for June weddings, as inquiries and orders are coming in freely. As soon as possible, he expects to tear out the interior decorations in the store and change it entirely, making it one of the most attractive stores in the country. He also intends to take an eastern trip this year.

H. W. Turner is completing a collection of fine conifers and flowering shrubs around the greenhouses, a most interesting and attractive feature. Several lines and beds of the newer polyantha roses also give an excellent chance to compare these and find out which are best for this climate. Under glass everything is in fine shape and the newly planted stock is growing rapidly.

H. Reeve Darling is trying out the effect of a flower store on the eleventh floor in the exclusive Brock Shoppes, on West Seventh street. His new store on Sixth street is also attractive, being well lighted and containing an elegant line of fixtures. Business is reported as fine here. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The florists are well satisfied with the marked increase of business Mothers' day. The daily papers gave considerable publicity to the occasion and that helped the day's sales materially. White carnations were in particularly heavy demand, despite the efforts of the trade to shift the call in other directions. So great was the popularity of white carnations that prices jumped from 25 cents to $1.25 per dozen.

The weather has been freakish in certain sections of California this season, which has inconvenienced the growers and nurserymen more or less, though no large damage is reported. The heavy frosts early in the month did some damage to flowers, but this was comparatively light. The long drought has been hard on nursery stock.

Many weddings and funerals made business fairly active last week. Nothing was too plentiful, unless it was roses. They continued to flood the market, but a lighter supply is expected from now on, as some of the growers are drying their rose plants. Most of them will keep going until Decoration day, however. There are so many roses of excellent quality in all varieties that the shorter-stemmed stock is hard to dispose of. Street venders are offering really fine roses at low prices. Carnations have been scarce since Mothers' day and ordinary stock sells for 75 cents per dozen. There is a heavy supply of sweet peas, Spencers showing up particularly well. Many varieties of gladioli are offered, including Mrs. Francis King and America. Lilies are on the wane. Pansies in flats are popular. Primulas, both cut and potted, sell well.

Various Notes.

Jack Olson, of the New Rosarie, reports much basket work for dinners, etc. He is making a special feature of this class of work and says it has brought him many new customers. Basket work, he says, is extremely desirable in that it uses odds and ends of everything.

Some of the growers have a grievance in the treatment they at times have received at the hands of the San Francisco police. This applies to those bringing in stock in wagons. This method gets them into trouble on account of the license restrictions. The police take some of them in at the California Flower Market, on Bush street, every few weeks. An arrest was made a day or so ago.

Henry Maier, of the Burlingame Nursery Co., who was operated on for appendicitis recently, is reported to be in a serious condition.

The annual spring flower show of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society was held May 21.

Frank Pelicano, who has been at Byron Hot Springs for two weeks on account of rheumatism, is recovering nicely and is expected back on duty shortly.

John Gill, of the E. Gill Nursery Co., was called to Williams, Cal., recently to act as judge at the annual rose show of the Sacramento Valley Rose Society, which he says was highly successful.

The rose show at the E. Gill Nursery Co. place, at West Berkeley, May 12 and 13, was so successful that the company has decided to make it an annual event. The packing shed near the main entrance to the grounds was converted into an attractive setting for the display by the use of white birch and oak branches as a background. Dorothy Perkins roses were banked along one side of the room and a long table extended down the other side, on which were arranged 250 varieties of roses, including many new specimens. Lady Hillingdon attracted much attention, as did Irish Fireflame, Sunburst, Warrior, Mme. Edouard Herriot, Hoosier Beauty, British Queen, Venus, Princess of Wales and others. After visiting the show, the guests were at liberty to tour the grounds, and many availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the rose beds near the waterfront.

S. Picetti, who has charge of the flower and seed department of the Emporium, for Charles C. Navlet, of San Jose, has arranged for a big sale special on potted roses during the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the store, when all departments of the store will offer special sales. He says the demand for French hydrangeas keeps up remarkable well.

on the evening of May 16. A profusion of French hydrangeas, Dorothy Perkins roses and sweet peas in the pastel shades were used.

Charles F. Shellgrain, manager of the J. B. Boland store on Kearny street, says business continues better than it was at this time last year, notwithstanding that there are no exposition visitors.

The Misses Hannon, who are located temporarily on Sutter street, say they may operate two stores when their new quarters on Polk street are ready, if business at the downtown store warrants its continuance. S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

A record-breaking business was done by the florists Mothers' day. The public gave more consideration to the use of appropriate colors, and by careful handling the supply of white carnations met the demand fairly. It was the most tiresome day of the year, as the sales were largely restricted to half-dozens or less, and a good deal of talk was required to make the sales. The proceeds were small compared with the efforts expended.

Business last week was fairly good. Counter trade was brisk and funeral work normal. The cut of roses was quite heavy and the quality good. Mossiæ cattleyas are in oversupply. The supply of outdoor-grown valley is nearly exhausted. Carnations come in freely. Few kinds of blooming plants are shown, the hydrangeas leading. Some inferior cinerarias and obconicas are seen. Snapdragons and sweet peas, with a number of outdoor perennials, add to the supply of cut stock.

Fischer's Splendens

The Magnificent Lavender Freesia

THE only commercial colored Freesia in the world. A truly wonderful novelty that took many years to produce. The above cut will give some idea of its beauty. It represents a bunch of only twelve sprays photographed side by side with my new GIANT WHITE. One glance will satisfy anyone of its wonderful commercial merit, and no words are necessary to describe it except to say that the bunches figured measure nearly three feet tall, not including the vase. It is much larger and stronger in every way than Purity, one of its parents; has the same fine habit of growth and is very fragrant.

I offer it in two shades of color, a bluish lavender and a reddish lavender. Only good-sized, flowering bulbs sold reported that the stock being grown for this event was in splendid condition and would receive official inspection in a few days. A brief discussion of the methods of fixing prices for flowers sold on the public market brought out the fact that the market master rules prices should be about midway between the wholesale and retail figures. One new member was elected.

H. E. Weed invited the members to visit his nursery at Beaverton Sunday, May 28, to view the peony blooms. It was expected that thirty or forty members would go. Growers of perennials stated that there would be a shortage of these blooms for Memorial day. Several visitors attended the meeting and enjoyed the luncheon after adjournment.

Various Notes.

Gene Robinson is cutting some excellent sweet peas.

C. W. Ward, of Eureka, Cal., spent several days here last week.

The Kelso Floral Co. has bought an Overland delivery car.

Edward Boyce, of the Martin & Forbes force, said the cash register got overheated registering small coins Mothers' day and that the amount received was not much more than needed to pay for the repairs on the machine. August Zitzewitz is cutting a heavy crop of carnations.

E. J. Steele said his local sales of pansies had fallen off this year. Street venders and the public market are cutting into this trade.

Thomas Bodley reports a good business this season.

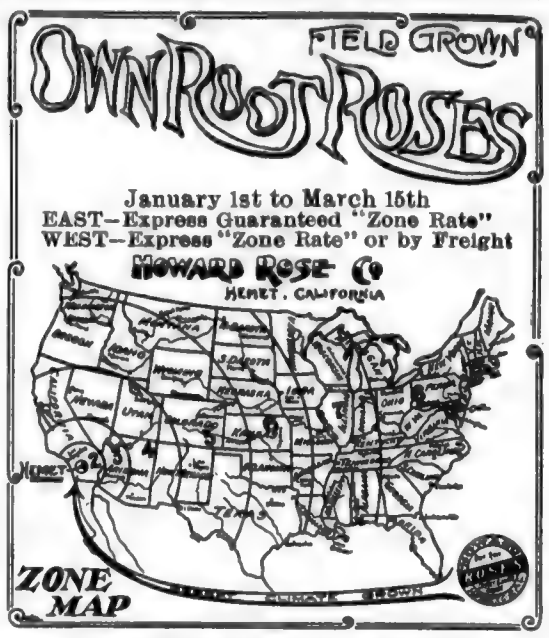
H. E. Weed said the season for peonies was more than three weeks later than usual, and that many varieties will be in their prime Memorial day.

S. W. W.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

The florists are busy with bedding stock, all the stores more than ever before making a specialty of this side line. Roses were plentiful and this week there will be good supplies of outdoor Brunner roses, etc., arriving much later than last season, when roses were in full bloom long before this. Carnations are not any too plentiful. It is hoped that fair prices may be maintained for some time to come. There are quantities of orchids in the stores. Cornuta violets are taking the place of other varieties. Their lack of odor is not much noticed, considering that the imported violets have the same defect. Sweet peas are fairly plentiful. The outdoor crop is in good condition and soon will be ready for the market.



Various Notes.

Charles Muench, well known to the trade here, passed away last week. He was ill for some time, so his death was not unexpected. He had been employed in nearly all the flower stores in Seattle. His wife survives.

The Hollywood Gardens are marketing tomatoes, of which they have an excellent crop.

Rosaia Bros. are receiving a fine cut of Hadley and Ophelia roses from the Thomas Floral Co., the cut averaging about 1,250 per day. The quality of the stock leaves nothing to be desired.

McCray Florists' Refrigerators

The McCRAY construction keeps flowers cool and fresh longer than by any other system of refrigeration. It provides an even temperature of the correct degree for cut flowers and stops the great waste and profit loss that is caused by imperfect refrigeration.

The various compartments in a McCRAY are of different sizes to accommodate the different lengths of cut flower stems and your flowers are given an inviting display.

For interior linings you have your choice of either handsome bevel plate mirror or beautiful white enamel, which are very easy to clean. The exterior may be of any finish desired to match the interior of your store woodwork or other fixtures.

Invest in a McCRAY. Make it a partner in your business. You will value it more highly than its mere intrinsic dollar-and-cents value. Investigate anyway!

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

THE British trade press is agitating the question of an import duty on all foreign-grown bulbs.

FREIGHT and duty will this year practically double the price of Japanese bulbs between Yokohama and New York.

THE H. G. Hastings Co., Atlanta, Ga., has received a cable from its grower of Bermuda onion seed in Teneriffe stating that he will make full delivery on this year's crop.

ALFRED ROSS, of the Ross Bros. Seed House, Wichita, Kan., died on the morning of May 14, heart failure being the cause of death. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column.

W. W. BARNARD left Santa Barbara for Chicago May 23. Mr. Barnard has been in California since January and found the climate so pleasing that in future he intends to make his winter residence there.

A. H. GOODWIN, vice-president of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is spending week ends at his summer home at Lake Wawasee, Ind. He is an ardent fisherman and started early in the season to try his luck with the hook and line.

THE J. J. Wilson Seed Co., of Newark, N. J., has received a communication from the State Department at Washington, stating that word has been received by the department that several packages of seeds consigned to that company by a Holland concern have been seized by the British and are now before a prize court in England.

SEED growers in Denmark are having trouble to get labor without advancing their costs too rapidly. The leading industry in Denmark is agriculture. The general average in money payments to the workers during 1915 was $121 per annum to the men and $72 to the women. Board and lodging are furnished by the employers. These wages are the highest ever paid in Denmark for farm labor.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association will be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 20 to 22. In sending out the call Secretary Kendel says: "The program this year has been purposely shortened, as matters of vital importance to the association and the trade will be up for discussion and it was thought wise to allow sufficient time to consider them."

The papers and addresses are as follows:

"Accounting and Business Methods," by Robert E. Belt, of the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C.

"Corn Growing in the Northwest," by A. K. Bush, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

"Farmers' Associations," by John A. Salzer, of John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis.

"Advertising—Fair Play Seed," by Frank B. White, of the Agricultural Publishers' Association, Chicago, Ill.

The president's reception will take place at the hotel on the evening of June 20 and the annual banquet on the evening of June 21.

An unusually large attendance is expected this year.

SNAPDRAGON POINTERS

To be most successful it is better to be governed by tested rules. We give a few pointers regarding Snapdragon, taken from our experimental records:

Sow seed of our genuine Silver Pink Snapdragon before June 15; follow directions on topping and benching, setting the plants 12x15. The first crop of blooms will come in December, which should be cut, leaving all other growth. The myriads of shoots left should begin flowering in February and continue to flower until June. There should be from 30 to 50 shoots on each plant. If your trade calls for heavy spikes, thin them out. If for medium spikes, let all remain.

So much for the greatest and most productive Snapdragon in existence. Treatment for other varieties will be about the same, except they can be planted closer.

Snapdragon is our one business. No better seeds can be produced. Each variety grown for seed is kept under glass in separate houses. We offer pure seed as follows: Our original Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of Nelrose, Phelps' White, Yellow, Garnet, Buxton and fancy mixed, at 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. Free cultural directions. All orders cash.

We have a few thousand seedling plants of Silver Pink at $5.00 per 100.

CROP FAILURE IN THE LAW.

The seed trade will be greatly interested in the fact that failure of crops is no excuse for a canner to neglect to make deliveries under his contracts, according to a recent decree of the Maryland Circuit Court of Hartford county. It made no difference in the court's view of the packer's liability that the packer had made every effort to pack the goods by procuring the necessary acreage to be grown for him, but by reason of the excessively wet weather prevailing before and during the canning season, his crops were ruined and he was not able to pack the goods he had contracted to sell. This defense was interposed by way of plea to the declaration, but upon demurrer the court held that the facts set up were not available as a defense to the contract.

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming Giant Pansies

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and their unusual hardiness. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March, or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for autumn planting for early bedding, and early cut flowers supplied in yellow, white, sky blue, velvety purple, blue and mixture. Seed ready July 1.

The contract offered in evidence covered sales of No. 3 standard tomatoes, designating the brand of the packer. It was because of this designation that the packer sought to invoke the failure of his crops as a defense to the action, but the court, by sustaining the demurrer and overruling the defense on that ground, refused to recognize the right of the packer to disregard his contract and excuse his failure to make delivery on the ground that he was unable to pack under his label because of the failure of his crops.

In other words, the effect of the court's ruling is to require future contracts to be strictly fulfilled and to take such contracts out of the class into which there is sometimes read the implication that the contract may be avoided if the goods which are the subject of the contract are not at the time of its execution in being and do not thereafter come into being.

WHY SEED SALES SHRUNK.

Seedsmen who cater to the canners' trade noted less than the expected demand this season. The following is from a canners' authority and refers especially to the situation in the tomato packing district in Maryland: "The reduced acreage is due to many causes. For instance, there is a desire on the part of farmers to participate in the higher prices prevailing for wheat, corn and other cereals; there is the shortage of potash for fertilizer; there is the scarcity of labor, due to the attractiveness of higher prices in city factories, and lastly there is the lateness of the season."

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The Wesley Miller Seed House, of South Bend, Ind., is experiencing a good run of business.

S. Bach & Co. and Weigman & Zelt, of Fort Wayne, Ind., report good business. They report having placed contracts for fall delivery of vegetable seed at prices averaging about the same as last year. Bean prices are slightly higher and some varieties of peas lower.

W. T. Phillips & Co., of Toledo, O., note an unusually late season that will affect the average returns, which were promising, owing to market gardeners getting better prices for their produce than last spring.

"This will be a good year for the southern trucker," observed A. C. Kendel, of Cleveland, O. "The extreme lateness of the season must cause a great shortage in vegetables for the fall crop. Not a potato has been planted in this section at this date, May 20, fully four weeks later than the usual date."

Johnson's Seed Store, of Cleveland, disposed of a carload of seed potatoes during the mild spell; the balance is going slowly. The seed rush is over. Plans are under way to increase store and storage facilities against the beginning of another season.

Wood & Co., of East Cleveland, O., are passing through a good season, not depending upon seeds alone. Commencing early with hardy plants, they follow with annuals from May 20 until the end of the season. "We find this plan an admirable one," observed Manager C. E. Rotheram. "We have a high-class trade and have fully recovered from the effects of the fire in January, which threatened to put us out of business."

The Botzum Bros. Co., of Cleveland, carries a heavy stock of vegetable plants for market garden trade. The company voices the general opinion as to the lateness of the season and the prospective scarcity of vegetables this year. W. M.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business in all lines was good last week. There were plenty of funeral orders and the bedding work was at its height, despite the dark and cool weather. It is conceded that this spring's bedding season will surpass that of any previous year, as some of the florists already report as much business now as for the entire season, with plenty of orders still on file. Retailers report general business as holding up better than expected, and they are busy placing orders for Memorial day, which is one of the big days here. Stock of all kinds was plentiful last week, with the exception of roses. Toward the end of the week prices for the cheapest roses went to $6 per hundred. White roses were scarcest. Carnations and peonies of good quality were in large supply all week. These flowers will be the main factors in the Memorial day rush. Miscellaneous stock of all kinds is plentiful and there will be a larger quantity of it from now until after Memorial day. Pot plants of all kinds are in abundance and there is no doubt that there will be plenty for several weeks. Outdoor annuals are coming into flower.

Various Notes.

Patrick Larkin, owner of a flower store at 1208 Baltimore avenue, died May 16 at St. Joseph's hospital. Further details are given in this week's obituary column.

Mrs. Charles Biedermann, 70 years old, died at her home, 3339 Prospect street, May 16. She had been a resident of Kansas City for fifty years and leaves two sons and three daughters.

Billy Sunday gave a Mothers' day sermon last week and the committee in charge requested all the mothers who came to hear to wear white flowers.

The first amateur flower show of Kansas City was held last week at the Muehlebach hotel. It was a success and another will be held later in the summer. Mrs. Massey Holmes, not in any way interested in the florists' business, was sponsor of the show. The exhibition consisted of annuals and perennials.

W. L. Rock will have plenty of pot plants of all kinds for Memorial day trade. His cut stock was light last week, on account of the cloudy weather. A large cut is expected from the rose and carnation ranges.

Edward Humfeld reports that he had two Mothers' days in one week. One occurred Saturday, May 21. As he is located near the Billy Sunday tabernacle, in which the evangelist gave a Mothers' day sermon, he had a big run on white cut flowers for several hours, and he had all he could do. Mr. Humfeld has finished planting at Electric park.

Arthur Newell reports that business is keeping up with that of some of the winter months. He had two large out-of-town decorations last week.

A. F. Barbe had an especially heavy week in cut flowers and bedding work for the cemetery, surpassing that of any other year. He has a fine lot of pot plants ready to meet the demand for Memorial day.

Miss Jennie Murray had a heavy run of funeral work during the week.

W. J. Barnes has sold more than three-fourths of his bedding stock and he will have little left for Memorial day. He has also disposed of a large number of heavy ferns, selling thirty hanging baskets filled with them in one order.

Visitors last week were Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia.

The nurserymen of this city have had a good spring trade, due principally to the length of the season. Several were busy until last week planting out stock. A large number of perennials were sold this spring. W. J. B.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Following Mothers' day, business settled down to normal conditions. Early evidences of the approach of Memorial day are seen in the increased number of metal wreaths and crosses. The supply of potted plants is unusually large. While funerals and weddings continue to create a generous demand, the call for outdoor plants is especially brisk, giving the market a tone of activity that is much appreciated. In cut flowers roses, carnations, stocks and bulbous blooms furnish an ample supply.

Various Notes.

At the monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, held last week, Arthur Sellew gave an interesting and instructive lecture on "The Cultivation of Dahlias for Home Decoration and for Exhibition." He described the dahlia as an ideal plant for amateur gardening. The difficulty in keeping the flower after cutting was said to be its only drawback, but this, Mr. Sellew said, could be somewhat overcome by cutting before the sun was up and keeping the blooms in as dark a place as possible. The speaker stated that better results and bigger flowers were obtained from cuttings and smaller tubers than from larger ones. It was announced that the annual June flower show of the society will be held June 16 at the Narragansett hotel.

The Outlet Co. distributed free to its customers on Mothers' day 10,000 white carnations, Rhode Island-grown and furnished by J. E. Koppelman & Co. and O. H. Williams.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has sent out its premium lists for the summer show, June 16, and for shows September 12 and 13 and November 14 and 15.

Frank O'Reilly, Jr., 94 Oak Hill avenue, Pawtucket, has a large force of men on outdoor work.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

MANY of the bay trees arriving at New York are reported in bad shape, due to the vicissitudes of travel in war time.

THE Holland-America liner Kroonland arrived at New York May 19, minus the shipping documents covering a considerable number of consignments of bay trees, boxwoods and miscellaneous nursery stock.

FOR AMERICAN NURSERYMEN.

A Spirit That Builds.

A spirit of true coöperation appears to prevail among members of the American Association of Nurserymen and the attendance at the forty-first annual convention, to be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, will equal that of any former gathering of representatives of the nursery trade. With the adoption of the new constitution at Detroit last year, there is manifest a general revival of determination to place the organization on a higher plane than it has ever before attained.

At the coming convention a report by Curtis Nye Smith, of Boston, Mass., counsel for the association, will consist of a review of his work for the last year and of recommendations for the future. The various papers to be read will have that same spirit and effort to raise the moral and commercial ethics of the organization. The intention is to make a membership in the American Association of Nurserymen a guarantee of all that is honest in the carrying out of contracts, the handling of stock and the execution of business transactions.

Last Call for the Badge Book.

The quality of the program for the Milwaukee meeting, in variety of topics and discussions, surpasses anything ever before presented to nurserymen, and the sessions will be full of life and profit. The receipts for membership dues are more than double those of any previous year and the correspondence accompanying renewals indicates satisfaction with the new constitution.

Members of record of 1915 may renew their memberships without coming under the new rule, and if this notice should be read by such as have not yet done so, they may feel at liberty to send in applications now, in order to reach the secretary not later than June 3 and be included in the Badge Book. The address of the secretary is 204 Granite building, Rochester, N. Y.

John Hall, Sec'y.

RULES GOVERNING IMPORTS.

May 15 the Federal Horticultural Board issued a pamphlet containing revised rules and regulations governing the importation of nursery stock into the United States, under the provisions of the Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912. This revision supersedes, effective on and after July 1, 1916, the circular of June 23, 1914, entitled "Rules and Regulations Under the Plant Quarantine Act: General, Including Nursery Stock."

These revised regulations are substantially the same as those now in effect. The most important change is the provision that permits to import nursery stock from countries which maintain nursery-stock inspection, and permits to import orchids and tree seeds from countries which do not maintain nursery-stock inspection, instead of being reissued each year, will be valid until revoked. The list of plants, the entry of which is prohibited, is brought up to date. Amendment No. 1 to the former rules and regulations, issued April 19, 1915, providing for the importation of orchids and tree seeds in commercial quantities from countries which do not maintain nursery-stock inspection, is incorporated in regulation 6. Regulation 8 has been revised to indicate more fully the requirements of the notice of shipment. Old regulations 1 and 10 have been omitted as unnecessary. These regulations do not have particular application to nursery stock, but apply to all of the different regulations issued under the Plant Quarantine Act. Regulation 10 on hearings merely repeats the provision of the act itself on this subject. A new regulation, No. 1, has been substituted, prohibiting the importation of nursery stock, except in accordance with the provisions of the Plant Quarantine Act and the regulations drawn thereunder. The Plant Quarantine Act, which has hitherto been published in connection with these regulations, has been omitted.

A list of state inspection officials is included, together with a list of the foreign countries which have provided for inspection and certification, in conformity with the requirements of this act.

one of the finest privets for shear work in all shapes, but owing to the changeable seasons during the last four years, the privet froze to the ground. Especially during the last two years has the beauty attained in former years been lost, and in the early spring it gives only an unsightly appearance. I am dispensing with this variety and shall try Ligustrum Amurense, northern type, or L. Ibota. Before doing so, however, I shall appreciate any advice as to which is the best for hedging purposes. I have used Ibota in formal and shrubbery purposes, but have not used L. Amurense, or Amoor river privet. W. H.—Pa.

Either Ligustrum Ibota, Japanese privet, or L. Amurense, Amoor river privet, would be much more satisfactory than L. ovalifolium, California privet, which is unreliable and should never be planted where minimum temperatures of 10 and 20 degrees below zero are recorded. I would personally prefer L. Ibota, which will withstand any degree of cold you may have. It is a rapid grower and, while the foliage is not so glossy green as that of the California privet, it makes a splendid hedge. While I admire a hedge of L. Amurense, I consider L. Ibota a better variety, and you will make no mistake in planting it. C. W.

Toledo, O.—By training and occupation J. J. Lasalle is a doctor, but that does not preclude his also being a market gardener. At any rate, Dr. Lasalle now is building two houses for vegetable forcing.

Topeka, Kan.—The new era of prosperity has settled down for a comfortable stay here, at least as far as the florists' business is concerned. The florists' Easter trade was most satisfactory and several concerns are contemplating the erection of additional houses. J. M. Kessler is making plans for a good-sized house; the Hayes Seed Co. will invest in a new range; A. G. Clark has blueprints for a small range and Frank Sachs has several important improvements to be made after the spring business.

¶ If you are looking for something really good in Geraniums, here they are, just as you see them. There are none better. They are all in full bloom and large buds.

Belle Washburn THE BEST RED CARNATION

Plants in 2½-inch pots, ready for bench or field

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; also of Silver Medal of S. A. F. and O. H., at St. Louis, 1916. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family.

Price of 2½-inch plants is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market is good; that is, from the wholesalers' standpoint. All kinds of cut stock are short of the demand, excepting lilies. Carnations are of fine quality and bring $3 to $4 per hundred. A few peonies from the southern states are arriving and are quickly picked up. Irises, Darwin tulips and baby gladioli find a ready sale. The market is practically exhausted of pot plants. A few good hydrangeas and spiræas are left for the Memorial day trade.

Various Notes.

C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, are erecting four large houses, which will be planted to roses for cut flowers. The balance of their large range they will continue to devote to their specialties, adiantum and pot plants.

The bedding out season has been much delayed here. While there has been no frost for the last three weeks, the nights are cold and everything is at a standstill.

Timothy Smith, in his bright, new store at Forty-sixth street and Euclid avenue, reports business as being fine and greatly exceeding his expectations.

Walter Mott was a recent visitor, busily selling Benjamin Hammond's specialties.

Walter E. Cook, resident representative of the Stumpp & Walter Co., is off on another tour of the west and central states.

A few of the boys found time to help Ed Helm open his new bowling alleys. Twenty-eight alleys on one floor, side by side, are quite a sight, and evidently enough for an S. A. F. bowling tournament, without any crowding.

Gardeners Want Raise.

Some of the fine lawns and beautiful gardens at Newport may go uncared for this summer if their owners do not meet the demands for an increase in pay by the Gardeners' Assistants' Association. A meeting of the association was held a few evenings ago at which the members voted to ask for an increase to $2.50 per day, to take effect June 1. If the advance is not made it is said a strike will be called. The meeting, besides being for the discussion of the wage problem, saw the installation of the recently elected officers, as follows: President, James J. Nicholson; vice-president, James McGillicuddy; financial secretary, Matthew N. Noonan; recording secretary, John P. Burns; treasurer, Timothy D. Harrington; sentinel, William Downes.

The Market.

Does advertising pay? The much-mooted question found an emphatic answer in the affirmative in the business done for Mothers' day. The day was advertised and the returns therefrom were large. If any other holiday, Easter for instance, should be given as much publicity as Mothers' day, its business would be much larger. One florist reported that his Mothers' day business increased seventy-five per cent; some say fifty per cent and others say twenty-five per cent.

Beauties last week were sufficient for the demand, but the quality left much to be desired. All lengths are available. Other varieties of roses are clearing daily. Francis Scott Key and Ophelia are in large demand. White Killarney is somewhat scarce, which is largely due to the many wedding decorations and funeral pieces. Carnations have been out of the running entirely, but now are slowly recuperating from the Mothers' day clean-up. It does not seem to be one color that is scarce, but all varieties and colors. In spite of the increased supply of sweet peas, these are clearing daily. Lilies were rather scarce last week and callas have been substituted until they have become scarce.

Valley is again on the short side, selling at $6 per hundred. The supply of cattleyas is increasing, but the demand takes these as they arrive. Peonies are plentiful, but as yet they have cut no great figure in the market. Snapdragons, irises, daisies, calendulas and gladioli were life-savers of the week. Pansies are inclined to drag; baskets of these are in the market. Lilac, both white and lavender, is scarce, but the demand is not any too encouraging. Greens of all kinds are sufficient.

Various Notes.

J. J. Karins, with Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, stopped off at Buffalo last week while returning from a six weeks' journey. He reports that business is more than good. F. G. Nelson, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., was a recent visitor.

W. J. Palmer & Son had a large wedding decoration last week consisting of white lilacs and lavender snapdragons, with cibotiums as a background.

William Ehmann, of Corfu, is picking some splendid America gladioli, which finds a ready market. A. E.

Butte, Mont.—Victor Siegel soon will celebrate his nineteenth year as head gardener of the Columbia Gardens.

The Market.

Business is fair and the supply of stock is large enough to take care of all present demands. In addition to the supply from regular sources, a large quantity of stock is coming in from other points. The Decoration day supply promises to be good.

Roses of all kinds, including American Beauties, are in good supply. Carnation receipts are heavy. The Easter lily cut is so heavy that the blooms are selling at buyers' prices only. In addition to the large quantities of greenhouse-grown sweet peas, outdoor sweet peas now are coming into the market. The first cornflower came in last week. Peonies are excellent in quality and plentiful. Other offerings include callas, snapdragons, irises, cape jasmines, valley and orchids. All are in good supply. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

L. H. Kyrk was the first wholesaler to offer outdoor-grown sweet peas this spring. They came in last Wednesday, from Charles Schuemann, at Delhi.

C. E. Critchell reports an unusually heavy advance booking of orders for Memorial day.

William Taylor has been cutting some fine America gladioli.

William Gardner, of Richmond, Ind., was in town May 15. C. H. H.

LANCASTER, PA.

Thursday, May 18, the Lancaster County Florists' Association held its monthly meeting. There was a good attendance, considering the rush of work. Complying with the request of the program committee, Albert M. Herr read a paper on "Looking Backward and Forward in the Florists' Business." Mr. Herr reviewed his early days in the business with A. D. Rohrer & Bros., and then told of the establishment of his own business and its growth up to the present time, ending with an optimistic prophecy of the future. His paper contained valuable points for all who would hear and was one of the best ever presented at a club meeting. The discussion that followed Mr. Herr's paper showed the interest taken in the subject.

The club voted to hold a flower show November 9 to 11. While chrysanthemums will be the main feature of the show, many of the members are already starting to grow other stock for the exhibition. President Schroyer appointed as a picnic committee Elmer J. Weaver, A. F. Strickler and Rudolph Nagle.

The next meeting will be held June 15, when a large attendance is desirable. Rudolph Nagle showed a fine specimen plant of Pelargonium Easter Greeting, of which he has a large stock for propagating.

A. N. Rohrer will erect a Hitchings greenhouse this summer. J. W. Gayley expects to add a large house to his range. H. K. R.

HYDRANGEAS FOR SUMMER BLOOMING

We have an unusually fine stock of these plants, which have been kept dormant during the winter and are now starting into growth. They will begin to bloom in July and will remain in flower during August. These plants are in great demand at summer resorts for lawn and piazza decoration. We offer the following varieties in 14-inch tubs:—Otaksa and the new French varieties, Avalanche, Fraicheur, E. G. Hill, La Lorraine, Mme. Maurice Hamar, Mme. E. Mouillere, Mlle. Rene Gaillard and Radiance, $2.00 to $3.00 each.

Also Otaksa, very large, fine symmetrical specimens in half-barrels, unusually heavily budded, $10.00 to $15.00 each.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

EQUIPMENT FOR BURNING OIL.

I am greatly interested in an article which appeared in The Review of April 20, page 78, under the title, "Favors Oil as Fuel." The article was written by R. W. Kersey, in reply to the arguments of a previous writer, who had discouraged the use of oil as a greenhouse fuel. I am enough of a mechanic to be able to follow Mr. Kersey's explanation and I think I see my way clear to equipping my heating system with a similar contrivance. I shall be under great obligations to you if you will kindly give me some information on the following points: What kind of burners and what size of motor and pump would be needed to equip a Moninger hot water, firebox boiler?

B. A. C.—Wis.

We are burning crude oil under our Lord & Burnham hot water boilers, No. 646, using as power a ½-horsepower self-starting motor, connected by a belt to a No. 3 Root's positive-pressure blower. The rotary oil pump is also belt-driven; it pumps the oil from a large oil tank sunk in the ground. The oil pump has a three-quarter intake and can be procured from the Crane Co., Chicago. We use about thirty to thirty-five pounds of pressure on the burner. We made the burner ourselves, but can supply anyone with it and we think it is one of the best on the market.

As to the lining of the firebox, much depends on its size and construction. If we had more data about B. A. C.'s requirements, we should be glad to give him more definite directions. We find that crude oil is the best, cheapest and most convenient fuel we have ever used and we would not consider any other. In fact, our outfit will continue to operate and to maintain an even temperature in our greenhouses as long as there is any oil and power to work on.

Now as to the way we operate our system. The oil as it is pumped from the tank is run through a CC strainer before it reaches the pump; then through a coil which we run into one of the flues to heat the oil; then into a water separator, as there seems to be more or less water in the oil; then into the burner, which is operated by a needle valve, to give the desired force of flame. We made the water separator out of an old steam trap. Unless the water is separated from the oil, it is liable to cause trouble.

We shall be glad to give any further information on this subject to The Review or to any of its readers. We feel grateful to The Review for the many good suggestions we have received from it and we should not like to miss a single copy.

R. W. Kersey.

IMPERFECT CIRCULATION.

On a separate sheet you will find a rough sketch of my greenhouse, in which I recently installed a hot water heating system. The house is 22x90 and twelve feet high to the ridge, with two feet of glass and three feet of boarding in each side wall. The boiler is at the rear end. The house is pretty well protected. There are two flow pipes, each 3-inch for a distance of about twenty feet from the boiler; then they are reduced to 2½-inch. The reason I reduced them is because I happened to have the pipe on hand to suit that arrangement.

There are three 80-foot coils of 1½-inch pipe, distributed as follows: A 6-pipe coil on the north wall, a 4-pipe coil under the center bench and a 6-pipe coil under the south bench. The house runs east and west. One flow pipe feeds the coils on the north wall and under the center bench; the other flow pipe feeds the south coil and a radiator and coil in the store, after being reduced to 2-inch. The radiation in the store is about 100 feet.

The coil on the north wall is giving me trouble. The two or three lower pipes never get warm enough to give any heat. Is there enough piping to heat the house to 60 degrees in zero weather? The flow pipes run slightly uphill and there is an air vent in each flow pipe at the highest point. The coils have a slight downward slant toward the boiler. The expansion tank, which is about four feet above the highest point, has to be refilled about every four or five hours; it holds about twenty gallons. It is connected by means of a ¾-inch pipe with the 3-inch main return near the boiler. Which system do you think is the better—uphill or downhill? I have a Wilks boiler, 36x48, with a capacity of 900 feet of radiation. Can you suggest any remedy for the imperfect circulation?

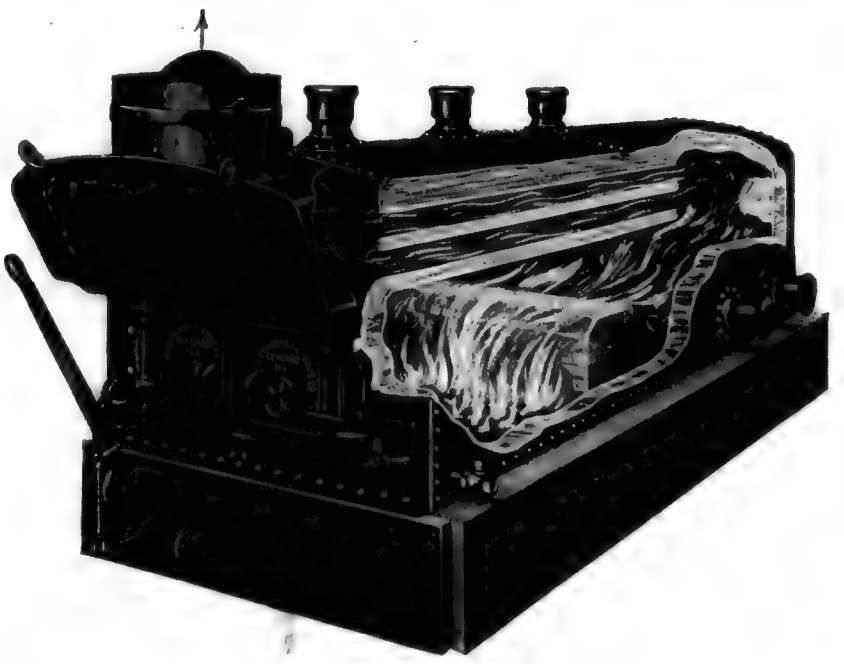
J. V.—Ill.



From the sketch we learn that the boiler is set in a pit two feet deep, and the main returns appear to be below the bottom of the boiler. At any rate, it would seem that the lower pipes in the north coil are considerably below the top of the boiler. While it may not be necessary to lower the boiler, it will certainly help the circulation if the north coil can be raised so that the bottom pipes will be as high as the other coils.

It was also a mistake to reduce the size of the north flow pipe to 2½-inch, since it now supplies practically 500 square feet of radiating surface, which is 100 to 150 feet more than is advisable when the coils are below the top of the boiler. Although there is sufficient radiation in the house for 60 degrees, it would be helpful if a separate 2½-inch flow could be run for the coil on the north wall.

The best circulation can be secured if the flow pipes run downhill, with just enough slope so that they can free themselves of air. It will also be helpful if the expansion tank is connected with the highest point in each of the flow pipes.

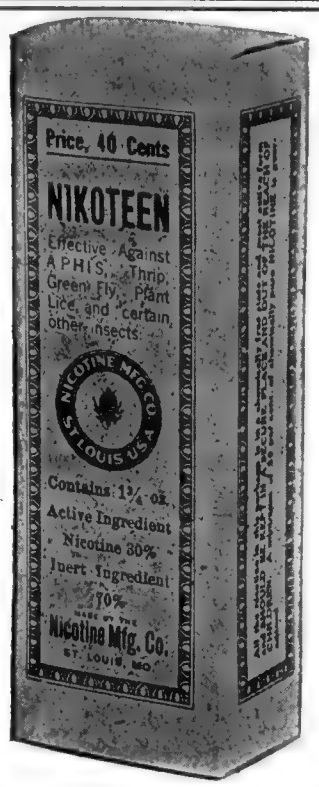
The Market.

The market continues to be largely a sellers' market and conditions have not changed much. The weather continues cold and rainy and this is making the stock scarcer than ever. Present conditions indicate that the supply of carnations for Memorial day will not equal that for Mothers' day, but that the quality will show some improvement. The crop of roses is excellent and the quantity is large enough to meet all demands. Red carnations and red roses are, of course, hard to supply, as this color is more in demand than usual. The supply will be limited. The sale of spring stock has been unusually brisk and the stock is already cleaning up on some kinds.

Memorial day business should show a good increase over that of last year, and the only reason that it may not do so will be the extreme scarcity of stock. Owing to the strike of the express employees in Chicago last week, difficulty was experienced in filling orders for greens, as a large part of the local supply comes from the south.

While there were some fine peonies in the market last week, the stock is moving only fairly well. There undoubtedly will be a big demand for this stock, however, for Memorial day, because after the supply of roses and carnations has been ordered up there still will be a large gap to be filled, and peonies will be the natural solution. Some fine outdoor tulips are being disposed of easily at fair prices, and these also will cut a big figure in Memorial day sales.



The trade in general has had an exceptionally good spring season. After the coming holiday, everyone will welcome a lightening of the tension under which he has been laboring for the entire season.

They need Odorless Fertilo that does not mar the fragrance of the flowers. Just the material for Lawns, Flowers, Shrubs and Small Gardens. You can sell several cans of Odorless Fertilo to each customer who buys potted plants and several bags to those with gardens. Make them more successful and they will become flower enthusiasts.

FERTILO is nature's pure plant food and combines all the essential elements required by plant life: Ammonia, Phosphoric Acid, Bone, Phosphate of Lime and Potash. Makes the necessary Humus for enriching the soil and is also an excellent Insecticide.

FERTILO is odorless, will not get hard and lumpy. Put up in handy containers in 1 and 5-lb. sizes, and in 10 and 80-lb. bags. The 1-lb. package will fertilize 10 gallons of earth for potted plants or 50 sq. ft. of surface. Retails for 25c. Full and simple directions printed on each package.

Florists, truckers and landscape gardeners recommend Odorless Fertilo.

Send us 6c in stamps to cover postage and we will send you free sample of the 1-lb. package, together with full particulars, and quote you our liberal terms to florists.

Various Notes.

Thomas Lynes reports one of the best spring trades he ever had. His store was tastefully decorated last week for the Baptists' convention.

The Mazey Floral Co. is developing fine features in window decorations. Masses of flowers are used with charming effect. These decorations are on such a large scale that they compel attention.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. sold all its stock for Mothers' day. The old staff now is scattered all over the country, only one of the workers being left in the houses. It is understood that the houses will be torn down and rebuilt on another site.

The Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouses are busy preparing to fill about 1,100 vases for Memorial day. It is real hustling and heavy work, but everything will be done in time.

Mothers' day certainly was a banner one in carnations. Sunday saw them all sold out and May 15 there were none to be had. Large quantities of lilies were used last week in funeral pieces. All available stock was cleared at 8 and 10 cents.

Lippincott's Seed Store is gay with all kinds of bedding plants. The seed business is the best ever.

Northrup, King & Co. are doing a good business in the wholesale and retail seed departments. They are carrying a fine line of herbaceous stock, displayed in specially arranged bins in order that the purchaser may see what he is buying.

May 20 saw a change in weather; it was warmer and more springlike. Florists' rigs soon were seen in all parts of the city, loaded with marguerites, vincas, fuchsias, geraniums, cannas and dracænas. Window boxes are transforming the appearance of the city. In outdoor decorations and gardens Minneapolis certainly leads.

O. E. Amundson had a distinctive window last week. The display comprised a bank of large Boston ferns in the rear. In the foreground were baskets and vases with tulips, roses, sweet peas, cosmos, daisies, etc.

The Eldridge Floral Co. had a busy week of funeral work. This concern always has cut flowers of high-grade quality.

The California Fruit Store made a feature of irises, roses and Darwin tulips last week.

A. Abdallah, of Lake street and Hennepin avenue, has increased the size of his flower department and installed a large show case with a refrigerator attachment.

Oscar Carlson says trade is good. His carnations and roses are always of the best.

One enterprising florist secured a quantity of window-box decorations by pointing out to the business man that he could not afford to be without these decorations when his neighbor had them. F. E. B.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

The Market.

The business in cut flowers last week was only moderately active. Roses are scarce, the local growers being mostly off crop. Carnations are none too plentiful and sell well at a good price. Sweet peas are in fair supply. Easter lilies are plentiful and low-priced. Bedding stock is the big feature and everybody is working overtime to fill orders. Window boxes and hanging baskets are in great demand and indications are that it will be a record-breaking season for everything in this line. Vincas and other vines are becoming scarce, and if the present demand keeps up local stock soon will be exhausted.

Various Notes.

Joachim Koopmann & Bro., of Davenport, have purchased the Ewoldt Bros. greenhouses and will take possession about the middle of June. They expect to grow a full line of potted plants for the wholesale trade and will continue their present establishment for another year, when its grounds will be laid out into city lots. The two brothers have been at the present location for about five years and have built up a large trade. W. G.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

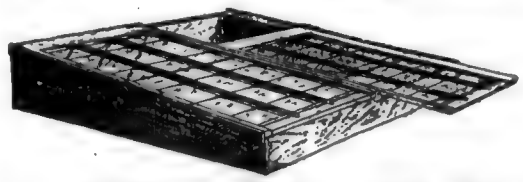
The Market.

There is an abundance of roses and carnations in the market. Peonies are coming in fast and are finding a ready sale. Geraniums and other bedding plants are eagerly sought after and will be until Decoration day. All the florists are busy from early morning until late at night.

Various Notes.

The William Blackman Floral Co. is having large cuts of roses and carnations. This concern has a fine stock of spring plants for planting out.

C. L. Niednagel is cutting large quantities of good roses.



Julius Niednagel & Sons are busy with indoor and outdoor work. Their carnations in the field are getting a good start and give promise of good plants to bench.

All hands at the J. C. Elspermann place are as busy as bees.

Karl Zeidler is disposing of large quantities of plants.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Santa Rosa farm of Theodore Kuebler. The date is June 7. E. L. F.

A METROPOLITAN PROMISE IS AS GOOD AS A BOND

Promises, even though made with the best intentions, are usually very uncertain, unless the source of the promise is backed up by a firmly established reputation for reliability and dependability.

Everything should be incorporated in the contract. We seldom make a promise, but, when we do, our reputation proves conclusively that its fulfillment can always be depended upon.

The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, at New Brunswick, N. J., placed their greenhouse building operations with us, and the following is what Dr. J. G. Lipman, the director, wrote after it was completed:

"In so far as I know, the work done by you was eminently satisfactory, and I trust that we shall have occasion in the future to request your company to bid on other work."

The Market.

The weather last week was unseasonably cold, dark and unproductive, the growers being unable to supply the normal quantity of cut flowers for the local trade. Business was good, weddings and funeral work predominating. The bedding season is furnishing a big demand for bedding plants and for all kinds of bulbs and flowering shrubs. This work is keeping the florists busy, although the demand is expected to be much greater with the advent of warmer weather. Roses are only moderately plentiful, but they are of splendid quality. The shorter-stemmed stock is more plentiful than the long-stemmed blooms, which bring $6 and $8 per hundred. There are Russell, Shawyer, Ophelia, Sunburst and Richmond. American Beauties are poor of quality and not in great demand, the Russell and Shawyer roses supplanting them in most instances.

Carnations are in moderate supply and prices hold up well. Miniature gladioli are in the market and retail at $1 per dozen. Some handsome antirrhinums are seen in the retail shops. Outdoor lilac is in and used extensively for decorative effects in the local flower stores. Deutzias, snowballs and spiræas are also available. May-flowering tulips are in plentiful supply and the quality is excellent. Yellow daisies are abundant for corsages. Sweet peas are not so plentiful as they have been, but continue to sell well. Lilium longiflorum is abundant and used considerably in funeral work. Callas are in moderate supply.

Memorial day business is expected to be good this year. It is doubtful whether there will be any home-grown peonies in the market, as the season is too late. Snowballs and Spanish irises will be in good supply, as well as tulips, mignonette, primulas and stocks.

There is a plentiful supply of smilax and asparagus. Hardy greens are selling well.

Various Notes.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey held their annual sale of rose plants last week and disposed of several thousands. They are cutting some fine cattleyas and have a fine crop of Shawyer and Sunburst roses.

Miss Mildred Flick, of the Flick Floral Co., accompanied by her brothers, spent last week at Toledo, O., the guest of Miss Helen Patten, of the Patten Flower Shop.

Visitors to the trade last week included A. F. Longren, representing the Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago, and I. M. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia.

The Market.

Despite the cold, rainy weather prevailing a few days prior to and on Mothers' day, the demand for flowers was far in excess of the supply. Carnations were scarce and brought good prices, most of them retailing at $1.50 per dozen. Roses also were rather scarce. From present indications, Memorial day will find similar conditions. Bedding stock never was better nor more plentiful, yet the demand is such that a few of the florists fear they will run short. Peonies are backward this season and few, if any at all, will be ready to cut before next month.

Various Notes.

Lewis Henderson has the contract for the bedding work at the Carter Lake Club. It is the biggest job of its kind in this vicinity.

Mrs. Charles Faulkner, who was operated on for appendicitis last week at St. Joseph's hospital, is progressing nicely.

Mothers' day business at The Fernery was almost equal to that of Easter.

The S. L. Faulkner range, on South Fortieth street, is a busy place. Mr. Faulkner's bedding plants are as fine as may be found anywhere and he has no trouble in disposing of them. Hanging baskets filled with 2½-inch stock a few months ago are especially fine.

The Parker Flower Shop sold everything it had Mothers' day and could have sold more had the stock been available. L. S. H.

Painted Post, N. Y.—J. A. Sanders has started a greenhouse business here and says that some day he hopes to become well known to the New York trade. He points out that every big business had a small beginning.

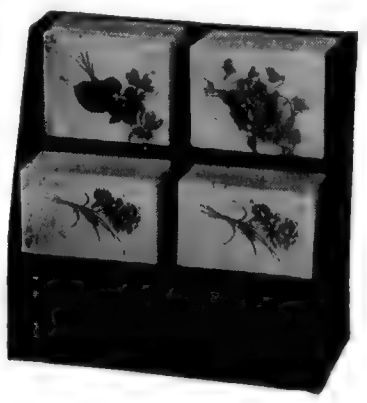
...NEWS NOTES...



Independence, Ia.—With a brass band, flying streamers and 700 visitors to take care of, R. N. Whitney had a busy time on the opening day of his florists' business here.

La Crosse, Wis.—Mrs. A. Guillaume miraculously escaped death recently when a large tree suddenly crashed through the glass of the greenhouse in which she was working.

Gallipolis, O.—S. White will proceed at once with the rebuilding of two of his houses, one 18x104, the other 29x130. In planning his heating apparatus he is preparing to add another house 25x140.

Fort Recovery.—The brightest store front in town is that of H. C. Schneider's meat market, where the store is gay with geraniums, pansies, begonias, ferns, heliotropes, salvias, cannas, carnations, fuchsias and other plants. Mr. Schneider sells plants from the greenhouses of George Popp, Jr., and has done an unusually large business this season.

Emlenton, Pa.—A suit to recover $3,000 damages to hardy cut ferns in storage has been started by G. Couvelas against a cold storage company at Oil City. In 1913 Mr. Couvelas sent a large quantity of fronds to the refrigerating concern, to be stored until he could find a sale for them; but the ferns are alleged to have been kept in too warm a room and were spoiled. It is said that the exact temperature under which the fronds were to be kept was specified in the contract.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Warm weather has made the bedding plant business good. Higher prices prevailed on cut flowers, owing to Mothers' day. The call this year for Mothers' day seemed to be a little more for colored flowers than usual. The trade in general reported a good week.

Various Notes.

After five months of illness, William E. Mosher is back in the ring. He has leased the place on Court street formerly occupied by Fred Reynolds, who now has a store in the Olympia building. Everybody wishes Mr. Mosher success.

Julius, the Florist, reports a good week of business. He recently filled an order for a blanket of Sweetheart roses and sweet peas, with a fringe of adiantum.

Ernest Chamberlain did a good business for Mothers' day.

Edward M. Peirce, of the Peirce Greenhouses, Cottage street, says he has not the slightest fault to find with business. Last week was unusually good for this time of the year.

W. M. P.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

G. W. Frisch & Sons, of Dayton, O., will enlarge their office and store this summer.

J. F. Young, of Dayton, was making preparations for a good Memorial day's business.

W. W. Horlacher, of Dayton, has some fine specimens of Japanese wistarias in bloom. Mr. Horlacher has a "house of novelties," in which nothing but the unusual is found.

M. D. Schmidt & Son, of Dayton, were extremely busy with plants, featuring porch boxes and hanging baskets.

The Heiss Co., of Dayton, was busy with funeral work and table decorations. Mothers' day sold all the stock obtainable and cleaned up everything that looked like a flower.

C. P. Bethards, of Springfield, O., has moved to a store in the Arcade.

Harriet Van Meter, of Springfield, had a nice showing of cut flowers. The Ophelia rose is the favorite of Miss Van Meter's customers.

An unusual window of bisque figures filled with cut flowers was seen at T. J. Ludwig's, at Columbus, O. These little figures make an unusual display and are appreciated by those looking for novelties.

The Livingston Seed Co., of Columbus, was rushed with work in the seed and shrubbery departments. The cut flower department also is doing well.

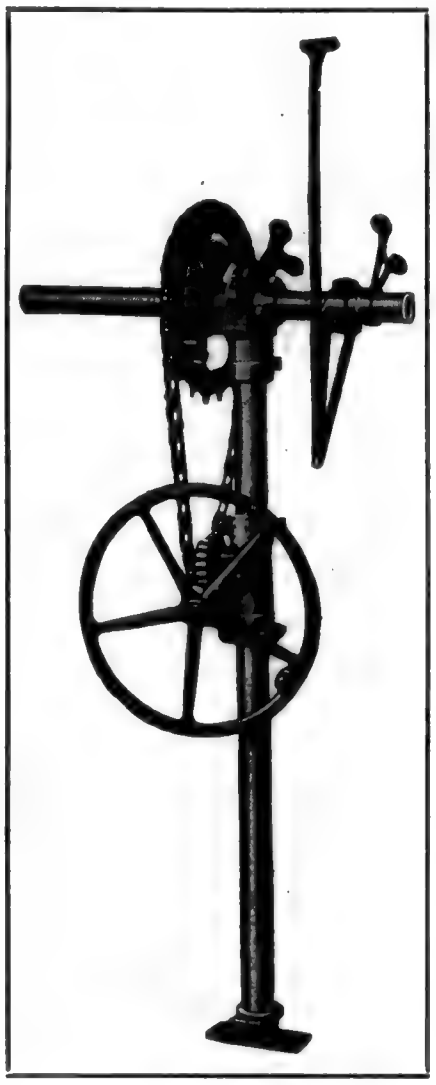
The Art Floral Co., of Columbus, will move about June 1 to a new store opposite its present one.

Underwood Bros., of Columbus, have some fine bedding stock, which is moving rapidly.

The Block Floral Co., of Columbus, intends to secure more store space before the opening of the university next fall. Some original corsage bouquets and table decorations were noticed.

College work is keeping the Hardesty Co., at Columbus, busy, although the general trade is heavy enough, especially in bedding stock.



Fred Sammett, of Upper Sandusky, O., reports a continuance of good business. Bedding plants are moving rather slowly, owing to the cold weather that prevailed in this section of the state.

J. R. Norton, of Bucyrus, O., had a good showing of potted plants and bedding stock. Several large designs were being mossed for a local funeral when I called.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Benjamin Hammond, of Beacon, N. The feature of the meeting was the report of the committee on prizes to be awarded at the Syracuse rose show in June. The dates of the show are dependent on the action of the American Rose Society in fixing the time for its annual meeting at Ithaca, as it is desired to have the Syracuse show follow that event. Efforts are being made to have Rear Admiral Aaron Ward, one of the judges of the exhibits at the 1915 show, act again this year.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

THE FREESIA FAMILY AND ITS FORTUNES

When enumerating the evidences of recent progress in the florists' trade, do not forget the freesia. As a cultivated flower it has had a comparatively brief career, but its improvement in so short a period has been remarkable. And its advance is only one of the symptoms of the general advance in the trade.

THOUGH not so staple a product as is the rose or carnation or chrysanthemum, yet the freesia is in some respects a typical florists' flower. Not only is it typical, or truly representative of florists' stock in general, but it serves especially well to exemplify or illustrate certain trade principles, on account of the brevity and distinctness of its history. It clearly illustrates a trio of important practical truths.

A Trio of Truths.

In the first place, its rapid improvement in quality demonstrates that the trade is animated by a spirit of progress. The men who, as a body, have performed such wonders with the freesia have thus shown unmistakable signs of life. They are not somnolent; they are not afflicted with suspended animation; they are not in need of a pulmotor. They are not Rip Van Winkles. There is real encouragement and inspiration in that fact.

But, coming to the second truth in the trio, the career of the freesia also draws attention to the sobering and admonitory fact that a flower's popularity depends largely—principally, shall we say?—on the maintenance and improvement of the flower's quality. If any growers fear that their favorite flower is in danger of eclipse, let them get busy and accomplish such feats as have been accomplished with the freesia. Of course, many growers are doing so, besides the freesia growers. The freesia is not alone in its glory; it is simply a conspicuous example of success.

Again, the method or order that has been followed in the improvement of the freesia—first the perfecting of the flower in its original color, a so-called white, and then the addition of varieties in other colors—may contain helpful hints for the growers of other flowers. So much for the trio of truths, with their encouragement, warning and guidance.

Its Family Relationships.

Something has just been said about the freesia not being alone in its glory. In one respect, however, the freesia may be said to have been notable in its early history for its lonesome, kinless seclusion. According to the best obtainable botanical authority, the freesia family—or genus, to be precise—as nature gave it to us, consisted of only one species, F. refracta. The irregularly formed, dimly colored, neglected little F. refracta is said to have been the progenitor of the entire modern race of freesia beauties—a bevy of dazzling belles from plain, unfashionable ancestry.

But in a broader sense the freesia, since the beginning of its history, has had hosts of distinguished relatives. Its family, or genus, is a member of the iridaceæ, the same great order or group of genera to which the iris and gladiolus also belong. The word "iris," you know, means "rainbow," or "rainbow-colored," and it might here be noted that a certain successful experimenter with freesias is now introducing a strain of flowers which he has called the Rainbow freesias, with even more of a striking appropriateness in the name than is apparent at first thought.

Work of Fischer and Frey.

It is strange that the humble, dull-hued, patchy-white F. refracta contained the potent germ of all the beauty that has been developed in the modern freesias—in the clear white of Fischer's Purity, and in the rich and varied tints of Fischer's and Frey's latest offerings. Great credit is due, of course, to Fischer, Frey and others, but all the beauty was there, wrapped up in the unpromising F. refracta—all the beauty unfolded in the best present varieties and the still greater beauty to be revealed in the freesias of the future.

Let us glance a little more closely at one or two of the details of the freesia's history. Though the flower, a native of South Africa, has been in cultivation since 1816 or thereabouts, it received little attention until a quarter of a century ago. As already intimated, the first effort was to produce an improved white freesia, a purer white and of better form than the old F. refracta. The first noteworthy result of this effort was the arrival of F. refracta alba—not white enough to be true to its name, but having a clearer complexion than its sallow and freckled parent. What might be termed the climax or culmination of the effort was the advent of Fischer's Purity. "Might be termed the climax"—yes, might be, were it not for the fact, as stated in a recent issue of The Review, that Mr. Fischer "now has a white that grows thirty inches or more in height, with a large, branched spike, any of the branches of which are larger than the finest Purity. The petals are like ivory; the individual blossoms are two inches across and of the purest white." Perhaps that is a real instance of capping a climax, grammarians to the contrary notwithstanding.

This Vase of Rainbow Freesia Showed Many Distinct Colors.

Freesias in Fancy Hues.

Thus ends, as far as staged at present, the first great act in the freesia drama, the production of a well-nigh perfect white flower. And now begins the second act, the development of freesias of other colors and with as much as possible of the improved form of the latest and best white. For Mr. Fischer this season offers to the trade a lavender-tinted freesia which he has named F. splendens, and other colors are to follow. And Alois Frey, of Crown Point, Ind., last year placed on the market both bulbs and blooms of his Rainbow strain. Like Mr. Fischer, Mr. Frey grows the bulk of the bulbs outdoors in California, where he has one of his Crown Point men in charge.

It is well understood, of course, that it would not be profitable for the ordinary, general florist to grow his own freesia bulbs. It is usually more economical, and more satisfactory in various ways, to purchase them from specialists.

Since the freesia is easily grown, fragrant and attractive; since it endures more neglect in private homes than do most other bulbous plants; since its season of blooming can be greatly prolonged; since the flowers last a long time when cut and placed in water—since it has all these good qualities, perhaps some florists who are looking for more varieties of flowers to grow might do worse than try the freesia.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

TO MARTIN MONEYMAKER.

Dear Martin: You have bought my carnations for many years; darnations, you pleasantly called them when there were more than usual, or when business was a trifle slack. You took them, and you paid me a fair price. I have done pretty well. The wife has had good clothes for best and the children have had good schooling for every day. Since you put in that buyer, Martin, things are not the same. I say "Darnation!" every morning, sometimes out loud, sometimes under my breath, for that buyer has my goat. He has carnations from every place you ever heard of. He lays them all out side by side, compares the price and takes the best, or the lowest priced. Sometimes when business is off he will take six from one of my bunches and hand me back nineteen. The impudence of the thing is startling. I have looked the matter over carefully, Martin, and I find we are going to split on this buyer fellow. It just comes to this: He gets, or you and he get. What makes life worth while? The happiness of the wife and children. You say things are changing, Martin, and maybe they are, but the enthusiasm needed to make a man work early and late to raise good flowers isn't produced by pulling him through a clothes press every day. I won't be in tomorrow.

Sorrowfully yours,
George Grower.

WHOSE THUNDER IS IT?

The newspapers the country over are spreading the fame of Miss Jarvis as being the originator of Mothers' day. In The Review for May 18, on page 32, under the heading of "Mothers' Day," the editor says, in part: "The idea of Mothers' day originated outside the trade."

Now, with all due respect to Miss Jarvis, I want to say that she is not the originator of Mothers' day and I am much surprised that The Review is not posted as to its origin. Henry Clark, deceased, of Omaha, who was a florist, was the originator and it was he who had the mayor of Omaha proclaim the day. Mothers' day was observed in Omaha and Lincoln quite a long time before it was ever heard of in the east. If anyone is in doubt regarding the above, further information can be given on the subject.

OIL AS FUEL.

I have read with interest the discussion in recent issues of The Review concerning the use of fuel oil under greenhouse boilers, and I am tempted to give my experience in that line. I find oil a most satisfactory fuel under the standard type of horizontal tubular boiler. I believe it will add nearly twenty-five per cent to the heating capacity of a boiler of forty or more horsepower.

A steam pressure of thirty pounds per square inch is about as low a pressure as will operate the system economically. Although twenty-five pounds will do, thirty or thirty-five pounds is more efficient.

We use a homemade burner, plans of which were published about three years ago. From my knowledge of oil and its peculiarities, I would not think of using it for hot water heating, or for steam under less than a 30-pound pressure.

NOT THE TRUE SHAMROCK.

Under another cover I am sending some foliage of a plant and would like to know if it is from a real shamrock or not. It does not look like the plants the florists grow and sell as shamrocks.

E. J. L.—Mass.

The leaves had almost completely decayed before they came to hand. This is a species of trifolium, probably T. repens, the common white clover, which is often sold as a shamrock. Trifolium minus and oxalis are usually offered as the true shamrocks. C. W.

THE LOCK AND KEY FOR THESE

INSECTICIDES A DANGER.

Another Accidental Poisoning Case.

At Louisville, Ky., last week a woman of the class constituted by florists' best patrons prepared to clear out the insects that were troubling her plants—she poured two teaspoonfuls of a standard nicotine extract into a quantity of water in a discarded bottle that previously had contained mineral water. The bottle and the sprayer were left on the back porch until a convenient time for use.

It was the habit of the lady's father to take a glass of mineral water after each breakfast. Next morning he saw a bottle with the familiar label sitting on a shelf on the cool back porch, sought a glass, poured out his customary portion and drank it down. But he noted a peculiar taste! Investigation and the doctors followed. Great pain! Lapsing consciousness! Death in fourteen hours!

These were persons of means; no resource of the medical profession was neglected.

Other Deaths From Nicotine.

The Louisville case last week was one in which diluted nicotine extract was imbibed by mistake and proved fatal. What, then, where the undiluted article is taken? There have been several such cases.

One of the earliest was recorded in The Review for July 4, 1907, as follows:

"The 6-year-old son of Herman Lochman took a swallow of nicotine extract Sunday afternoon and died before his father could reach a physician two blocks away.

"Mr. Lochman has charge of the section of the Bassett & Washburn plant which is devoted to smilax, asparagus and other greens. He is one of their oldest and most highly valued employees. He has a pleasant home at Hinsdale, with some roses in the garden. Sunday he procured a bottle of nicotine extract from the greenhouses for the purpose of spraying the rose bushes. Using only part of the contents of the bottle, he hid the rest under the porch. The boy went under the porch after a baseball which had rolled there, and found the bottle. Tasting its contents, he screamed and the father, who was only a few feet away, took him in his arms and started for the doctor's. When he reached there the boy was dead. He had strangled. The shock to Mr. Lochman was so great that Sunday afternoon it was necessary to restrain him from doing himself violence. He has a wife and two daughters.

"Keep the nicotine extract under lock and key."

Another Child Meets Death.

During the following summer this item appeared:

"The Chicago market was shocked this week by the news of the tragic death of Lambert Mann, son of Mathias Mann, of Zech & Mann. It was caused by drinking a nicotine extract used for fumigating. The accident took place the evening of July 29, shortly after the supper hour, when Lambert, a bright little fellow of 8 years, came upon a bottle that had at one time contained root beer, but had since been filled with the nicotine extract. Not aware of the contents of the bottle, or the danger that lurked therein, and supposing that it was the usual beverage that he had been accustomed to seeing around the house, the lad placed the bottle to his lips and, without waiting to taste or smell of the fluid, swallowed a good portion. Crying out to his mother, he fell into Mrs. Mann's arms and expired before she could either lend or call assistance. The same kind of an accident occurred at the Bassett & Washburn plant last year."

Cyanide Also Is Deadly.

Since these two early cases there have been others no less tragic. And nicotine is not the only greenhouse poison that holds danger for human life; cyanide is as quick and as deadly. One of the saddest happenings in this connection is the trial now in progress at Waukegan, Ill., where one set of lawyers is trying to prove the son of a gardener administered cyanide to his erstwhile sweetheart, the daughter of another gardener, while a second set of lawyers is trying to prove that the girl took the cyanide with suicidal intent. There is no direct evidence thus far disclosed and the jury apparently will have to decide from the circumstances whether the young man gave the girl poison from his father's stock of fumigant or whether, for the purpose of self-destruction, she took some from her own father's supply. The state is trying to prove murder, the defense, suicide; but either side would fall could it be shown the father's stock of fumigating materials was inaccessible to any but the man in charge, as it ought to be.

So far as the record goes, there is no other case in which a charge of murder has been based on the easily obtained poison used in greenhouses.

Restraint Is Coming.

But greenhouse insecticides soon will be less easily obtainable if not more carefully handled. Indeed, already it is against the law in Illinois for any seed store, florist or florists' supply house to sell most of the standard greenhouse insecticides and they lay themselves liable to a fine of not less than $10 or more than $150 with each sale. The prohibition lies in the fact that the labels on the packages of insecticide do not conform to the requirements of pharmacy law, which, in Section 12, says:

"Nothing contained in this section shall apply to the * * * sale of Paris green or lead arsenate, or other poisonous substances or mixtures of poisonous substances, in unbroken packages, for use in the arts or for insecticide purposes: Provided, They bear a label with the name, or names, of such poisonous substances and the word 'poison' printed thereon in prominent type and the names of at least two readily obtainable antidotes with directions for their administration."

Evidently the Kentucky doctors who attended the gentleman who drank diluted nicotine knew of no readily obtainable antidote, for the patient lived fourteen hours. Read the labels. How many of them conform to the requirements of the Illinois law?

Thus far there have been no prosecutions of seedsmen or florists under the Illinois law, and hence no demand on the manufacturer that labels be made to conform to the law, but the Board of Pharmacy is working steadily toward a strict enforcement of the law.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hard-Wooded Plants.

Such plants as azaleas, ericas and camellias can be carried through the summer either planted outdoors or in pots plunged to their brims. Planted out stock seems to do best. Of course, there is the additional labor of repotting in the fall, but there is far less labor watering through the summer and the plants take on added vigor. While they will grow well in ordinary loam, they succeed much better if peat and leaf-mold can be added to the soil and well incorporated with it. If the soil is naturally heavy, use some sharp sand in addition. Plant out this class of stock at once and be sure to have a hose connection convenient, as they need a good spraying once or twice daily in hot weather. It is not necessary to have these plants in the shade. They will flower more freely if given full sunshine.

Hydrangeas.

There still is time to take cuttings of Hydrangea Otaksa and the French varieties, but there should be no delay in doing so, as propagation of plants is more difficult in hot weather. Cuttings taken as late as early September will give plants which will produce one large head each the following spring. For early forcing it is much better to carry the hydrangeas over summer in pots. These will not produce so large plants as those planted in the field, but they will ripen their wood much earlier, as in the case of pot-grown rambler roses. Give the hydrangeas rich soil, keep them constantly cultivated and pot or tub them before the fall frosts are sufficiently severe to blacken the leaves. Any unsold plants, if cut back and planted out, will make strong plants fit for large pots or tubs before fall.

Tuberous-Rooted Begonias.

For bedding out, tuberous-rooted begonias are good when they can have a fair portion of shade. It is, however, of no use to plant them in the full sun. If you are bound to have begonias, be sure to use the fibrous-rooted section, such varieties as Vernon, Erfordii and Gloire de Chatelaine. Remarkably fine tuberous begonias may be had outdoors if they have the needed shade and are given a mulch of old hotbed or mushroom manure and an occasional soaking of water. It is, however, as pot plants that these begonias are of special value for the next three or four months.

They need an ordinary, well ventilated greenhouse where they have sufficient shade to prevent burning. They will keep green and fresh under heavy shade, but will be much weaker and the flowers will lack substance. Use a light but rich compost for them and apply liquid manure freely when they become potbound. Seedlings started in February, if kept potted along, will make useful plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots by the end of July.

Hardy Roses.

Attend to the necessary disbudding of hardy roses in good season. It means much finer flowers. Green aphis will make its appearance along with the flower buds and must be fought with a soap or nicotine spray. For rose slugs it is best not to use arsenate of lead, as it whitens and disfigures the foliage. White hellebore, applied by means of a powder bellows, while dew is on the plants, serves well, and on dry foliage it can be applied in liquid form. Look out for any Manetti and briar stocks starting from below the ground, or they will soon cripple the plants. If you use own-root roses you are all right. Unfortunately for those in the colder states, own-root roses are lacking in both vigor and hardiness compared with budded stock. A top-dressing of dried blood hoed in at this time will be found beneficial.

Amaryllis.

The flowering season for amaryllis passed some time ago. That too often means that the plants will get little attention during the remainder of the season. Some growers even lay them on their sides immediately after flowering. This is absolutely wrong. The plants should now be growing vigorously in a greenhouse and should be encouraged by a top-dressing of Clay's or a soaking of liquid manure. After June 1, if you need the greenhouse for some other purpose, plunge the amaryllis in an old coldframe, packing half decayed leaves about them, and keep the sashes elevated at the top and bottom all the time. They will need a hosing each day, but if the plants are well plunged and the sashes are shaded water will not be necessary nearly so often as when in the greenhouse. Keep the seedlings growing along; they should have no rest until they flower.

Nerines.

The foliage on the nerines, or Guernsey lilies, is now turning yellow and the plants need not have any more water until fall. Keep the plants under sashes and do not allow them to have any water whatsoever. What they need in order to make them flower satisfactorily is a thorough baking in the sun all summer long. This may be done on a greenhouse shelf, in a coldframe or, if preferred, outdoors, laying the plants on their sides on boards in a hot, sunny location. They need no further attention until spikes appear next September or October.

HARDY CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

[A paper by Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., read at the first monthly flower show held in connection with the Country Life Permanent Exposition, in the Grand Central Terminal building, New York City.]

To the average lay mind, the term "outdoor mums," until a recent period, simply meant one thing, hardy pompons, and while it is true that the pompons are hardy enough, still the fact that they do not bloom until so late militates considerably against their being of much value to the cultivator, since the foliage is often badly marked by frost and cold winds before the flowers develop.

The type of plant called early-flowering, which has been largely developed by August Nonin, of Paris, France, is by far the most satisfactory for growing outdoors, and unless the situation in which they are growing is too low or exposed, they will come through the average winter safely enough. This early-flowering type, on which Mr. Nonin has spent the best years of his life, is a result of a strain of seedlings from the old, ragged, hardy mums of our grandmothers' gardens. The latter did not have much beauty, but everyone admired their sturdy independence and the fact that from year to year their blooms braved the heavy rains and not infrequently the early winter snows. Their period of flowering is from September 15 to October 30.

Good Early-Flowering Varieties.

The number of varieties today of this early-flowering type is legion, but a dozen or so that I would suggest as being the most likely to give satisfaction outdoors would be about as follows:

White — Cranford White, Dorothy, Milka and Normandie. Normandie is often classed as a delicate shade of pink, but as a matter of fact the earlier flowers are almost invariably white. Normandie is the earliest variety we have and, under average conditions, the most satisfactory of this type. Yellow —Cranfordia, Etoile d'Or, Carrie and October Gold. Pink—Beaurepaire, Eden, Le Danube and Miss Burchfell. Red and bronze shades — Harvest Home, Firelight, A. Barham and Billancourt.

There are many more excellent varieties, but, as before stated, I am merely mentioning the best and earliest for those who want to trim their list down to a few varieties.

Hardy Pompons.

Hardy pompons are the type most largely grown for outdoor flowering and are valuable if one secures the right varieties. By the right varieties I mean those that will flower early enough outdoors to develop perfectly before the weather gets too cold.

The best of all the pompons is the variety Lillian Doty, a large-flowered pink which we introduced to the trade in 1912, and which will make stems four feet long. The color is delightful, whether it is grown under glass or outdoors, being the clearest bright pink imaginable. The individual flowers measure approximately two inches across, and every stem will carry four to eight of these flowers.

A list of twelve or more of the best varieties of pompons, in assorted colors, would be about as follows:

Pink—Lillian Doty, Donald and Minta. White—Queen of the Whites, Waco, Grace and Myers' Perfection. We might also include in this white section the variety Garza. This is really an anemone-flowered sort, but I am assured by one of my customers, who has a summer home along the Jersey coast, that it is entirely hardy and has bloomed at her place year after year until December 1. Yellow—Jeanette, Wm. Sabey, Golden Climax and Zenobia. Crimson and bronze sorts — Julia Lagravere, Urith, Tiber, etc.

Pompons That Bloom Too Late.

In addition to the varieties mentioned, there are many others that are exceedingly beautiful and are well known, such as Baby Margaret, a lovely white, and Baby, the tiniest yellow variety known, but I have omitted them from the foregoing list of outdoor chrysanthemums because they usually flower too late for one to derive much satisfaction from them.

The points on which the pompons suffer in comparison with the early-flowering varieties are that the pompons do not bloom until several weeks later than the early-flowering varieties and are not nearly so large when they do come. There is, of course, a place for both classes, since one type does not bloom until after the others have gone and the pompons have one advantage in their cast-iron hardiness. I have seen pompon blooms come through 10 degrees of frost, when the same temperature blackened the open flowers of the early-flowering type, though it did not injure the buds.

Single Chrysanthemums.

It has been thought until recently that the single mums would not develop outdoors. This is a great mistake, as some of you have perhaps discovered by this time. A customer of mine, Francis H. Bergen, of Summit, N. J., is perhaps the most successful man I know of in growing single mums outdoors. He has a border on either side of his front drive, leading to the front door of his home; these borders from the middle of October until late in November are things of beauty, and the most striking types in the collection are the single mums.

A list of a dozen of the best single varieties would be about as follows:

White—Elsa, Gladys Duckham, Mensa and R. B. Burge. Pink—Ivor Grant, Mrs. Southbridge, Mrs. Buckingham and Miss Mary Pope. Yellow—Josephine, Golden Mensa and Marion Sutherland. Crimson and bronze—Sylvia Slade, Ceddie Mason, Brightness and Margaret Walker.

In the single types, again, we have many beautiful varieties, but they need a greenhouse for their proper development; therefore I have omitted them.

Planting and Transplanting.

Granted, then, that one has the best varieties in their different types, in each section, what is the way to handle them in order to get the best results? Get them from your dealer in the spring as soon as the weather is warm enough and the soil is in good condition outdoors. Set out the plants in rows eighteen inches apart, with twelve inches between the plants in the rows. They should be kept pinched back during the months of May and June, in order to keep the stock dwarf and robust and prevent the plants from growing too high, necessitating considerable staking.

One mistake that beginners often make is in assuming that the hardy types do not require any attention in the way of transplanting, from year to year. If one is to grow these varieties to the highest point of perfection, the clumps ought to be taken up in the spring and broken into individual plants. These individual plants, when planted in new soil, will invariably produce flowers of much finer quality than the old clumps that have been left undisturbed. In this respect the mums do not differ from many other perennial plants of a like character, which are benefited by this annual or biennial moving and rejuvenation.

Summer Treatment.

Because you are not going to get flowers until fall, do not neglect the plants all summer and expect to have them robust when you want them. If the summer is hot and dry, watering should be resorted to once a week and the plants should be sprayed in the cool of the evening. In extremely hot weather this will work wonders in keeping down the black and green aphis, which are the worst enemies of the chrysanthemum.

Regarding feeding, most of you, I presume, are familiar with the fact that the tremendous flowers one sees on exhibition, from greenhouses, have been fed with artificial fertilizer to bring them to their high state of perfection. Here, again, the advantage of the outdoor varieties is manifest, in that they do not need this expert treatment as the exhibition varieties do. If the plants, when they are set out, are planted in good, rich, mellow, average garden soil, they will get along satisfactorily. If the leaves on the plants are not as large as they might be, a sprinkling of bone meal on the soil and several inches of well decomposed stable fertilizer, spaded in during the month of August, will help wonderfully in finishing the crop.

As a rule, in the early fall the plants are getting all the moisture they need from the rains and therefore liquid feeding may be dispensed with.

Winter Protection.

After the plants have flowered, the question of protecting them through the winter is of paramount importance. Mr. Bergen, whom I have previously mentioned, says that by his method he has carried his plants over for years and has yet to lose a root. After the plants have finished blooming, he cuts them down to about eight inches above the ground and permits the autumn leaves to blow in and fill up the beds. If enough leaves do not blow in naturally, he gathers them and covers the beds to a depth of six or eight inches, and then lays pine branches over the tops of the beds to prevent the leaves from blowing away. So treated, the plants will not suffer from freezing and thawing in February and early March, which is the cause of the death of so much perennial stock that is usually classed as hardy. The plants, being kept covered from the sun, stay frozen all winter and no harm results.

This method would not be so effective in a position where the ground is low and the plants are liable to stand in water. I am convinced that a large percentage of mums die in the winter because they are affected with "wet feet," but a well drained piece of ground, covered in the manner described, will bring through in good shape any of the mums I have mentioned.

Hardy mums, while not as showy as a bed of delphiniums or other blazing summer beauties, are wonderfully attractive and useful after all other flowers are cut down by frost, and will return to the cultivator results altogether out of proportion to the labor bestowed.

POISONED BAIT FOR CUTWORMS.

Cutworms usually begin to damage crops about this time in spring. Between this date and late June or early July they often prove disastrous. The worm, however, so closely resembles the color of the soil in which it rests during the day that the cause of the crop injury is not always apparent. In such cases a careful examination of the soil surrounding the damaged plant will probably reveal the worm curled up in a little ball.

When cutworms are abundant the use of poisoned bait is recommended by W. R. Walton and J. J. Davis, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The poisoned bait may be prepared by mixing fifty pounds of wheat bran, two pounds of Paris green, and six finely chopped oranges or lemons. Low-grade molasses is added until the whole mixture attains the consistency of a stiff dough. Water also may be added if necessary, and middlings or alfalfa meal may be substituted for the bran. This bait should be distributed over the infested area in small lumps, and sprinkled sparingly around each plant.

MUST LET OUR MAILS ALONE.

"Delays in receiving shipping documents have caused great loss and inconvenience by preventing prompt delivery of goods. In the case of the MacNiff Horticultural Co., of New York, large shipments of plants and bulbs from Holland were, I am informed, frozen on the wharves because possession could not be obtained in the absence of documents relating to them which had been removed from the Nieuw Amsterdam, Oosterdyk and Rotterdam," says President Wilson to the British.

At last the government of the United States has taken action in the matter of British interference with our mails, which has been a cause of delay and loss to many florists, seedsmen and nurserymen ever since the British began removing for censoring the mails on the Holland-America line boats. In a note to the British and French governments, made public May 26, President Wilson calls on the allies to cease at once their illegal acts. The note says:

"The government of the United States, in view of the improper methods employed by the British and French authorities in interrupting mails passing between the United States and other neutral countries and between the United States and the enemies of Great Britain, can no longer tolerate the wrongs which citizens of the United States have suffered and continue to suffer through these methods.

"To submit to a lawless practice of this character would open the door to repeated violations of international law by the belligerent powers on the ground of military necessity, of which the violator would be the sole judge.

"Manifestly, a neutral nation cannot permit its rights on the high seas to be determined by belligerents or the exercise of those rights to be permitted or denied arbitrarily by the government of a warring nation.

"The rights of neutrals are as sacred as the rights of belligerents and must be as strictly observed."

The President expresses confidence that the allies will abandon their illegal practices and then concludes the note thus:

"Only a radical change in the present British and French policy, restoring to the United States its full right as a neutral power, will satisfy this government."

In just what manner the President will manifest his intolerance if the allies do not accede to his demand to cease interfering with American mails is a matter upon which administration officials confess they have no information. The President, it seems, has not disclosed even to his closest advisers whether he intends to back up his strong words with equally strong action, and, if so, what form that action will take.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Newark, N. J.—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the District court on behalf of Harry Van Ness, of 613 Mill street, Belleville. The schedule fixes the liabilities at $871 and the assets at $325. Of the latter, exemption is claimed for $200 worth of stock.

Middlebury, Vt.—William L. Ford has completed a large addition to his greenhouses on North street.

Northboro, Mass.—It is reported that W. P. Marshall has been made one of the members of R. E. Wadsworth & Co.

Pittsfield, Mass.—A greenhouse, 25x 50 feet, has been erected by F. M. Hadselle, of West street. It will be planted to bedding stock.

Waltham, Mass.—Elliott S. Filson, salesman for Peirce Bros., was married last month to Harriet May Carter, his former schoolmate.

New Bedford, Mass.—William J. Smith and Joseph S. Brown, the city gardeners, recently were featured in the daily press as "the men who make the city's flowers bloom."

Watertown, Mass.—At the flower show in Boston last month, Alfred M. Davenport captured first prize of $100 for a display of Azalea Indica, a group covering 200 square feet. He also won prizes for a group of foliage and flowering plants, four specimen azaleas and a tree fern.

Franklin, Mass.—W. H. T. Bock is preparing to erect a greenhouse 20x100. He was brought up in the florists' business and later went into professional life, but now returns to his first love.

Farmington, Conn.—James E. Mallette was in a hurry one day last month and drove his auto through a lengthy funeral procession. The following morning his mail contained a surprise in the form of a notice to appear in court, to answer a charge of violating a statute prohibiting anyone from intersecting a procession of mourners. The fine was $5 and costs. A demurrer was filed, but in vain.

Brockton, Mass.—One of Brockton's enterprising newspapers last month supplied its readers with the following information concerning the origin of Mothers' day: "Although the observance of Mothers' day in this country is comparatively recent, the rites and ceremonies of the day date back to two centuries before Christ, when the day was observed in ancient Greece." Wonder what Miss Jarvis has to say to that?

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

MILDEW ON RAMBLERS.

This is the season that many growers of rambler roses have trouble with mildew and rust. In many places, especially in the south, this disease is so bad that it is almost impossible to grow good specimens of many of the varieties.

Here at Nashville we have been experimenting with various remedies for some time, in the hope of finding something cheap, odorless and nonpoisonous that would clear up this difficulty. Last season we hit upon permanganate of potash and this season's further trials have convinced us that we have found the right thing.

We dissolve one tablespoonful of the crystals of permanganate of potash in two gallons of water and use it as a spray. It is almost immediately effective. Plants that were so badly infected that they looked entirely white and moulded being effectively cleared of the pest in two days. It is sometimes necessary to make two applications where the first job is not done thoroughly.

We have never tried it on the roses inside, but feel sure that what gives such good results in the open cannot but be helpful in the greenhouse. It does not burn the foliage at all, even where used much stronger than the above directions. Floyd Bralliar.

PRIMULAS IN THE SOUTH.

Primula Chinensis and P. obconica should be well started now in order to have good-sized plants at holiday time. P. malacoides need not be sown until the middle of June, as this variety grows faster than the other two. The soil for all these should contain plenty of leaf-mold and sand, to allow the fine roots to work freely. Any outdoor frame with a covering of lath sash will suit them. They do not require so close a shading as the cyclamens. What they require most is plenty of room and a good, moist atmosphere. P. malacoides, after it is established in small pots, may be planted out in the frame. It will make finer plants when grown like this and there is no difficulty in lifting and establishing the plants in the fall. L.

CYCLAMENS IN THE SOUTH.

Young cyclamen plants in the south should be in their summer quarters now. The best place for them is in a frame in a lath house. During the hot hours of the day they may require another lath sash to prevent wilting, but the sashes must be removed as early as possible, or the plants are liable to be drawn. When growing freely they need a good deal of water. A fine, dew spray at noon and another at quitting time will keep them in good shape.

Thrips is the cyclamen's worst enemy and fresh tobacco stems should be placed between the rows and renewed every two weeks. Use leaf-mold freely in the soil until the last shift in October, when the soil can be much stiffer. Shift the plants along as required, giving them only a small shift each time. An occasional stirring of the surface soil will be of great benefit. It is well to have some sashes at hand to protect the plants from heavy rains. L.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

The prolonged drought in the eastern and northern sections of the south is having a ruinous effect on the young carnation plants in the field, especially where the soil is red clay. No rain has fallen for more than a month and where there is no irrigating system many plants have died. To attempt to water a patch of carnations with a hose is mere folly; it is never possible to give enough water by this method. Unless you can soak the ground to a depth of five or six inches it is better not to water the plants at all, but keep the surface soil well stirred.

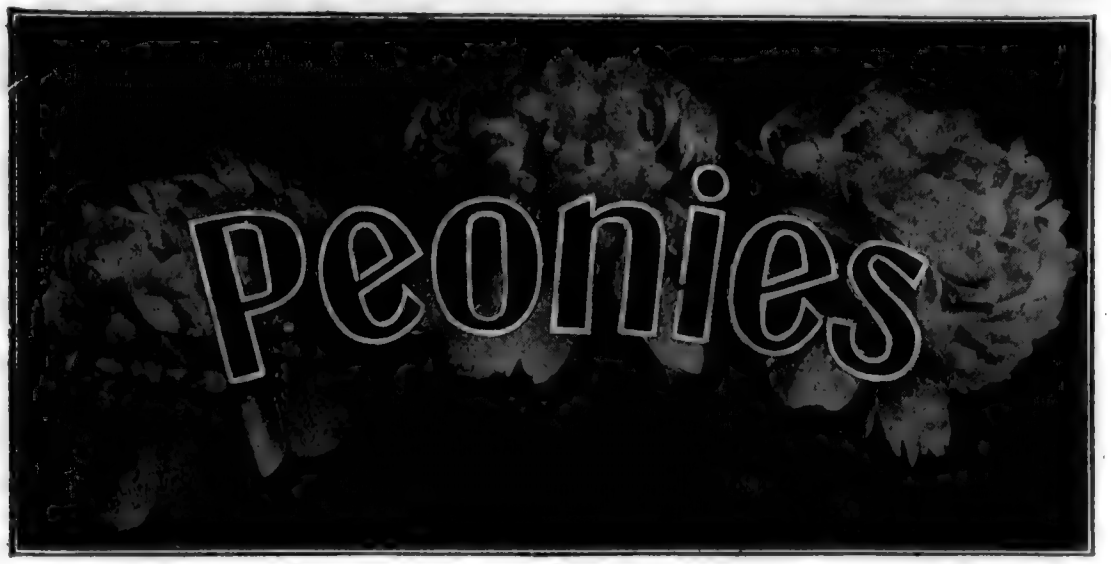
Many growers now are planting the young carnation plants rather closely in frames, where they are easily reached with the hose. In dry seasons this method has a big advantage over the field planting. We are trying a few thousands this year in dirt bands as an experiment against the spread of stem-rot. The most serious objection to these bands is the time required to get them in position and filled, but if they reduce the loss from stem-rot the time will have been well spent. L.

A GOOD COMPOST.

One of the hardest problems I have had to contend with since building my greenhouse several years ago is how to make good potting soil from the material at my command. I want the soil suitable for growing a general collection of plants. I have obtained a quantity of soil from a fairly fertile loamy field. To two wheelbarrows of this I added one barrowful from a cow yard, where there is twelve inches or more of soil and manure. Please tell me how to finish the compost into a good growing soil. Should bone meal be mixed with it? If so, how much? I have several bushels of sifted hardwood ashes. I certainly shall appreciate your advice. W. M. V.—Ga.

Your soil as prepared will answer well for many plants. Some varieties, such as cyclamens, gloxinias, begonias, calceolarias, cinerarias and most of the bedding plants in the earlier stages of growth, will do better if at least one-fourth of the compost consists of leaf-mold, or decayed leaves. Some sharp sand also is beneficial. I would not add the wood ashes to your compost for any pot plants, but some could be advantageously used in compost for carnations. Fine bone meal may be added for general bench crops at the rate of a 4-inch pot to each wheelbarrow load of compost. This also will suit roses, callas, chrysanthemums and geraniums. If your soil is heavy, some sand and leaf-mold will improve it. It is not possible to mix a compost to suit all pot or bench plants. C. W.

Jackson, Tenn.—H. C. Brown originally came here from Hopkinsville, Ky., to manage the Metcalfe greenhouses, but after a time he decided that he might as well be owner and manager. So a deal was arranged whereby Mr. Brown became proprietor.



Nashville, Tenn.—In accordance with its annual custom, the McIntyre Floral Co., May 22, made donations of fifty plants to any of the city's charitable institutions which would call at the Hillsboro pike greenhouses. This is a form of advertising the McIntyre brothers consider profitable.

Houston, Tex.—Memorial day in the south is May 10, not May 30, as in the north, and the trade had no special rush to interrupt work on S. A. F. convention preparations. The convention garden is making progress and all the plans for the convention are in an advanced state of preparedness except for the outing of August 18, at the San Jacinto battleground. This is to be typically Texan and will be a decided novelty to northern visitors.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Dr. H. Dux & Bros., manufacturers of a widely used brand of magnolia leaves, have incorporated at $30,000. The officers are: President, H. M. Dux; vice-president, M. M. Dux; secretary and treasurer, John M. Dux.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—During the Mothers' day rush W. F. Haeger took pen in hand and penned his favorite paper the following: "Mothers' day is only half over, but Chattanooga florists have sold every blessed thing. Flowers can't be had at any price."

Alvin, Tex.—The shippers of cape jasmines here never have had a better Memorial day since the industry attained its present large proportions. The high prices carnations commanded at recent holidays and the lateness of the peonies all helped to make an extra good demand for the southern gardenias, so that excellent prices were realized for large shipments. Most of the stock went direct to retail florists, only a small percentage being sold through commission houses.

COLOR CLASSIFICATION.

The American Peony Society is to hold its thirteenth annual exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, opening June 9. Competition is not restricted to members of the society and many trade growers are expected to set up vases of their best blooms in one or another of the fourteen classes open to commercial people. The amateur interests are being specially well looked after this time.

The society announces: "There always is some uncertainty about color classification in peonies. For instance, the variety Baroness Schroeder is sometimes entered as flesh-pink, sometimes as white. The understanding in the Peony Society is now that in cases where there may fairly be a difference of opinion, an exhibitor shall not be disqualified on the ground of misclassification."

THE BOTRYTIS STEM-ROT.

Can you tell me the cause of the stem-rot on the peony plants that I am sending with this letter? For two years a few plants have been affected in this manner, beginning to rot just above the roots, finally drying up and dropping off while the tops still seem to be healthy. What can be done to prevent this? C. H. H.—Me.

An examination of the specimens shows that they are affected with the botrytis stem-rot, one of the commonest and most destructive diseases of the peony. H. H. Whetzel, collaborator in plant-disease survey in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, stationed at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., where the American Peony Society has its test grounds, has made an exhaustive study of the stem-rot disease of the peony, the results of which were incorporated in an address before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, from which the following is quoted:

"The botrytis blight is by far the most common and destructive disease of the peony so far as known at present. This disease is frequently epidemic, especially during wet springs. It occurs wherever peonies are grown, apparently the world over. It is well known in Europe, especially in Holland and England. Much in the way of scattered notes and records of its occurrence have appeared in florists' papers and experiment station reports for the last twenty years. I published a short article on the symptoms and destructiveness of this disease in the trade press in September, 1912.

"The disease affects stems, buds and leaves, appearing on these organs in the spring and summer in the order given. The first appearance of the malady is almost always early in the spring, as the stalks are coming up. Shoots four to eight inches tall, their leaves not yet expanded, will suddenly wilt and fall over. Examination shows them to be rotted at the base or below the surface of the soil. The lesions begin usually at the base of the first leaf sheath and spread down to the crown and up often an inch or more above ground. The rotted portion soon becomes covered with a felty brown coat of spores and spore stalks of the fungus, thus distinguishing it from the similar stem-rot caused by sclerotinia. While it is generally the young stems that are affected, I have seen stalks with blossoms opening, suddenly wilt and fall over from botrytis stem-rot at the base.

"The cause of this disease has long been attributed to the fungus, botrytis, found constantly associated with the lesions on stem, bud and lead. There are many described species of botrytis, some of which are common on greenhouse and garden crops. The botrytis forms found on peonies have been referred usually to Botrytis vulgaris, or Botrytis cinerea, and Botrytis pæoniæ, the last described by a Hollander as the cause of the disease in that country.

"My own studies indicate that there are at least two distinct species of botrytis attacking and causing identical symptoms in the peonies, both in this country and in Europe. The species, while quite distinct in structure, are similar in their life habits and effects on the peony. One forms large sclerotia (resting bodies), while the other forms minute ones. I have never seen the sclerotia of the large form except in my cultures, but the small ones are commonly formed in the diseased stalks just beneath the epidermis and appear as black pimples the size of a pinhead. Presumably they serve to carry the fungus through the winter on the old stubble left by cutting away the tops. There in the spring they probably give rise to a new crop of spores, in just the best position to infect the new shoots when they come up. I have not yet determined whether these pathogens ever attack crowns and roots or not.

"Eradication measures offer the most promise of success in the control of the botrytis blight. To be effective, however, they must begin with the careful removal of the old stubs in the autumn or early in the spring and be prosecuted persistently throughout the season. To remove the old stubble carefully, remove the soil from the crown, so as not to injure the buds. Cut away the old stalks close to the crown and burn. These old stalks harbor the fungus. Replace the soil removed with fresh, clean soil, preferably sand, or at least a top coat of sand.

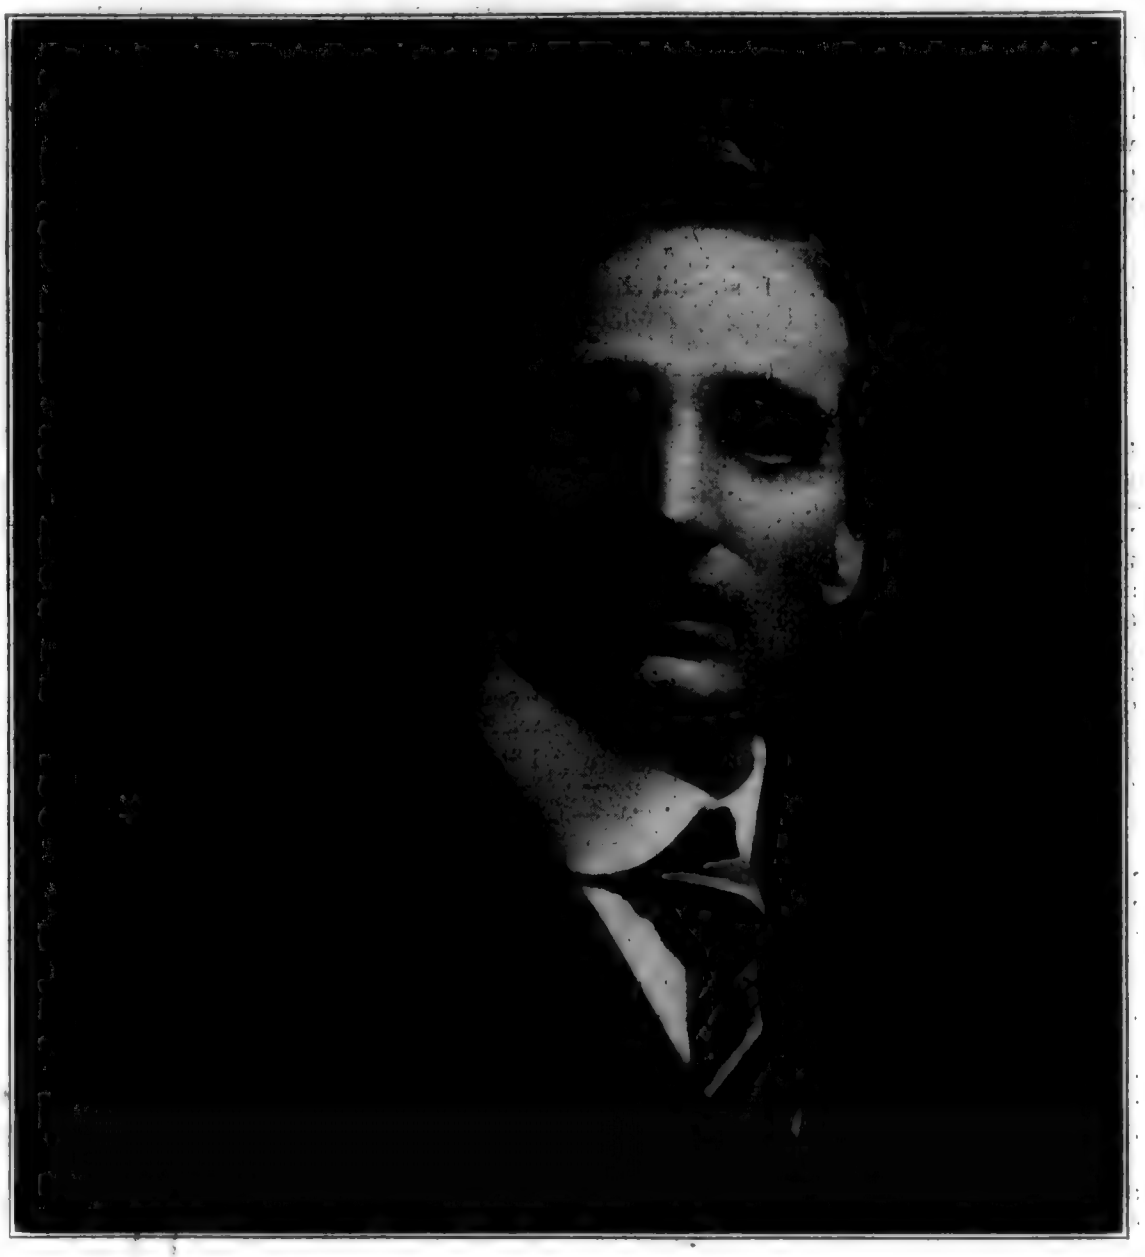
"When the shoots begin to appear, inspect them daily and remove by cutting close to the crown any that show wilting. These should be burned. By promptly removing these wilting shoots, you prevent the crop of spores that always appears if the dead shoots are left and so greatly reduce the chance of infection of buds and leaves. The daily inspection must now include the young growing buds and any that begin to turn brown or black and die must be removed and destroyed. As the buds grow older and approach the blooming time, the infection will usually be first evident at the base of the bud on one side as a brown lesion, which will gradually spread up, involving the entire bud, turning it brown. Spreading downward, it gradually involves the entire circumference of the stem.



"It will be important to detect these lesions in the early stages and remove the diseased buds, for spores are produced most abundantly on rotted buds and are also in the most favorable position for distribution by wind and insects to healthy buds.

"Spotted leaves should also be promptly picked off. However, if the early spring inspection and eradication operations have been thorough and there are no diseased peonies near by, the foliage will probably suffer but little. In wet seasons these inspections should be made daily. In dry weather less often will suffice. For the nurseryman or the grower of large numbers of peonies, this method of control may not be profitable, but for the small grower or in the private garden where a relatively small number of clusters are planted, it will be found entirely practicable and profitable. Even in a large area I believe the eradication measures I have outlined are worthy a thorough trial."

THE NEW MISSOURI SOCIETY.

Florists Shape Body at Columbia.

The Missouri State Florists' Association was organized at Columbia, Mo., May 24. The meeting was called by Chairman Wells of the St. Louis Florists' Club committee and quite a number of tradesmen responded. The gathering would have been larger if the state's florists had completed their planting of bedding stock. On the arrival of the organizers at Columbia, they were met by Prof. H. F. Major and Dr. Whitten, of the state university, who escorted them to the Horticultural building, where the meeting was held. Dean Munford, of the university, made an address of welcome, which was responded to by Alex Lorie, of St. Louis. W. S. Wells appointed a nominating committee of three, Jules Bourdet, Frank Windler, both of St. Louis, and G. A. Kaupp, of Nevada. Another committee, consisting of Alex Lorie, Mr. Barnes and Edwin Denker, was appointed to draw a constitution and by-laws. The visitors were then taken on an automobile tour of the university grounds and later were the guests of Prof. H. F. Major at luncheon.

G. A. Kaupp, President, Missouri State Florists' Association.

The Officers.

At the next session the nominating committee presented the following names for the various offices: President, G. A. Kaupp, of Nevada; vice-president, Edwin Denker, of St. Charles; secretary, W. S. Wells, of St. Louis; treasurer, C. C. Sanders, of Clayton. It was moved that these be elected to the offices as selected by the committee. It was then moved that the president appoint four vice-presidents, two to serve two years and two to serve one year, these also to act as a board of directors.

J. F. Ammann, secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, who accompanied the St. Louis florists to Columbia, was called on to tell of the work of the Illinois society. Mr. Ammann responded in his usual interesting manner. He gave the officers of the young organization much valuable information to work on. He was given a vote of thanks. The remainder of the meeting was occupied with talks on plans for 1917. The next meeting will be subject to the call of the board of directors.

Dr. Whitten, Dr. Lawrence and Professor Major then led the way to the Columbian Club, where a buffet supper and smoker was held. The students and officers of the university were present. The party from St. Louis was not so large as was expected, but the few that made the trip were glad that they did so. All are in favor of holding the next meeting of the association at Columbia. Secretary Wells said the annual dues will be $2 per year and life membership $15. Florists in Missouri wishing to apply for membership should address W. S. Wells, 4158 Flad avenue, St. Louis. J. J. B.

Leaders of the Missourians.

The man selected as the first president of Missouri's state organization of florists has been in the business at Nevada for twenty-four years, having joined his father in the work as soon as he had completed his schooling. The firm for many years has been G. P. Kaupp & Son. It has a prosperous retail business, growing the greater part of the plants and cut flowers used, especially carnations. G. A. Kaupp is secretary of the Masonic lodge and Royal Arch Masons and recorder of the Knights Templar at Nevada.

W. S. Wells came into this existence in 1885 at Oxford, O., and not long after entered the florists' trade, for his father was a grower. At the death of the latter, Mr. Wells took over the business, but disposed of it in 1908. He was associated with H. Schmidt & Co., in his home town, until 1911, when he went to St. Louis to take up work in the Missouri Botanical Garden. In 1913 he left the garden to establish the Wells Floral & Landscape Co. He has been an active worker in the St. Louis Florists' Club, in which he has held many offices.

Lancaster, Pa.—Arrangements are being made to hold the fall flower show November 9 to 12, under the auspices of the Lancaster County Florists' Club.

NUMBER OF MEN REQUIRED.

How many men should be needed to do the work in a range of greenhouses containing 75,000 square feet of glass, where the crops grown are 24,000 carnations, 10,000 chrysanthemums, 5,000 roses and a general stock of plants? We have day and night firemen. There are six houses, each 27x300, and they are in good condition. I should like to get some facts from the experiences of other firms under similar conditions.

K. S.—Wis.

It would be utterly impossible for anyone who is unfamiliar with your place and the conditions prevailing thereon to give you an intelligent estimate of the number of men required to run it properly. The class and assortment of stock grown and the adaptability of the place to the stock that is being grown would make all the difference in the world between the economical operation of one place and that of another. A much better method for getting at your problem would be to estimate a fair day's work in any given operation, and then see whether or not each individual does a fair day's work while being employed in that manner. If each man comes up to the standard in his particular line, you will have no reason to complain.

For instance, a fair potter will take up 2,500 to 3,000 rooted cuttings, pot them into 2-inch pots and set them away, in a day of ten hours. If he has to screen and get in his potting soil, do much cleaning on the cuttings before potting, or carry the potted plants a long distance, the quantity will be cut down proportionately.

One man will be able to care for one of your houses planted to roses or carnations for cut blooms, doing the watering, the ventilating and the cutting of blooms, and propagating enough stock to replant the house each year. In fact, he would do everything except refilling the house for replanting. If the house were planted with chrysanthemums there would be times when extra help would be required. Few places are run in this manner, however. A grower is given several houses to look after. He will do the watering and ventilating, and in addition to that he will do whatever other work he finds time to do, selecting for himself those things which require a greater technical knowledge than is possessed by the average helper, of whom the required number are supplied him, whenever they are needed.

If I had your place, I would employ a rose grower, a carnation grower and a plant grower. The plant grower would take charge of the chrysanthemums, because the houses in which the chrysanthemums are grown are most likely used to a large extent for the potted plants. Give each of these three men his department to look after. Then I would employ a number of helpers, who would change around from one department to another, according to where extra help is needed. Still another man should be in charge of the packing, as this department requires both knowledge and skill of its own particular kind. Above all, one man should be in supreme authority. On this man, more than on anyone else, will depend the economical operation of the place. He will plan the work and see that each department works in harmony with the rest. He may be one of the three growers named above, or he may be extra, and be free from the vexing little details of a department, thus having an opportunity to achieve the best possible results. A. F. NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Memorial day business was exceptionally good with most of the local florists. As usual, those located near a cemetery or who for other reasons have a large business in potted plants did better than those whose trade is principally in cut flowers, funeral and wedding work. But all did a satisfactory business. Tens of thousands of geraniums, petunias, heliotropes, fuchsias, verbenas, ageratums and other plants were sold. Large numbers of foliage plants were sold. Hundreds of graves which several weeks ago were planted to pansies were replanted with blooming and foliage plants. Each passing year sees a larger number of potted plants sold by the grocery stores at such times as Easter and Memorial day, and, while this makes business for the growers, it cuts into the florists who maintain stores.

Iris has been much more plentiful during the last week than heretofore, and gladioli, which made their appearance a couple of weeks ago, are arriving in considerable quantity. Weather conditions were such the early part of last week that the development of carnations and other flowers was somewhat retarded. Still there was a considerable supply. Sweet peas were plentiful and cheap.

Now that the greenhouses have been cleared of Memorial day and bedding stock, the growers are beginning to plan more actively for fall. They are repotting their chrysanthemum cuttings and planting or transplanting their other fall stock.

Various Notes.

A. Deisler & Son, 31 Holland street, report business satisfactory. They have had a large amount of funeral work of late.

Charles J. Connolly, 319 Bank street, has made alterations in his store which enable him to make a much more attractive display.

Davies & Davis, wholesale growers at Central avenue and Grove street, East Orange, report a fine Memorial day business in bedding plants. They are now making their last potting of chrysanthemums.

Because of the inclement weather the early part of last week, Henry Hornecker, 77 Central avenue, East Orange, was unable to get all his cemetery work done by Memorial day, such was its volume.

F. A. Kuehn, 621 Central avenue, has been busy with cemetery work and has had a large sale of plants at his store and greenhouses.

Ernest Radany, 596 Central avenue, reports that the volume of Memorial day and cemetery work he has had this spring goes far ahead of that of previous years.

Charles Witheridge, 532 Broad street, complains of the high prices charged for bedding plants this season, most of the leading kinds costing as much wholesale this year as they are often sold at retail.

Charles Trauth, 475 Orange street, is much pleased with this spring's trade. Funeral work has kept up well and there has been a large sale of bedding plants.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Aaron Shive, manager of the Flick Floral Co. greenhouses, Fort Wayne, notes an increasing demand for flowering plants, which calls for more material and labor.

Mrs. E. Suder, of Toledo, O., is experiencing the best season on record. Each year sees better prices; choice stock finds readier purchasers. Mrs. Suder still takes an active interest in the business, in which she is ably assisted by her son.

Schramm Bros., of Toledo, were commenting on the rush of business when they were interrupted by a hail storm. "Another setback," observed B. Schramm, "but we will get there yet."

G. F. Hartung, of Sandusky, O., is one of the most successful market gardeners in that locality. He reports a better season for prices and is of the opinion that growers are in good financial condition.

The F. A. Friedley Co., of Cleveland, O., intends this to be the last season for roses and carnations at this location. They will transfer this branch of the business to the new establishment at Newton Falls, O. "Our cut for Mothers' day," said Frank Friedley, "was 8,000 blooms from the same number of plants of Carnation Pink Delight. It is a good keeper, but we believe that in specializing in flowering plants and forcing stock, with our convenient nearness to the city stores, we shall do even better than in the past."

L. F. Darnell, formerly of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, is back in town and is the subject of various rumors in both store and greenhouse matters. Certain it is that a well known and popular man in the trade, as he is, will not remain long inactive.

A. Graham & Son, of Cleveland, find some diversion in dodging missiles thrown by joy riders on freight trains which pass the end of the greenhouses. Adam Graham II showed me a collection of iron spikes and sprocket wheels that made up an interesting exhibit. The police authorities have advised watching for the culprits and firing blank cartridges, but Charles Graham thinks it a poor return. As soon as the rush of business is over, an organized force will be formed to cope with what, to say the least, is a dangerous pastime and may become serious and expensive.

S. N. Pentecost, the Naumann Co. and the Wilson Floral Co. are among East Cleveland's most prosperous and contented retail plant growers. W. M.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. A. I. Simmons.

Mrs. A. I. Simmons, aged 39 years, died of heart failure while telephoning, May 27, at 11:30 a. m. in the store of her husband at 242 West Sixty-third street, Chicago, Ill. The funeral was held from the home, May 29, and interment was in Oakwood cemetery. The deceased is survived by her husband, a 17-year-old daughter, Ruth, two sisters and a brother. She had been her husband's chief assistant in the store for years.

Jonathan Nash.

Jonathan Nash, of the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, 55 West Twenty-sixth street, New York city, who had been ill during the last two weeks with pneumonia, died at his home Saturday morning, May 27, aged 63 years. He leaves a widow, one daughter and three sons. The funeral services were held at Grace church, Tenth street and Broadway, Monday, May 29, and were largely attended by his friends in the trade.

Mr. Nash came to this country from Hillingdon, near London, England, twenty-two years ago. The Hillingdon rose was his favorite always. He was a member of the English Yeomanry and was in the horticultural business all his life, being known as "a Covent Garden man." His first experience in America was with Slaughter, the rose grower of Madison. He then was connected with the New York Cut Flower Co. and two years later formed a partnership with F. L. Moore and Henry Hentz as Moore, Hentz & Nash. This partnership has continued for eighteen years. Among the many beautiful floral pieces at the funeral was a blanket of valley by the surviving members of the firm, besides dozens of wreaths from all sections of the city and his hosts of friends in the trade. NEW YORK.

The Market.

There was a big Memorial day business up to noon May 29. The latter part of last week summer temperature prevailed, but the peony season is a week late and there was a large shortage for Memorial day. The advance orders for peonies were enormous, especially from the smaller cities, and the few peonies that arrived were absorbed quickly at $1 per dozen. A few days after Memorial day, one of the specialists prophesies, $2 to $3 per hundred will be the price and a million flowers will be sold before the first ten days of June are over.

Last week's values were maintained, many declare, only by the lighter shipments. Carnations, however, held up in price phenomenally, a few selected flowers bringing 6 cents May 28, when the average quotations ranged from $2.50 to $5 per hundred. These steadied the whole market. The price of carnations, however, broke badly late May 29.

Roses are arriving in greater numbers and the general quality still is superb. The hot wave has not yet affected them. American Beauties are none too plentiful and there was no difficulty in securing $25 per hundred for the selects. The rose demand was heavy May 28, especially for the lower grades. Hadley, Brunner and Prima Donna still are great favorites. There are plenty of orchids and prices range from $10 to $35 per hundred. Gardenias have followed violets into the realm of "innocuous desuetude." Lilies rose to 10 cents each May 28, with a few selling at $1.50 per dozen, but inferior flowers sold as low as $4 per hundred. Valley sells at $4 down to $1, the latter figure for the outdoor stock. There will be no drop while the June weddings last. There are plenty of callas and gladioli, less iris, but oceans of sweet peas, the Spencers only selling rapidly. The usual assortment of spring flowers, plenty of ramblers and a glorious collection of tulips in great variety and beauty, are in evidence.

Many orders reached the New York retailers from other cities, for Memorial day delivery here.

Various Notes.

It was a great shock to his many friends in the trade when the death of Jonathan Nash was announced May 28, as every hope had been entertained for his ultimate recovery. He was a man of charming personality and universally beloved. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column.

The weekly exhibition of plants and cut flowers took place May 27 and 28 at Bronx park. On Saturday Prof. E. H. Wilson, of Arnold Arboretum, lectured to a large audience on "Plant Hunting in China." J. Otto Thilow, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, will lecture June 3, at the same place, his subject being "Flowers from Snow to Snow."

The next meeting of the Florists' Club, the last for the season, will be held June 12.

Anton Schultheis and wife, of College Point, are enjoying a brief holiday at Cherry Valley, Pa.

Mr. Hanfling, of Russin & Hanfling, is recuperating for a week in the Catskills.

The woman's suffrage folks had a gala day May 28, with decorated autos at every corner on Fifth avenue, where many thousands of roses and other flowers were sold for the "cause."

A. A. Young, of Jewett City, Conn., is shipping some exceptionally good carnations to the Growers' Cut Flower Co.

William Kessler and wife have returned from a week's rest in the mountains. Now Mr. Kessler and his force are busy completing the improvements in his store, building a new icebox 10x 18 feet, enlarging the office and the department for cut flowers and eliminating the conservatory.

George Siebrecht's sales of lilies May 28 were over 4,000.

June 3 the bowling club will play a match game with and enjoy the hospitality of the Patchogueians, under the protecting wings of John Donaldson & Co. The Club's fishing trip to Barnegat bay will take place in August.

Sunday closing by all the florists is under serious consideration.

W. P. Ford expects to cut many thousands of peonies from his own farm during the first few days of June. Their failure to bloom for Memorial day was a great disappointment.

R. B. Holmes, of Madison, N. J., is sending choice Ophelia roses to J. K. Allen, who also calls attention to the pond lilies in variety from J. W. Coridon, of Tuxedo, Md.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., spent Memorial day in New York.

The father of Joseph Volke, manager of W. H. Siebrecht's business in the Coogan building, died May 28.

A. L. Young's father is dangerously ill. J. Austin Shaw.

Brussels, Belgium.—Large quantities of nursery stock are being moved to Germany under special permit, the minister of agriculture at Berlin being actively prosecuting the work of husbanding and developing that efficient nation's agricultural resources.

London, England.—Official notice has at length been given of the long predicted action of the government in the matter of bulb imports. By an Order in Council, signed by the king May 10, the importation into the United Kingdom of bulbs, flower roots, plants, trees and shrubs is restricted to cases in which special license is granted by the Board of Trade.

Paris, France.—The French government since December 26, 1914, has compensated those whose property suffered from German air raids, but the perennial disagreement has arisen over the value of greenhouse property. The National Horticultural Society of France has been appealed to and insists that each board of appraisal shall contain at least one member competent to place values on growing plants.

Yokohama, Japan.—While it does not appear that freight on bulbs to the United States will show an early decline, there should be no great difficulty in finding space for the movement of the 1916 crop, since the Nippon Yusen Kaisha is to add a seventh steamer to its service. Four of these liners run between Hongkong and Seattle, but three will be employed solely between Japanese ports and Seattle, giving three steamers per month instead of twice a month as heretofore.

London, England.—At the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society May 2 an award of merit was recommended for Ribes cruentum, a Californian species, forming a dwarf, diffusely branched shrub, spiny, and bearing three or five-lobed leaves a little smaller than those of the gooseberry. The pendulous flowers are about an inch long, the recurving outer petals being crimson-maroon, the inner ones tubular and of shell-pink tint, with white tips. The fruits are covered with long spines. This is a highly ornamental gooseberry, the flowers being like small fuchsia blooms.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

SECRETARY J. H. Dick, Brooklyn, N. Y., has issued No. 3 of the bulletins of the American Dahlia Society, a pamphlet of eight pages of interesting matter for dahlia growers.

THE opening of June finds the bedding plant season in general two weeks late and the trade exceptionally active for this date. Usually the business in bedding plants is nearly over by Memorial day.

IN these days of rapidly changing styles in everything the human uses, beauty in flower is not enough; we must have novelty. And novelty in plants and flowers is not so easily obtained as is the case with woman's raiment.

AMERICAN BEAUTY is having a fight for life, in the east against Hadley, in the west against Russell; but it remains to be shown that any considerable number of growers can do the newer varieties well enough to give them place as contenders for Beauty's popularity.

A SUBSCRIBER asks The Review to name for him a fancy carnation in each color, those that "have good, big, fancy flowers but do not require special treatment." Would that we could; there are many who would like to grow fancy stock without special treatment.

A NUMBER of large growers of roses for the Chicago market have come to the conclusion that, except for the Christmas crop, it pays best to grow short to medium-stemmed roses without pinching, which bids fair to improve the opportunity for the growers who hold the opposite view.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3 or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

BOOMING THE WHITE CARNATION.

President J. F. Ammann and Secretary A. F. J. Baur, of the American Carnation Society, last week sent the following letter to members:

There is no need for us to tell you of the origin and history of Mothers' day. Nor do we need to remind you that Mothers' day has brought to all of us a lot of business that was most welcome, at a period when formerly the markets were glutted with stock. These facts are well known to all of us. It also is a fact that this demand for our flowers was created without our aid. It has cost the trade practically nothing in dollars and cents.

Now, however, the time has come when we are asked to lend a hand, an appeal for funds having come to us from those who are promoting the day. In the face of the facts as stated below, we can hardly afford to turn a deaf ear to this appeal. At least such was the view taken by the board of directors at its meeting in Philadelphia, March 26, and by whose order this letter is being sent out.

When the movement was started, the founder, Miss Anna Jarvis, supplied what funds were needed. She did this gladly, besides giving a large portion of her own time to the work, taking for herself only the satisfaction it gave her to thus honor her mother. The movement has grown to such proportions now as to require financial assistance from other sources and, naturally, the promoters are turning to those who most have benefited financially.

On account of the white carnation having been chosen as the official badge for this day, the carnation industry has benefited to a greater extent financially than any other and it seems fitting that we show our appreciation in a most substantial way. Therefore we propose that the members of the A. C. S. each contribute $2 toward a fund, which will be added to whatever funds the S. A. F. may raise. Will you contribute your mite?

There is such a beautiful sentiment in the observance of this day that everyone should be willing to help perpetuate it, regardless of the business aspect. But inasmuch as it does bring to us such volumes of business, should we not be all the more willing and ready to give a small portion of our profits toward such a commendable cause? Send in your contribution today. Make check payable to the secretary and stipulate for Mothers' day fund.

A CLOUD WITH SILVER LINING.

There have been many and, in the aggregate, heavy losses on imported stock this season, especially on bulb and plant shipments via Rotterdam, and the remark frequently is heard, "Never again, for me." Probably most of those who today declare the risks of direct importing outweigh all chances of profit will sooner or later succumb to the sweet promises of the ubiquitous salesman from across the water, whose persuasiveness is equaled only by his persistence, but what dark cloud of disaster has a brighter silver lining than is contained in that "Never again"? Not that the trade will or should attempt to do without, or with less, European stock, for we need it, but that importing is a business of itself and should be left in the hands of the houses equipped for it. The man who needs a case or two of plants or bulbs never should order them from a European traveler; he should order of a good, strong American house that, first of all, will see to it that he gets stock in satisfactory condition and, secondly, will be quickly getatable in case anything goes wrong.

Of course it is the difference in prices here and in Europe that tempts so many men to place small orders across the water, but they lose sight of the many expenses of shipment. (This season small lots are showing as much as 200 or even 225 per cent of the invoice price for charges.) The big house can do it cheaper and better; it is entitled to and fairly earns its profit by saving the buyer time, temper and "tin."

The attitude of the Holland exporters is in a way explained by the fact that many, if not all, of them have been insuring themselves against claims in Dutch companies that accept risks of this character, but which now, because of the number of claims, show a disposition either to discontinue writing such insurance or to raise the premium sharply. Some exporters indicate they must be protected from loss if they are to continue shipment. If the shipper can not stand the losses, how can the importer? The answer is to put the business in the hands of fewer and larger people and let them systematize it. It will be to the advantage of all concerned.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Although Memorial day, 1916, will not be remembered in the Chicago wholesale cut flower trade as a record-breaker, it nevertheless was marked by a large volume of business; in the matter of quantity of stock moved undoubtedly the largest of the year. Two things seemed to conspire to defeat the efforts of the growers and wholesalers. They were the express drivers' strike and the unfortunate weather conditions. Fear of delayed shipment is thought by some to have kept many orders out of this market in spite of assurances that there would be no delay. The unseasonably warm weather of May 26 caused a softening of all stock, with the result that the close of last week and the opening of this one saw the market crowded with open and inferior flowers of all kinds. Then, too, it rained steadily all day May 29, scaring off many local buyers. The beautiful weather May 30 was a help to an eleventh hour rush.

No one wanted Beauties, which was altogether agreeable to most of the wholesalers, as Beauties were not plentiful and those available were of poor quality. Of really good roses of the other varieties there was a pronounced shortage, but of medium and indifferent grades there was an abundance.

Peonies were in great demand and, though there was much "shaker" stock to be seen, there was enough good stock to meet requirements. The waste on peonies was unusually heavy, many entire shipments and storage lots being unsafe to sell, so dependable stock made excellent prices. First-class carnations

FOR YOUR JUNE WEDDINGS AND COMMENCEMENTS WE OFFER

FINE ROSES

SPECIAL CROPS AT A TIME OTHERS ARE OFF

WE FORESAW the present trend of the Rose market—crops running out and quality getting poor at the time when the need for FINE flowers is greatest—so we arranged for some special crops for June. You can get here White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Mrs. Russell, Sunburst, Ophelia, Ward and Milady that will please the most critical June Bride or Girl Graduate.

PEONIES

$3.00 to $6.00 per 100

There is, perhaps, greater difference in the value of Peonies than in any other flower. Given the right varieties, grown and shipped by men who know how, there is nothing that makes a better show for the money; but if from men who never learned the "how," Peonies are likely to be absolutely worthless by the time the retailer unpacks them.

Our Peonies are RIGHT in every particular—you'll make good money on them in your June Wedding and Commencement work.

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

We are headquarters for the best grade of Sweet Peas—a large supply in all colors. They are making a hit everywhere.

CARNATIONS

This is the time of year when you must be careful where you order Carnations. Nothing but the best will do. Ours are strictly high-grade.

were scarce, but this helped in the clearance of larger quantities that otherwise never could have been sold. Valley, as usual, was on the short side. Cattleyas lived up to their established record of scarcity. Contrary to their experience of a year ago, Easter lilies played a small part in the holiday demand. This, perhaps, was due to the small supply. Baby gladioli enjoyed a ready sale, as did sweet peas. The latter, however, are not cemetery flowers and consequently most of the sales were in the line of regular business. Some double white narcissi made their appearance just in time to get in on the rush. Cape jasmine was easily one of the best sellers on the market. Miscellaneous stock, though not clearing in all cases, was moved with a fair degree of celerity. Greens were in good demand, particularly ferns, but these were on the short side of the market.

Express Drivers' Strike Situation.

The strike of wagon men of the express companies is dragging its weary way along without change, putting wholesalers and growers to no end of inconvenience and considerable expense. Considering that the management had all but lost the strike, a committee of drivers was appointed last week to fight the employers. Saturday evening, in the midst of the Memorial day rush, Manager Lautenschlager, of the Wholesale Florists' Cartage Service, got word that the permits to move perishable articles past the pickets were to be canceled forthwith, especially as a wholesale florist had been seen loading peonies on an American Express wagon. Mr. Lautenschlager, accompanied by Treasurer E. C. Amling, A. L. Randall and F. M. Johnson, paid a visit to the union headquarters and, after much soft speech that put a severe strain on tempers, succeeded in getting a renewal of their permit from the new strike committee.

The wholesalers' cartage service still is operating and is the sole dependence of the market. The express companies send occasional strike-breaker wagons into the market section and let them stand around under police guard, but no real effort is made to give service. Each morning there are rumors that the next day will be the last of the strike, but so far as any shipper can see the situation is absolutely unchanged.

Dr. Knapp's Peony Plantings.

Dr. A. J. Knapp, of Evansville, Ind., who sends thousands of dozens of peonies to the E. C. Amling Co. each May, has been in town several days, "seeing for himself how they come out of storage, how they open up and how the buyers take to them," as he told The Review.

"There are certain stages of life common to all males of the genus homo," the Doctor said. "First comes marbles, then tops, base ball, horse-racing and motoring, but eventually paths diverge; some take up golf, others flowers. As for myself, the more I worry about my practice the more peonies I plant." And the evidence is the doctor must have worried quite a bit of recent years, as he increases his shipments heavily each season. He now has two places, one at Evansville, the other twenty-five miles away at De Gonia. It is a successful man's hobby, but run on a broad commercial basis.

"We begin to cut about May 10 and finish within three weeks, so that most of the crop must spend several days in cold storage, for there is no possibility of selling so large a quantity so quickly except in Chicago at Memorial day," he said. "Under these conditions the important quality to be sought above all others is keeping quality. If a peony will not keep in storage and afterwards, no matter how fine, it is no use to me. After the ability to stand shipment and storage I look for as fine a flower as may be had; big flower, striking color. My list, so chosen, is: White, Festiva maxima; cream, Queen Victoria; light pink, Delicatissima, known in Chicago as L L L Pink; dark pink, Late Rose; red, Felix Crousse. Of these I shall increase my acreage again next autumn.''

Various Notes.

While the striking express drivers have committed little violence, hangers-on have done some mischief affecting this trade. One day last week Erne & Klingel were hauling a load of 600 dozen peonies from a depot to cold storage, when, at the approach to the State street bridge, rough upset the Dolan wagon being used. Charles Erne had a vision of 600 persons going down street each with a bunch of free peonies, but the police were so prompt that only fifteen dozens were lost.

A peony annex in the adjoining vacant store in the south end of the Le Moyne building has been operated for a week by the E. C. Amling Co., merchandising large quantities of the Evansville peonies.

After all there were local peonies in the market for Memorial day, the Batavia Greenhouse Co., forty miles west of the city, cutting Old Red as early as May 28.

The strike of express drivers has delayed the completion of the planting of roses in the new range of houses of the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood. The big houses, with their 250,000 feet of glass, are not quite finished, but have been planted as fast as enclosed, planters and builders working together. There still are a few thousand rose plants, part to come from Richmond, Ind., and part from Lincoln, Ill., that Mr. Amling has hesitated to order shipped while express service is uncertain.

J. P. Degnan, of Winterson's Seed Store, indicates a belief that the season has been so backward during May that the trade will find soft-wooded bedding plants selling briskly during nearly all of June this year.

At 183 North Wabash avenue, in the same building with Miller & Musser, H. Bornhoff has leased a room as agent for the Crowl Fern Co., of New Salem, Mass.

Alice, a carnation N. J. Wietor has liked from the time he first saw it, is steadily advancing in his esteem.

The National Plant & Flower Co., S. Freund, manager, has completed its two new houses, making eight in all, and had them full of stock when the bedding season began. When the plants are turned into cash, the cash is to be turned into a new boiler capable of handling the 23,000 feet of glass.

The handsome new residence on the Jackson boulevard frontage back of the greenhouses now is occupied by Frank Oechslin and wife and a house warming is in early prospect.

This is the busiest year in the history of the John C. Moninger Co., according to R. E. Kurowski, who says a night shift for continuous operation of the factory is under contemplation.

There is a world-wide interest in Frey's Rainbow freesias, according to A. Henderson, who says orders for trial quantities are being received from widely scattered sources.

Our old business associate, John D. Thompson, formerly of the Chicago Carnation Co., later founder of the Thompson Carnation Co. at Joliet, who now lives in Chicago, engaged in another line of activity, had the great misfortune to kill a 9-year-old boy on South Halsted street May 24, by running over him with his business auto. The coroner's jury held Mr. Thompson blameless.

The business of the George Wittbold Co., established sixty years ago next spring, has grown to the point where eight trunk lines now lead to the telephone switchboard in the Buckingham place office.

In line with its policy of general expansion, the A. L. Randall Co. is installing an elaborate wood-working plant for the manufacture of sun parlor and florists' accessories.

The volume of business done by Kennicott Bros. Co., for just one day last week, ran $3,000 ahead of the same day a year ago, according to H. B. Kennicott.

The decorations for the formal opening of the new Lyon & Healy building were handled by John Mangel. Miss Elsie Schnapp now is numbered among his assistants.

In spite of embargoes, big navies and all the paraphernalia of war, T. E. Waters, superintendent of the supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., reports the arrival last week of a large importation of German baskets.

Two Foley greenhouses, 40x225 feet each, are being added to the range of Frank Schramm, of Crystal Lake, Ill., who makes his Chicago headquarters with Kyle & Foerster.

Alfred Baur, of Erie, Pa., has been in town on one of his frequent visits.

Goerger Bros., of Arlington Heights, Ill., are adding two greenhouses to their range. The materials are being

A delivery car belonging to Daniel Branch, 313 East Fifty-first street, which was stolen last week, has been recovered by the police.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had extremely warm weather and, although peonies missed the holiday by a day, roses came in with a rush. A week ago it appeared as if cut flowers would be scarce for Memorial day, but such was not the case. There were so many roses that the shortage of peonies was not severely felt. Carnations were fine for this time of year and commanded good prices. The demand was for low-priced flowers, so that Beauties and the better class of stock suffered at least in price.

Plantsmen are having a busy time of it and the report is generally that this has been a banner year for bedding plants. Porch baskets and hanging baskets are in greater demand than ever before, and if the call does not diminish too much after Memorial day it will be the largest spring business ever done in this line. The stores made a special effort with hydrangea, rhododendrons and other flowering plants for the cemetery trade. There was the usual quantity of wreaths. Memorial day is a real flower day in Pittsburgh.

Various Notes.

The members of the American Carnation Socity and the S. A. F. are receiving letters regarding contributions to the Mothers' day fund. This has stirred up some discussion on the plans adopted. Many think that a more appropriate method would have been to organize a club or association to further the observance of Mothers' day. The annual membership fee in the end would amount to more than the contributions received under the present form of organization. Clarke.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Commencements are on in earnest and these, together with the numerous social affairs, keep the demand for flowers at a maximum. The weather is excessively warm, reminding us that we soon shall have the dull summer months with us again. Rain would be welcomed by all, especially those who are not prepared to irrigate.

Peonies are practically gone, though there is sufficient stock in storage to meet the demand for the next ten days. Lilies are plentiful, in fact, rather too plentiful, as they do not all clear. Rubrums are making their appearance. Peas are scarce; the outdoor stock is not well in and it looks as though it would be short this season, while indoor stock is about gone. Carnations are showing the effects of the heat and will soon be gone. Roses are in good supply and gladioli have come to the front.

The main part of the bedding plant season is over, but the demand continues fairly good. Nearly everything cleared and there was not the shortage we saw a year ago. There are many geraniums still unsold, as well as some good salvias. A year ago one could hardly find a dozen good salvias in the city. Prices have averaged better this season than last. This is a good indication, sure to lead to the production of better stock, as the two things react on each other.

I saw some first-class digitalis last week. Why do not our florists grow more of this perennial? It certainly would prove a good seller as a cut flower.

Dutch bulbs are ready and it is possible for Tennessee-grown daffodils to be secured for early forcing within a week or two. These bulbs may easily be forced three weeks earlier than the best imported stock.

Various Notes.

Floyd Bralliar leaves Hillcrest School Farm this week. He has become associated with the Nashville Normal and Industrial Institute, at Madison, Tenn., some eight miles from this city. He will teach the natural sciences and do some landscape work on the institute lawns this summer. It is planned to erect a greenhouse this fall. He will move his collection of narcissi and irises to the institution.

I saw a decoration of Van Fleet roses last week that made me wonder why more of the florists do not grow this rambler for cut flowers. PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Peonies and, next to them, carnations, were the principal flowers ordered for Memorial day. Unfortunately, neither peonies nor carnations were in satisfactory shape at the time. Local peonies were late, generally speaking, compelling the wholesalers to choose between declining the orders or filling them with southern peonies. Some did the one thing, some the other. The difficulty about southern peonies is that they have not the staying power of the local stock, often causing disappointment when least expected. There were a great many southern peonies and a few local ones. They sold exceptionally well at prices ranging from $6 to $8 per hundred, and occasionally $10 for extra fine stock. The out-of-town orders for peonies were heavy. Next to them came the orders from the cemeteries and the suburbs. The stores in the center of the city bought sparingly.

Encouraged by their success with carnations at Easter and at Mothers' day, the growers attempted to hold their cut for Memorial day, with disastrous results. A too large proportion of the stock was spoiled by the hot wave that arrived just before the holiday, rendering the flowers unfit for use. There seemed to be a good many white carnations about. This did not suit the demand, which favored colored stock, particularly well grown blooms of Mrs. C. W. Ward. Good, fresh carnations brought $4 and $5, and the finest $6 per hundred. Roses were helped by the shortage in the favorites. This was most apparent in the lower grades of roses. They advanced in price under strong demand. The better grades sold fairly well at last week's prices. Beauties were not in demand. Sweet peas also were neglected; so, too, were orchids. Lily of the valley continues scarce.

There was an active demand for mountain laurel, which was handled in large quantities. Yellow daisies were in favor.

Larkspur, both the handsome Delphinium Belladonna and the pretty, but more moderate, formosum, were popular. Gladiolus America was unusually fine. Quite a lot of irises was marketed, also some remarkable long-stemmed feverfew, apparently greenhouse-grown, which brought good prices. Greens sold well.

Taking it all in all, the volume of business was satisfactory, but the inability to fill orders for peonies and carnations in good shape was extremely trying.

Local-grown Peonies and Gladiolus America—Sweet Peas

lie hard by one or other of our great burial grounds. They look forward to May 30 as their great harvest. For it plants are prepared for months, and, to a lesser extent, cut flowers. The quantity of work that it takes to grow and make up these plants into the form in which they are required is considerable.

At Westcott's Laurel Hill Nurseries, John Westcott pointed with justifiable pride to the splendid way in which the orders had carried off the large stock of plants. The houses were fast emptying; many plants had gone; others were going; still others were ready to go, many of them made up in stands or baskets—geraniums, dracænas, etc., circled by periwinkle and ivy, well filled out, shapely combinations. The stock was in excellent condition, showing evidence of good culture.

Mrs. Mary Alburger's place was a scene of great activity. Time was snatched to report an excellent season, with the certainty that everything worth while would go out with May. Bouquets of all kinds of flowers are a specialty for Memorial day morning.

We Are Seven.

The record shows that it is a few days over a year since a pair of excursionists, in quest of knowledge and an outing and a little human sympathy, took the Newtown train to Southampton, away out in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. As on our previous visit, fortune smiled, for Stephen Mortensen was at home and just as cordial as could be.

But you want to know why that queer heading. Stephen evidently was not in the churchyard, nor yet was he at sea. True—the number seven refers to the varieties of roses he is growing in the greenhouses today. To be candid, the number bothered me as much as the story of "the four fellows in our gang." It runs like this: A little chap was telling one evening of the boys in his gang, and when asked to name them he said, "Bill Jones was one, the two McGinnises was two, I was the third and who the dickens was the fourth?"

In this case, without notes, I am inclined to think that Sunburst was one, Ophelia was two, Hadley three and the Killarney sisters, an original sport, the White, the Brilliant and the Double, made up the remaining four. Mr. Mortensen has grown the Sharon Hill Double Killarney, sent out by Robert Scott & Son, a year longer than anyone else in this neighborhood. It has been a great rose with him, but now, he thinks, it is losing vitality and he will discard it. An original or own sport from White Killarney will be given more space. It is a soft pink, most pleasing in color, with all the good qualities of the family. Hadley, too, will be increased on the strength of its spring performance. Much is expected of it now that it is better understood. Mr. Mortensen's keen perception of the desirable qualities in roses for cutting is shown in a little experiment he is trying. Possibly I am telling tales out of school, but he is such a thoroughly good fellow that I guess he won't mind. Down in the end of his last big greenhouse are a few plants of the hybrid rose, George Dickson. These plants bore some superb flowers. They had been used for crossing with Hadley. He had seen with quick insight that Hadley would some day be considered too deep a crimson—that the splendid color of George Dickson combined with the vigor, size and form of Hadley was something to strive for in a rose of the future.

A point of great interest brought out in Mr. Mortensen's chat about roses is that he no longer pins his faith on the grafted rose. While he does not condemn grafted roses, he clearly shows that the pendulum is swinging back again. Roses on their own roots are now preferred in most cases, as healthier and more productive.

Mr. Mortensen's place looked well and tidy. The greater part of the stock will be carried over for next season.

Permit Received.

H. Bayersdorfer, standing at his office door, a few yards inside his door, called out joyfully. His visitor, entering, looked back, supposing Mr. Bayersdorfer was recalling the man who had just gone out. But no, it was to tell the good news that the lost was found and that the goods were coming, actually on their way from Rotterdam to New York. It will be remembered that, after much vexatious delay, the British government issued a permit to H. Bayersdorfer & Co., to bring over all their German goods that were on the wharves at Rotterdam prior to a certain date. Then this permit was lost in Washington, I think, occasioning more wearisome delay, which required no less than half a dozen special trips for Mr. Bayersdorfer to Washington before the matter could be straightened out.

At last a new permit has been issued and honored. This was proved by a cable from the Holland-America line at Rotterdam, under date of May 26, saying that the steamer Ryndam would sail from that port on the following day, May 27, with 1,291 cases of goods for H. Bayersdorfer & Co. This is estimated at about one-third of the total number of cases covered by the permit. The remainder are expected to come by later steamers.

This is the first Memorial day that Mr. Bayersdorfer has spent at home in thirty years. He enjoyed the day with his family at his cottage on the corner of Vermont and Pacific avenue, Atlantic City, N. J. When asked whether he would remain at home this season, Mr. Bayersdorfer smiled and said that he might have to go to South America or somewhere else to get what the florists needed for next season—or he might not, should that great number of cases supplemented by his factory supply all that was needed.

Edward Reid felt that it would be unwise to send out peonies from the south for Memorial day. He is making great preparations, with fine stock, which he can recommend for June.

The Market.

Memorial day business in this market was good and stock cleaned up well, despite the fact that there has been a surplus. The quality of flowers as a whole is good, as the weather has been cool. This has acted to hold back rambler roses. The trade had counted upon ramblers for Memorial day, but with heavy supplies of all other varieties the ramblers were not missed. Carnations are conceded to be better than is usual at this time of the year and they met with a ready sale last week. The demand for roses was about the same as last year and there was little variance in prices. The favorites are picked as Mrs. Shawyer, Double White Killarney and Killarney Brilliant, although other varieties are in fair demand.

There is little change in the valley situation and this flower constitutes practically the only scarcity. The prevailing price is $5. Orchids are slightly more plentiful and are obtainable at about $7.50 per dozen. American Beauty roses are selling better. Those from the north are good and are supplanting the local product to some extent. The demand for gladioli is good, these flowers cleaning up well daily. The prices range from $4 to $6 per hundred. A nice lot of baby gladioli was offered during the week and met with quick sales. Although the quality is exceptionally good, it is getting rather late in the season for snapdragon. This flower, in pink, white and yellow, has maintained great popularity for a considerable length of time, its selling season this year having been greatly extended. Iris is pretty well over with. Gardenias are plentiful and sold well during the Memorial day period.

Although peonies have been coming into this market by the thousands, the demands from the north have been such as to keep them moving in a satisfactory manner and have resulted in keeping the prices locally to $4 minimum. Peonies seem to be late in the north and the calls on Washington have been heavy. Added to this extra business, shipments to southern points filling commencement and wedding orders have kept growers and exchangemen moving to the limit.

Various Notes.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held June 6. The outing committee will have an interesting report, as it is understood Chairman William H. Ernest will get his fellow members together the latter part of this week. Captain Ernest says the outing will excel any previous effort of the club.

The best wishes of the entire trade for a speedy recovery are extended to Gottlieb Supper, who is confined to his home suffering from a serious attack of erysipelas. Mr. Supper has been in the employ of George C. Shaffer for nearly fourteen years and in that time he has previously lost but one day on account of illness. Mrs. Supper, who is also employed by Mr. Shaffer, is attending her husband.

Fred H. Kramer and Adolph Gude will be seen in the parade which is to be held at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., June 3, for the purpose of showing to American-born Americans what good Americans the German-Americans are.

ever before and nearly every florist is far behind in filling orders. It will require two or three weeks to see daylight. The demand for geraniums is exceedingly heavy and, by the looks of things, everything will be cleaned up in fine shape during the next two weeks. Trade Decoration day was heavy and stock was quite plentiful, excepting peonies, which have opened slowly. As a consequence there will be a heavy glut of them during the next week or so. The rainy weather has been a bad drawback in planting and the ground has been so wet that it was almost impossible to catch up with that branch of the work.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Social Club held a reception and dance at the Arlington Country Club May 22. There were about thirty present and all had a most enjoyable evening. J. M.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

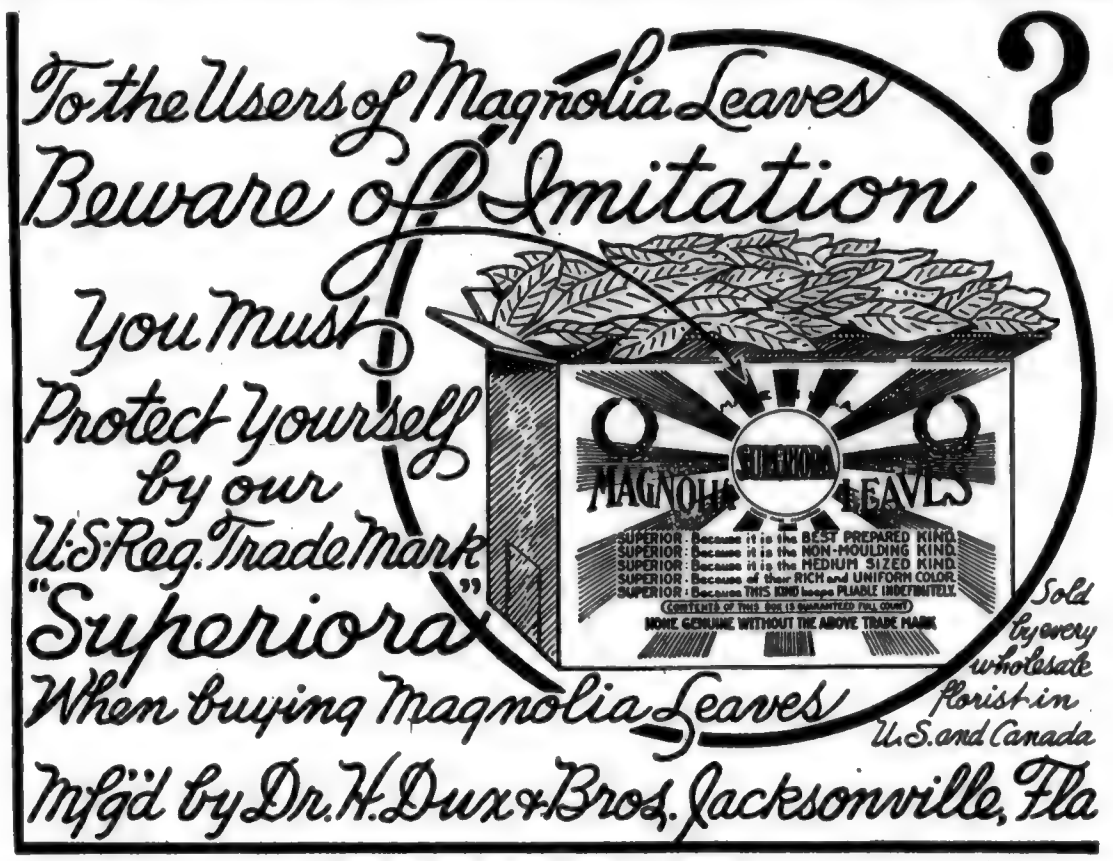
Minneapolis is gay with Memorial decorations. The town homes have their window boxes planted up and the business houses have announced their decorations. One huge furniture store has 300 feet of window boxes, the work being done by the Minneapolis Floral Co. The stores all stocked heavily with peonies, roses, carnations, snapdragons and sweet peas. Stock is generally scarce locally, but large shipments are made from Chicago and Milwaukee. Every department store and every Greek store is heavily stocked and they cut the prices as against the florist proper, who runs the florists' business pure and simple.

Lakewood Bars Bedding.

The cemeteries are one mass of bloom. Nowhere in the states are flowers used so freely as in the Twin City cemeteries. The Lakewood Cemetery Association has passed a new rule and it goes into force this month. It reads as follows: "No flower planting is permitted on lots or graves in Lakewood cemetery. There may be a vase containing plants and vines placed on each lot, but any further decoration must consist only of cut flowers placed on graves." This will be of interest to the trade from a business point. I understand that the association by this rule loses $5,000 worth of business from its greenhouses. General improvement is, however, expected in the appearance of the cemetery, which is the main object. This innovation will be followed with interest by many of the local florists, who cordially agree with the movement.

Various Notes.

Miss H. B. Whitted is as busy as a bee. Large funeral orders and reception decorations have been the feature of the week.



Max Kaiser had cleaned up the bulk of his Memorial day stock at time of writing. Baby Ramblers made 35 cents to 50 cents; marguerites, 20 cents; hydrangeas, 50 cents to $2 for useful plants. He has been turning down orders since May 26, on account of shortage of stock.

Wessling's Greenhouses have in a stock of new vases and are catering for cemetery work.

Thomas Hall's staff is working early and late on cemetery decoration. Mr. Hall does a fine business in gardens and window boxes.

The Mazey Floral Co. has been working overtime, if there is such a thing in the florists' business, to get out funeral orders and outside shipments.

The New York Florists are pushing potted plant trade for all it is worth and are doing well. F. E. B.

The Market.

The general verdict is that Memorial day business once more established a new record. Weather conditions this spring have been disappointing to those who had planned to get large crops of spiræas, candytuft, feverfew, stocks and other flowers used for baskets and bouquets, but prices were satisfactory all around. The weather was comfortable and florists have good reasons to be satisfied with this, the greatest cut flower holiday of the New England year.

Roses sold remarkably well. There was a large crop available. Short and medium-stemmed stock sold best. These advanced in price, but on fancier stock there was little change. Flowers selling at from $3 to $6 per hundred were in heavy demand, colored varieties like Hadley, Richmond, Francis Scott Key and Hoosier Beauty having first call, then Ophelia and the colored Killarneys. Carnations were in fairly good supply and sold well at $4 to $6 per hundred, light colors, as usual, making the most money.

Sweet peas sold all the way from 50 cents to $2 per hundred. Lilies made $8; callas the same. Double, colored stock sold finely at $5 to $8 per hundred. Even single stock went well. Candytuft, feverfew and Gypsophila elegans made 50 cents per bunch. Spiræa Japonica made from $3 to $5 per hundred. Pink spiræa easily made $6. Darwin and cottage tulips were in prime condition and many thousands were sold. Short-stemmed blooms made $2; long-stemmed, $3 and $4 per hundred.

Valley from outdoors was procurable in quantity. Much of it was far superior to the forced article. Good outdoor valley made $2 to $3 per hundred. Yellow marguerites were in tremendous supply and they dragged somewhat. Prices varied from $1 to $3 per hundred. Snapdragons appeared in great quantities, but few were left unsold. Asparagus was in excellent demand. There was no special demand for orchids or gardenias.

Such plants as pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots and geraniums sold well. Artificial wreaths were featured more than ever before. Some stores displayed nothing else in their windows and they were heavily advertised, not only by the florists, but also by dry goods stores.

A few retailers decline to handle this class of stock, but there could be no mistaking the fact that sales were tremendous. It would be simply impossible to fill the great demand with natural flowers. There may be something of a sameness to these magnolia wreaths, but they stand shipping well, are good keepers and in economical hands are sometimes used for several Memorial day decorations.

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott had a heavy cut of Ophelia, Miller, Hadley, Sunburst and Killarney Brilliant roses for Memorial day. For asparagus he had an almost insatiable call.

J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, had 600 bunches of feverfew May 27, which cleared quickly. He would have had many more if Old Sol's rays had been in evidence a day or two more. He also had a fine cut of yellow marguerites.

James Wheeler, of Natick, who now can be fairly known as the New England marguerite king, had 27,000 yellows May 27, and 30,000 May 29. He also had a grand crop of carnations. Mr. Wheeler's marguerites now are as well known in New York as in Boston.

The Houghton-Kravatz Co., which recently opened a store at Melrose, is well satisfied with business and states that more money is being made there than in Boston.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. largely advertised Memorial day wreaths and disposed of a great number. This concern reports trade as well ahead of that of 1915.

J. Streiferd & Son, of Braintree, had a fine cut of annual larkspurs May 27. Their Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses were in good crop.

Some of the finest double crimson stocks noted were those from J. A. Nelson, of Framingham. These readily realized $8 per hundred. Mr. Nelson's carnations were in great crop for the holiday.

Darwin tulips appeared in unusual numbers this year. Those from John J. Fee, with stems twenty-eight to thirty-six inches long, were easily the best on the market. Mr. Fee cuts his stems just above the bulbs and does not attempt to carry them over. He had 1,000 pots of lilies, carrying four to seven flowers each, which were just right.

The heaviest shipper of double feverfew locally was A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, our well known aster specialist. Feverfew never sold more quickly in Boston than this year.

At Carbone's Memorial day business cuts no special figure. This is a strictly high-class store and no artificial wreaths are handled. General business is splendid, orders for seaside resorts now coming in heavily.

R. E. Lassman, our octogenarian, had a magnificent lot of outdoor valley. This was vastly superior to any forced valley I have seen the last season in Boston, the spikes carrying thirteen to sixteen flowers each.

William Sim, of Cliftondale, is constantly springing some surprise. This year he put 25,000 Darwin tulips on the market May 27 and 29, in all the best colors. He also had an immense pick of sweet peas and pansies.

The W. W. Edgar Co. had a splendid lot of Tulip Gesneriana major, the finest colored variety we have for Memorial day. Their hydrangeas are later than usual, but customers are buying them before heads even show color. The bedding plant trade is active.

The Welch Bros. Co. did the greatest Memorial day business in its history. Practically everything sold, orders pouring in from all parts of New England.

W. R. Nicholson, of Framingham, had a greater variety of high-grade cut flowers for Memorial day than any other grower. It included yellow marguerites in quantity, feverfew, stocks, candytuft, Gypsophila elegans, snapdragons and a large cut of carnations.

John W. Foote, of Reading, hit it right with a big crop of stocks and candytuft.

Malcolm Orr, of Saugus, formerly one of our noted growers of sweet peas and violets, has rented his establishment and assumed charge of a private estate at Cambridge, N. Y. Mr. Orr's health had become impaired by constant working under glass and the doctors decreed an outdoor life to be necessary.

The annual lilac display at the Arnold Arboretum this year was at its best Memorial day, when many thousands enjoyed it. Darwin and cottage tulips were in prime condition at that date. Outdoor valley was good. Some German iris was in flower, but few deutzias were available this year. Not for twenty-five years have I seen vegetation more backward than this year; on the other hand, it has never been more luxuriant.

Penn, as usual, did a large Memorial day business. Their heavily advertised wreaths went to all parts of New England, and baskets and bouquets of natural flowers sold heavily. One of the floats in the great preparedness parade May 27, which symbolized the children of Massachusetts, was a Penn creation.

Robert Montgomery had his roses in fine crop for Memorial day, Ophelia, Hadley, Russell, Sunburst and the various Killarneys all cleaning up quickly.

H. R. Comley, on Park street, is one of the few local retailers featuring window boxes. Too bad that more do not take up this end, with its wonderful possibilities of development. Mr. Comley did not display any of the artificial wreaths; neither did Galvin's at their Park street and Back Bay stores.

One of the busiest Boston retailers was Harry Quint. His advertisements were bold and catchy and he had a great call for wreaths from all New England points. His garden scene outside the Boylston street store always attracts notice.

May 27 Boston had its largest parade, when 100,000 men and women showed that Boston stands for adequate preparedness. The closing of the business center of the city for some hours near Memorial day was not relished by the busy florists.

Wax Bros. featured both natural and artificial flowers, but did the heaviest business in the former. They devoted a window to each. They say they had the best Memorial day business on record.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

I am putting it mildly when I say that the market last week was crowded with stock of all kinds in season. Clean-ups could hardly be counted upon, excepting where extremely low prices were quoted. The retailers, too, say that trade was slow, and owing to the extremely hot weather window displays had to be discontinued. A revival, of course, is looked for this week, when Memorial day should bring quite a demand.

There was a big glut of peonies; they seemed to come in from everywhere and caused the wholesalers much inconvenience. Large consignments of roses and carnations also taxed the capacity of the display counters. Cape jasmines arrived in heavy supply, with no great demand for them. Valley is in good demand and will be the greater part of this month. There were heavy shipments of sweet peas, but the majority of these were not of first-class quality. There has been a slackening in the supply of lilies. Spanish irises and gladioli are expected in quantity soon. Prices will, no doubt, advance a little on all stock this week, but if the big shipments continue the advance will not be much.

Various Notes.

The west-end florists say that up to June 15 they expect a big demand for wedding and school commencement decorations. After this date the summer dullness starts, as society folks are off for their summer vacations then.

Professor H. C. Irish, who has charge of the public school gardens, has had a great time instructing the children in gardening. For the last month the pupils have been out planting all vacant lots near the school buildings.

C. C. Sanders, head of the Sanders Nursery Co., of Clayton, Mo., says the company will start to build a house 35x150 feet next month, to be devoted to carnations. Foley material will be used.

George Waldbart is cutting a large and fine crop of peonies, Shasta daisies, yellow lilies and coreopsis from his large farm at Clayton. He visits his farm daily.

Tom Carr believes in preparedness. The quantity of plants he had for Memorial day business at his Union Market stand was remarkable, but Tom sold all.

The Ladies' Home Circle will hold its June meeting at the home of Mrs. Henry G. Berning, 4211 Westminster place, June 14. All members are expected to attend.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its thirtieth anniversary meeting on the grounds of the W. J. Pilcher establishment, at Kirkwood, Mo., June 8.

The trustees are preparing a suitable program for the occasion. Automobiles will be waiting at all the wholesale houses to convey members to Kirkwood.

Spanish irises of various colors are now the leading cut flowers of the Shackelford Nursery Co. The fine quality of this stock pleases the west-end florists, who handle the greater part of the cut.

Frank Fillmore, Sr., celebrated his thirty-sixth wedding anniversary May 26 with a dinner at his home. This is one of the days when he proclaims he still is a young man.

Emil Schray, of Wm. Schray & Sons, is glad the big rush for plants is about over. There still is plenty of business in this line.

Grimm & Gorly, the Mullanphy Florists and the Riessen Floral Co. had pretty window displays for Memorial day. They report that advance orders for this day were heavy.

Werner Bros., rose growers of Clayton, Mo., say they had a heavy crop of Richmonds, Killarneys and White Killarneys for Memorial day. Their rose and carnation crops were of excellent quality all season.

Charles Steidle, who is building a range of rose houses at Olivette, says he has all work well under way and will begin stocking the houses sometime in June.

A correction should be made in the date of the monthly meeting of the St. Louis County Growers' Association. The date mentioned in last week's Review should have read June 7, instead of June 1.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The condition of the market is good, there being plenty of pot plants and cut stock to fill the demand. Funeral work is up to the standard. Peonies now are overflowing the market; they have never before been so abundant and every plant is loaded with blooms, not one going blind. This condition is expected to last for several weeks. Carnations are plentiful now, but it is expected there will be a shortage before the week ends. Roses are in good supply. Sweet peas are about off the market; there will be no more greenhouse-grown stock this season, as the weather has become too warm. Outdoor Spanish iris is expected to bloom in a few days. Gladioli were not so plentiful last week. Snapdragons are coming in heavily and are of good quality for this time of the year.

A. F. Barbe was preparing for his largest day in the year, as his cemetery trade for Memorial day is enormous. He expected to start the day before Decoration making bouquets. His large new house has been planted to roses, all of which look well. He has one house containing large geraniums with two to five blooms on each plant.

M. E. Chandler, of Argentine, will cut about 25,000 pansies for the Memorial day trade. He reports that he has planted out a larger number of dahlias.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. has an extra heavy crop of roses, carnations and snapdragons, and the largest crop of peonies they ever had. They will have a large quantity of potted hydrangeas and other pot plants for the trade. This company has all its chrysanthemums planted in the benches.

T. J. Noll reported that orders for Memorial day so far had been heavy and that from indications Memorial day would be the leader of all.

Henry Kusik & Co. are busy on shipping orders. This concern will have 65,000 peonies, in addition to other cut stock.

Jacob Hepting now is cutting a large quantity of carnations, about 3,000 a day, of good quality for this time of the year.

Arthur Newell was making big preparations for Memorial day. He had large numbers of magnolia wreaths and was stocking up on the ready-made wreaths. Advance orders were heavy with him.

Samuel Murray had a fine lot of gloxinias in bloom. He sold out all of his first hydrangeas and now has a big batch coming in.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has sold 49,000 peonies, by actual count. They were especially busy with funeral work during the week.

The Mount St. Mary's Greenhouses are well filled with geraniums and begonias to meet the demand from the cemetery.

Mrs. T. A. Moseley reports that she has been busy with orders for commencement exercises across the state line.

The S. Bryson Ayres Co. has a nice lot of 3-inch geraniums in bloom.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports that its mail orders for Memorial day were the heaviest they ever had. The local trade is heavy.

August Luther has a fine lot of 5-inch Easter Greeting pelargoniums in full bloom, which have been selling rapidly. He has a fine lot of 4-inch geraniums in full bloom.

W. J. Barnes has some well grown tuberous begonias in flower, some of the flowers measuring more than five inches across. He is practically sold out of bedding stock of all kinds.

Thomas Tobin was selected last week as the third member of the hospital and health board of this city. Mr. Tobin is vice-president of the Missouri Seed Co.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Seabright, Cal.—Bulb growing is becoming one of the important industries of this vicinity. There now are a considerable number engaged in the business, several of them on a scale large enough so that they are seeking a trade outlet for their crops instead of selling to larger growers. M. C. Main has about two acres of freesias, gladioli and callas this year, estimating his crop at about 300,000 bulbs.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The shortage continues in the best grades of stock fit for long-distance shipping, though there is still plenty of second-grade material. Funeral work again has been the mainstay of trade this week, though the inquiries and advance orders for wedding decorations are distinctly encouraging. Roses are not by any means first-class, either from outdoors or under glass. Carnations are poor, with the exception of a few new-crop flowers, just coming in. The field-grown ones are poor in the extreme. Gladioli were never better; America and Mrs. Francis King still hold their own as the best pink and red, respectively. Sweet peas are just about as nearly perfect as they could be, as the cool weather suits them exactly. Cecile Brunner roses are a little off crop. Valley is scarce. Orchids are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The L. A. Floral Co. is again among the first to take advantage of the latest and best way of doing things. The firm's large shipments, containing often a whole truckload of boxes, are going out to many long-distance points in the express refrigerator fruit cars, of which a great many leave the city daily. Thus their customers are getting the advantage of quick delivery, with the stock in perfect condition.

The nursery department of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. has just been awarded another important landscape contract, for the grounds of the new Redondo high school. This is one of the largest and finest of the many big schools built in southern California, and the contract will call for large quantities of stock. The new nurseries on the Whittier road will be well able to take care of this work.

Oscar Johanssen, of the Johanssen Seed Co., took a drive from Los Angeles to San Luis Obispo last week. The firm has about 250 acres in flower seeds in that section and Mr. Johanssen was up to look over the situation. He says that while the stand is about perfect, the lack of rain may prevent a full crop of many varieties.

H. Reeve Darling reports his May sales as away above the average in the new store in the Hayward hotel building. He has not been long enough in the other new store to be able to say how things will go.

George Eischen reports business fine at Ocean Park.

Good business is the report from J. W. Wolters.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles, Feb. 25, 1916. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

Several good decorations at the outlying country clubs have helped the business at Frank Lichtenberg's.

Montebello, the home of the flower and nursery business in this section, will hereafter be known officially as Monterey Park. The reason is an incorporation of this place and Ramona Acres in order to head off a proposition of Pasadena and other towns to start a sewer farm just north of the town. Probably the old name will still stick for all practical purposes.

H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Last week the weather was cool, with frequent showers and little sunshine. Indoor and outdoor plants were held back, so that the supply of blooms for use Memorial day was short. Growers who had timed their stock, depending on some normal May warmth and sunshine, found their benches coming in too late. But few varieties of outdoor blooms were available. Hardly any home-grown roses were ready on the parkings and lawns and the beds of hardy perennials were nearly bare of flowers.

Large quantities of cut stock were shipped to interior points for use at graduating exercises of high schools and colleges. The local demand for funerals and social affairs was good. In fact, the supply was hardly sufficient to meet all demands and some of the largest stores had to use odds and ends for their evening window displays.

Various Notes.

Frank W. Power, formerly associated with the Orenco Nursery Co., died of blood poisoning last week, at Salem, Ore.

Max Smith has a Dodge and a Cadillac motor car. With the two in use he says he can get through his deliveries and now and then take a joy ride.

Clarke Bros. have been showing some fine gloxinias and blooms of pyrethrum hybrids.

Late frosts nipped some of the stock plants set out too early by the growers.

Martin & Forbes Co. has a bench of fine snaps about ready to cut.

Several large orders for outdoor flowers were shipped in from California for Memorial day.

Mrs. Rahn has been seriously ill, requiring his presence at home nearly all the time.

Cool weather has held back the movement of bedding plants.

More complaint than usual comes in that flower thieves are busy at the cemeteries and about private lawns.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Shipping business for Memorial day was particularly heavy this year. Quantities of outdoor stock were sent to interior points at a considerable distance, thereby making it an easy thing to clean up the surplus here. In addition, the cool weather had a tendency to hold back the stock. The north wind hurt the sweet peas to a certain extent, causing the edges to turn, but there is quite a bit of first-class stock coming in, including long-stemmed Spencers. There is a good supply of fine white stocks, statice, coreopsis, marigolds and gypsophilas. There are many cornflowers and a limited cut of good snapdragons. Spanish iris is on the wane. America gladioli are coming in freely and are much sought after. Francis King makes a splendid showing and a large batch of baby gladioli finds a ready market.

Carnations are only in moderate supply, everything cleaning up without difficulty. Lilies are more than plentiful, but the large percentage of trashy stock hurts the demand materially. Some fine Burgle dahlias are arriving, their appearance being unusually early. Some of the stems are two and one-half feet long. Roses continue plentiful, but hardly so abundant as they were a few weeks ago. American Beauties show good quality and have a good demand. Ulrich Brunner is popular. The market is well supplied with gardenias and the demand leaves no ground for complaint. The same may be said of orchids. There is an excellent demand for potted stock, but the supply is limited. Good French hydrangeas are bought on sight and rambler roses move freely. Primulas are popular, as usual, and some pelargoniums are disposed of.

Marin Flower Show.

The Marin flower show, held under the auspices of the horticultural committee of the Marin Flower Pageant, at the San Rafael armory, May 19 to 21, was one of the finest ever held in the nearby towns of the San Francisco bay district. The pageant was arranged in celebration of the landing of Francis Drake on the shores of California. It had been well advertised and was well attended, the flower show being one of the principal features. There was considerable competition for the prizes in the professional classes, but Thomas Stentiford easily led the list of winners. He was awarded the principal prize, the silver cup offered by the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, for a group of French hydrangeas and calceolarias, arranged for effect. He took first cash prizes for decorative and flowering plants arranged for effect, these being a specimen maidenhair fern, one palm, one French hydrangea, six cinerarias, twelve gloxinias, three calceolarias, six pelargoniums and six begonias. He also received the silver cup offered by the City Planning Commission of San Rafael, for the most meritorious exhibit in the show, which was his display of calceorlarias and hydrangeas.

H. Plath took first prize for the best exhibit of ferns, arranged for effect, the prize being offered by the Garden City Pottery Co., of San Jose; also first prize for a specimen nephrolepis. C. Kooyman won first prizes for American Beauty roses, twelve blooms and twenty-five blooms, and for Gladiolus America and Francis King. Both the roses and gladioli were grown for him by J. E. Branin, of San Lorenzo. James Nevin, gardener for H. Bathin, took first prizes for orchid plants, schizanthus and clarkias. F. C. Burns was awarded a certificate of merit for the most meritorious exhibit in the show, consisting of Pres. Wilson roses. He also took first prizes for a bride's bouquet and table decoration, and second prizes for baskets of flowering plants and cut flowers. Richard Diener was awarded first prizes for carnations, thirty blooms, not less than three varieties, and vase of twelve pink carnations. He was given second prize for a vase of carnations, twenty-five blooms, one variety, on a new type which he has developed, and honorary mention for a seedling. George Tyler took first prizes for carnations. E. W. McLellan captured a first prize for roses, twenty-four blooms, of four varieties. J. Figore took first prize for twenty-five roses of one variety.

In sweet peas J. W. Schlosser was the only prize-winner, receiving the prize offered by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., of Philadelphia, for a collection of five varieties, twelve spikes each. Other winners were: R. Lohrmann, first prize for rhododendrons; N. Madsen, gardener for Mrs. L. Gerstle, first prize for spiræas; N. Vanderbilt, prize of H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, for delphiniums; J. Newman, first prize for irises; George Young, first prize for plants in hanging baskets, foliage or flowering; Mrs. George Young, cup of the San Rafael Improvement Club, for basket of cut flowers; F. Thatcher, second prize for bride's bouquet. P. H. Eckelmann was awarded a certificate of merit for a notable showing of ten pots of calceolarias.

Various Notes.

J. A. Axell, manager of the San Francisco store of the E. W. McLellan Co., plans to leave June 3 for his old home in Minnesota, accompanied by Mrs. Axell. He will be gone a month or two and during his absence his duties here will be looked after by Henry Avansino, formerly of the Fairmont Floral Co.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

PETER HOLLENBACH, Chicago, celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday anniversary May 26.

L. L. MAY, of St. Paul, who is in Mount Sinai hospital, Milwaukee, is reported as manifesting much cheerfulness. He has many visitors and his room always has flowers.

WHY has it been that most seed houses that cater to the local retail trade have had a banner season while the mail order season was not up to last year in most of the houses? Of course it is to be taken into consideration that a steadily larger part of the counter sales are plants, not seeds.

IN the Chicago district, where the greater part of America's onion sets now are grown, the acreage has not been reduced as a result of last year's bad season, but there is an unusual difference in the present condition of the crop, due to some pieces having been planted weeks earlier than others.

MAY has in a measure made up for the decrease in sales shown by the earlier months of the year in the records of most of the mail-order seed houses. One never looks for much in the way of mail orders after April, but this year the first half of May brought quite a little business, due to the season being two to three weeks late in many places.

M. AND W. H. LUGER, farmers living near Osseo, Minn., a suburb of Minneapolis, who, two years ago, achieved wide fame through their ability to raise on twenty acres an onion crop that sold for $9,000, report that their efforts in 1915 duplicated the former feat. The last of the crop was sold recently at slightly above $9,000. The net profit is estimated at about $7,000.

WHAT OF THE BULB MARKET?

As predicted in The Review some weeks ago, the British government has at length taken definite action to restrict the importation of bulbs into the United Kingdom. The Order in Council signed by the king May 10 also prohibits the importation of flower roots, plants, trees and shrubs, except under license from the Board of Trade.

The question at once arises as to the effect on the bulb market in the United States. Will the growers seek to unload their surplus on us? Especially in the matter of Holland bulbs, the United Kingdom normally has used more than twice as many as the United States. No figures are available showing the bulb exports of last year; the latest statistics are those of ante-bellum times and show the following as Holland's bulb exports for a normal season, in kilos, a kilo being approximately two and one-half pounds:

Exports to—	Kilos
Great Britain and Ireland	7,752,600
Germany and Austria	5,771,000
France, Belgium, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Greece and Turkey	2,141,200
Scandinavia and Denmark	2,107,600
Russia	882,500
Japan
United States	3,815,000
Other countries	281,600
Total	22,751,500

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming Giant Pansies

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and their unusual hardiness. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March, or as soon as the snow is off the ground many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for autumn planting for early bedding, and early cut flowers supplied in yellow, white, sky blue, velvety purple, blue and mixture. Seed ready July 1.

While the war therefore has closed the market for about one-fourth the normal production of Holland bulbs, for two years England has taken less than the normal proportion and the experience of those two seasons leads to the belief that, no matter how many unsold bulbs there may be in Holland, they will be withheld from this market except as called for at about regular prices. It will be recalled that in 1914, when British buyers canceled many orders, Holland houses dumped quantities of bulbs here, demoralizing this market and bringing upon all Holland exporters the necessity of adjusting accounts to appease customers here who had ordered in advance at usual prices. Last

TRUTH

There are more things told than are true, and there are more things true than are told. There are some things told that are untrue and misleading, and there are some things told that are true but misunderstood. The truth about Ward's lily bulbs is manifest to those who understand. When you bear in mind the AVERAGE (and it is the average in business that counts) you will easily recognize that Ward's lily bulbs are superior to most other brands. We do not say that every bulb is better than every bulb of another brand —but we do say that out of a thousand bulbs you will average better results under like conditions, than from most other brands. This is because the Horseshoe Brand fields in Japan, from which Ward's bulbs come, are positively the best there are anywhere in the World. The prices of these bulbs are moderate because of the volume of business done, and it will pay you to buy them. Your order, large or small, will be appreciated. Send for the prices.

Not how cheap but how good.

RALPH M. WARD & CO.
THE LILY HOUSE
71 Murray Street
NEW YORK

season there was a large surplus of bulbs in Holland, but they were not dumped on the American markets. The Hollanders seemed to have learned their lesson. This year, because of the good clean-up last season and the generally prosperous conditions in this country, the advance orders for Holland bulbs are rather heavier than usual; the country has been covered by the Dutch order-takers as a gardener uses a fine-toothed rake. The prices at which these orders have been taken, while they vary considerably, are not low. To dump the Britons' bulbs here in the autumn and break the market will result in buyers demanding the prices of delivery date on all advance orders; indeed, in many cases this already is agreed to.

In discussing this and other phases of the situation now presented, Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York, said May 29:

"We should think that the principal effect of the embargo on bulbs to England will be in Holland bulbs. It must be remembered, however, that there was war last year and that the English purchases at that time were much curtailed. The growers of all bulbs have shortened up their crops accordingly.

"The effect on the French market will be to reduce the price of Romans, no doubt, but we do not think it will affect Paper Whites, because England in normal times does not take any large quantity of this bulb, as the cut flowers are sent there direct from France.

"Relative to Japanese bulbs, we might say that the Japanese expected this embargo in England, and we were advised of the matter about four months ago from there. The freight rates between Japan and other countries have increased so considerably that at the present time the duty and freight are a large part of the cost of their product. Therefore, we do not think the growers could be induced to advance money sufficient to send their surpluses into this market at such a time."

IOWANS TO MEET.

The Iowa Seed Dealers' Association will hold its annual convention at Des Moines, June 7 and 8. June 7 will be the business day and the meeting promises to be more largely attended than any previous one. A splendid program is being arranged and the association is sending invitations to all Iowa seed dealers and shippers to come in and get acquainted and become members if they desire. The meetings will be held at the Savery hotel.

A. W. Eldridge, Sec'y.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

C. E. Kendel, speaking as secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, says he believes he is voicing the general sentiment of the members that no entertainment by the Chicago confreres is expected at the annual convention. Mr. Kendel is of the opinion that it will be decided to confine the place of the annual meetings to the north-central cities, taking in, by way of diversion, such resorts as Atlantic City and Niagara Falls. It is reasoned that a member located in a small town would be more readily attracted to the gathering when held in a large city. Indications are that the coming convention will be one of the most interesting ever held.

Zvolanek's Sweet Pea Seed

AWARDED GOLD MEDAL
San Francisco, 1915

Produced under the personal supervision of Anton C. Zvolanek, the world-famous expert, on his California sweet pea ranch. His exhibits were awarded first prize at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, at San Francisco, in 1915, and at the San Diego Exposition this year—evidence of their superiority among the vast exhibits on display.

AWARDED GOLD MEDAL

yet were left entirely and, though the outlook has been dismal, we hope the harvest will be a bountiful one," said the optimistic manager. George F. Siegel, of Erie's oldest seed house, endorsed this prediction. W. M.

ANOTHER POT OF GOLD?

For years Henry Field, of Shenandoah, Ia., has had a page in his catalogue headed "For the Rainbow Chaser," devoted to the things Mr. Field doesn't believe in, but can supply if you want them. For the benefit of "rainbow chasers" the U. S. Department of Agriculture states that it recently has been advised that a variety of wheat is being advertised under the name "Titanic." The assertion is made that it is a new variety of wheat discovered in England about four years ago and that a small quantity of seed was brought to the United States by one of the survivors of the ill-fated Titanic. The wheat is represented as having extremely high yielding power, the returns reaching as high as 7,000-fold. A photograph sent by a correspondent, says the department, shows a head identical in appearance with the widely exploited "Alaska" wheat. Five acres of the wheat are said to be growing in the state of Washington, and the seed, it is believed, will be offered at high prices after harvest. The department has no further or more definite information concerning this variety, but farmers and dealers are cautioned to be on their guard concerning this new exploitation.

CANNERS NEED MANY SEEDS.

The importance of the canners' trade with those seedsmen catering to this special demand is shown by the statement, issued last week, of the general results of the 1914 census of manufactures for the canning and drying of fruits and vegetables by the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce.

Returns were received from 3,199 establishments engaged in the industry in 1914, the products of which for that year were valued at $158,015,893. The products reported for 1909 were valued at $96,943,273. The number of establishments in 1914 exceeded the number reported for 1909 by 337, or 11.8 per cent; while the value increased by $61,072,620, or 63 per cent.

The value of canned vegetables increased from $53,307,791 in 1909 to $84,413,667 in 1914, or 58.3 per cent.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—A wholesale list of bulbs and plants; twenty-four pages, freely illustrated. The plants offered consist principally of such holiday stock as azaleas, poinsettias, rambler roses, begonias, spiræas and French hydrangeas.

McHutchison & Co., New York, N. Y., agents for Schaum & Van Tol, Boskoop, Holland.—A 40-page wholesale catalogue of azaleas, rhododendrons, Japanese maples, roses, peonies, magnolias, boxwoods and other decoratives, shrubs for forcing, small fruits and general nursery stock. An abridged special list, containing revised prices of many items of stock, has also been received.

L. Daehnfeldt, Ltd., Odense, Denmark.—Illustrated wholesale list of vegetable and flower seeds. The vegetables principally handled are cauliflower, cabbage, radish, beet, turnip, parsley and spinach. Among the specialties in flowers are the pansy, myosotis, carnation and cyclamen.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

It has turned out an excellent season for the nursery trade. There have been many difficulties, incident to labor shortage, freight embargoes, etc., but these have been counterbalanced by the long season, affording an opportunity to continue operations later than usual.

The public's knowledge of trees and shrubs will be greatly increased by the action of the management of Jackson park, Chicago, where all the plants are being labeled. A large number of evergreens recently have been planted on the wooded island, in addition to the collection of perennials, roses and native trees and shrubs for which the island long has been famous.

THE IMPORT SITUATION.

The war in Europe, says McHutchison & Co., prevents Holland firms shipping to Belgium or Great Britain and reduces exports to most of the other countries. This gives a fine opportunity to stock up, as the ocean freight rates from Holland remain quite reasonable. Prices recently quoted are the lowest import prices we ever quoted. There is practically no doubt that fall and spring shipments from Holland will be made, and with the same dispatch as last season, but all orders will be booked subject to arrival while the war lasts, as no one can say what is ahead of us. As there is little doubt that prices will be advanced sharply when peace is declared, we advise our customers to order at once on the present low quotations, saying whether they wish fall or spring shipment.

MINNESOTA LAW ELUCIDATED.

An erroneous idea exists among some Minnesota nurserymen and florists that they are required by the Minnesota law to purchase their stock from Minnesota nurseries and not from nurseries or dealers in other states. This impression is epitomized by the prominently displayed paragraph on the letterhead of a Minnesota nurseryman, reading:

"Nurserymen have to furnish their customers with nursery stock from a bona fide inspected Minnesota nursery, according to a law passed by the state legislature at the 1913 session."

If this were true, the provision would clearly be unconstitutional, as a discrimination against stock grown in other states. The Minnesota legislature in 1915 amended the law of 1913, so that the Minnesota florist may sell his stock freely, by filing an affidavit that he will buy and sell only stock duly inspected by an official state inspector—not necessarily a Minnesota inspector—and filing with the state entomologist a list of all sources of stock.

IMPORTS VIA ROTTERDAM.

More than 2,000 cases of horticultural supplies arrived last week at New York on the Rotterdam steamers Nieuw Amsterdam and Beukelsdyk. The sailings from Rotterdam this spring have been few and far between, so that the trade has an unusually large quantity of stock on each boat that clears. The record of last week's boats was as follows, according to manifests at the New York customhouse:

American Express Co., 1,146 bags seed.
American Shipping Co., 6 cases plants.
Downing & Co., 48 cases trees.
J. W. Hampton, Jr., & Co., 3 cases bulbs.
O. G. Hempstead & Son, 2 cases plants.
International Forwarding Co., 47 cases plants.
P. C. Kuyper & Co., 38 cases plants; 20 cases shrubs.
R. F. Lang, 7 cases bulbs.
H. Langeler, 58 cases plants.
Lunham & Moore, 19 cases shrubs; 33 cases trees.
McHutchison & Co., 204 cases plants; 376 cases trees.

Inspection before reshipment is extremely difficult and the condition of the stock will not be accurately known until it reaches its destination, but it is feared much of the Belgian stock and some of the Holland goods will not be any more satisfactory than in the case of other late shipments this season.

THE LEAF BLISTER MITE.

Red or green blister-like spots appearing in the early spring on the foliage of the apple and pear are usually due to the leaf blister mite. This is not an insect, but a small animal invisible to the unaided eye, which attacks standard varieties of pear and apple trees and often inflicts serious damage. Where trees are seriously infested, the premature fall of both fruit and leaves may result. In such cases a special application of lime-sulphur wash or other spray may be necessary. Ordinarily, however, the regular orchard spraying is sufficient to control the mite. Badly infested branches of the pear trees may be cut off and burned. Care should be taken not to confuse the work of the mite with the leaf-spot disease or the results of heavy spraying.

The leaf blister mite passes the winter beneath the bud scales. There it waits for the opening of the buds and attacks the young leaves as soon as they push out in the spring. The tiny animals bore small holes from the under side of the leaves into the interior, where they lay their eggs. This causes the small, pimple-like gall on the upper surface of the leaves. The spots later increase in size, sometimes to one-eighth of an inch, and on the pear tree are red and often brilliantly colored as they grow. In the case of the apple, the eruptions lack the more brilliant coloring and are found more along the margin of the leaf. In both cases the spots finally turn brown or black, and if the pest is abundant the leaves become ruptured and wrinkled.

More than 250 varieties of apples are attacked by the mite, injury being especially severe on some well known commercial sorts, such as the Ben Davis, the King, Baldwin, Rhode Island Greening and the Williams Favorite.

Where orchards are seriously infested, as has been noted in New York, lime-sulphur washes give excellent results. They avoid the injurious effects upon fruit buds which sometimes result from the use of oil sprays. The wash should be applied thoroughly, coating the twigs and branches.

A standard solution of kerosene emulsion also may be used. The stock solution should be diluted with five parts of water for spraying purposes. One application should be given in the late fall, as soon as most of the leaves have fallen, and another in the following spring, before the trees put out foliage. If it is possible to give only one treatment, the sprays should be used in the fall. At this time many of the mites have not yet gone to the bud scales, but occur in the down covering the young wood, and hence are more easily killed.

Describing the leaf blister mite, showing how it may be recognized and giving methods for its control, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a new farmers' bulletin, No. 722, entitled "The Leaf Blister Mite of Pear and Apple." This may be had upon request.

Boxwood Pyramid

HILL'S CHOICE BOXWOODS and OTHER DECORATIVE STOCK, Etc.

There are different qualities of Boxwoods just as there are different qualities of roses, carnations, silks, calicoes, etc. Do not be fooled by low prices; there is always plenty of cheap or inferior stock on the market to be had almost for the asking, but quality Boxwoods and Bay Trees, grown properly and handled right, always command a fair price. Hill Boxwoods and Bay Trees are the business building kind. You will not be disappointed. They are the cream of especially selected stocks, grown for high-class trade. Satisfaction guaranteed. When you want "quality" Boxwoods, Bay Trees and other decorative stock, come to Hill's. Large and complete stock always on hand. For convenience of customers, Boxwoods are offered both with and without tubs. The tubs are neat in appearance, new, sound and substantial, painted green. In no case are old or second-hand tubs used.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held in the Firemen's hall, May 24. President Walker occupied the chair. The exhibits for the evening were numerous and the hall had the appearance of a spring flower garden. James Duthie had a table of tulips that made the members sit up and take notice. J. Robinson showed a vase of well grown roses, of which he spoke later. The society's prizes were well competed for, J. Robinson winning with a vase of flowering shrubs and James Duckham with twelve Darwin tulips. The special prize of $5 for carnations was won by Thomas Moore. Many special and honorable mentions were given those who entered high-grade stock.

The secretary read several letters offering prizes to exhibitors at the monthly meetings. The Alphano Humus Co. posted a silver cup valued at $100 for a collection of twenty-four vegetables, to be won twice in succession or three times before becoming the property of the winner, Humus to be used in the culture of the vegetables. James Duthie gave an interesting talk on how he grew tulips and read an essay furnished the society by the National Association of Gardeners. On account of the backward season, it was voted to postpone the show to June 22, instead of June 13, as formerly announced. It was moved and seconded that the society affiliate with the American Dahlia Society. This was followed by a lengthy discussion on the ways and means of destroying the tent caterpillar.

Delphiniums, cauliflower and strawberries will be exhibited at the June meeting. J. T. Ingram, Sec'y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The wholesale market was well stocked with all kinds of flowers last week and a favorable amount of business was done. The weather was unsettled, but held quite warm. A great deal of work in filling porch boxes and baskets was called for in preparing for Decoration day. Large quantities of bedding stock have been disposed of. The usual call for magnolia leaf wreaths, with artificial decorations, was there and it was somewhat larger than usual. Several good-sized decorations have called for much stock.

Outdoor-grown valley is arriving in large quantities and moves freely. Good outdoor irises arrive daily and sell well. Callas and Easter lilies move nicely. Roses are plentiful, Ward, Sunburst, Russell, Taft and Milady being the best sellers. Sweet peas move easily, but their stems are shortening. Lilacs are overplentiful. Pink and yellow snapdragons are in fine shape and sell finely. A large quantity of yellow and white daisies arrives daily and moves freely. Orchids and gardenias do not move so freely as they should. The local peony crop is backward and only a few are available. Tulips and narcissi are rapidly coming to an end. Carnations have had a splendid season and they continue to hold up well. Greens are more than plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Rochester Floral Co. had a dainty window display for the week end. It was composed of vases and bowls filled with outdoor valley and cornflowers.

Lilac day was observed at Highland park May 28. The weather was not at its best, but thousands visited the display, which consisted of more than 400 varieties.

Fred Schlegel's Sons report business as being good. They are doing a big business in bedding stock. H. J. H.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The remarkably cool weather has continued and business in general is up to the average. This city is situated too far south for the inhabitants to observe Memorial day as generally as is done in the north, but nevertheless the stock of cut flowers cleaned up fairly well. Prices were nothing unusual. Peonies formed the bulk of cut flowers during the latter half of last week and there were enough for all demands. Carnations have been fairly plentiful and the demand rather light, even at low prices. Roses have decreased in supply and the demand has gone down. In the street market, outdoor roses, peonies, daisies and other outdoor flowers are being sold, and no doubt cut in on the sales of indoor stock to a certain extent.

Blooming plants continue in good demand, with geraniums forming the bulk of the supply.

Various Notes.

Stevenson Bros. have installed a new delivery truck for service between this city and their Towson greenhouses.

Lohr & Fritze have been cutting a fine crop of Double White Killarney roses.

Charles Siegwart has been marketing an excellent crop of carnations. He has a fine lot of cattleyas coming on for next season and recently received several cases of new plants, which arrived in good condition.

The Broadway Florists recently installed a new light truck for delivery purposes.

Henry Lehr, who has been ill since early winter, has left the hospital and is for the present living with his sister at 19 East Twenty-first street. He still is confined to his bed and his friends' visits are greatly appreciated, as he was an active man until the present illness befell him and his confinement is irksome.

George Morrison, who was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of the Maryland Week show, announces the following as members of the committee: George Black, F. C. Bauer, James Boone, William F. Ekas, William J. Johnston and R. A. Vincent. The preliminary schedule has been issued, but many valuable premiums will be added to those already offered.

The first amateur rose show will be held in the Florists' Exchange hall June 5, under the auspices of the Woman's Civic League and the local Florists' Club. It is the duty of everyone in the trade to boost this affair and to help make it the success it should be. W. F. E.

The Market.

The extremely hot weather last week was hard on the greenhouse stock, but brought out the outdoor flowers in fine shape for Memorial day. There are plenty of local peonies now on the market, besides a great variety of other outdoor flowers.

Business last week was good and consisted mostly of sales of plants and wreaths for Memorial day, while numerous cut flower orders were taken for delivery on Monday. Blooming plants have sold exceptionally well in the flower stores. The greenhouse men have been rushed with orders for window boxes, hanging baskets and bedding plants for home grounds and for cemetery planting.

Various Notes.

The Doswell Floral Co. made a handsome casket cover of roses last week for the funeral of a prominent society woman. It has also been busy with decorations and had an attractive window decoration for Memorial day.

Many of the downtown flower stores have special Memorial day windows, which attracted the passer-by and lured him inside. Ed. Hauswirth had a large American flag made of red, white and blue immortelles as a central figure in his window, around which were blooming plants in variety.

A. J. Lanternier has been showing some fine begonias and handsome vases of Shawyer roses from the Walton avenue greenhouses.

The Flick Floral Co. featured magnolia wreaths for Memorial day and sold a large number.

The S. H. Knox 5 and 10-cent store held a sale on small palms in 3-inch and 4-inch pots for 10 cents each May 27.

The Fort Wayne Flower Shop held a special sale of roses May 28 for 35 cents per dozen and sold a large quantity. R. F.

Carthage, Mo.—Stephen Hyde has begun the erection of a house 84x500 feet, which amounts to almost a whole acre. The house will be devoted to lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers. The building will cost about $12,000.

SNAPDRAGON POINTERS

To be most successful it is better to be governed by tested rules. We give a few pointers regarding Snapdragon, taken from our experimental records:

Sow seed of our genuine Silver Pink Snapdragon before June 15; follow directions on topping and benching, setting the plants 12x15. The first crop of blooms will come in December, which should be cut, leaving all other growth. The myriads of shoots left should begin flowering in February and continue to flower until June. There should be from 30 to 50 shoots on each plant. If your trade calls for heavy spikes, thin them out. If for medium spikes, let all remain.

So much for the greatest and most productive Snapdragon in existence. Treatment for other varieties will be about the same, except they can be planted closer.

Snapdragon is our one business. No better seeds can be produced. Each variety grown for seed is kept under glass in separate houses. We offer pure seed as follows: Our original Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of Nelrose, Phelps' White, Yellow, Garnet, Buxton and fancy mixed, at 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. Free cultural directions. All orders cash.

We have a few thousand seedling plants of Silver Pink at $5.00 per 100.

Greenhouse Heating.

THREE FLOWS PREFERABLE.

I have a greenhouse 34x104, six feet high to the eaves and fourteen feet to the ridge. The south wall contains one row of 18-inch glass. Aside from that, the sides are covered with ship-lap and lined with heavy tarred paper. About one-third of the east end is glass; the rest of it is lined like the sides. The boiler room and potting shed are at the west end of the house. It will be heated with hot water and I want a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. I should like to have the flows on each side. What size of pipe and how many returns will be needed? There will be one raised bench at the south side; the others will be solid beds. I may build another house, 18x50, constructed the same as the larger house and adjoining it on the north side. It will contain three raised benches. How should it be piped to maintain the same temperature? What radiation should the boiler have? D. W. L.—Ind.

For piping the larger house we would use a 4-inch flow pipe on each plate, with eighteen 2-inch returns on the side walls and under the raised bench, if all of the flows are to be on the walls. We would prefer, however, to place a 3-inch flow on each plate and run a 2½-inch flow four or five feet below the ridge. Six returns should then be connected with each flow pipe, those from the overhead flow being placed in the walks or on the sides of the beds. For the house 18x50 we would use a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each plate and five 2-inch returns on each wall, underneath. To heat the two houses, we would use a boiler rated for about 3,000 square feet of hot water radiation.

THE INQUIRY IS INDEFINITE.

I am building a greenhouse 30x300 and would appreciate a little advice. What will be the necessary horsepower of a boiler to heat this house, using high-pressure steam? What is the best method of piping the house for steam?

B. L. J.—Conn.

The temperature desired is not stated, but for an average of 60 degrees, when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero, a boiler with a rating of thirty to thirty-five horsepower would answer. In case there is a probability that a second house of the same size will be erected, we would suggest that a boiler of fifty horsepower be installed, to take care of both houses. While used for one house, the cost of fuel with the larger boiler would be but little if any more, and might be less in extremely severe weather.

In order to give any really definite suggestions regarding the piping of a greenhouse, one should not only know what temperature is desired at night in the coldest weather, but the duration and intensity of the cold spells should be considered, and the extent to which the house is exposed to high winds. The amount of glass in the roof, sides and ends of the house should be used as the basis for determining the amount of radiation, and if there is a great deal of wooden or other exposed wall surface, it should also be taken into account. In order to make suggestions for the location and arrangement of the heating pipes, it is important that data be at hand relating to the construction of the house, stating whether beds or benches are to be used and mentioning the location of the boiler, doors, etc., as well as the purposes for which the house is to be used.

It will be seen, therefore, that no precise suggestions can be based upon the information furnished, but under average conditions, in a well built house which does not have more than thirty inches of glass in each of the side walls, it should be possible to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees with one 2½-inch flow pipe on each wall, running through to the farther end of the house, with seven 1¼-inch returns on each side underneath. If 50 to 53 degrees will answer, one return might be omitted on each side, unless it is considerably exposed. For 65 degrees a similar increase in the number of returns should be made. If there is more or less than thirty inches of glass in the walls, one return should be added, or omitted, for each thirty inches of glass in the cross-section of the house.

In case raised benches are used and crops are grown for which bottom heat is desired, we would advise the use of a third flow pipe, four or five feet below the ridge. We would then use four 1¼-inch returns on each wall, or under the side benches, and would distribute five returns under the other benches, connected at the farther end of the house with the overhead flow pipe.

USING 4-INCH BOILER TUBES.

We have the material ready to build two connected greenhouses, each 29x143, with 6-foot posts and a height of thirteen and one-half feet to the ridge. The glass used will be 16x24 inches. There will be two feet of glass in the sides. The service house will cover all of the north end. The south end will be all glass, with the exception of the four feet of lower wall. There will be only two benches in each house, placed next to the outer walls and at each side of the center row of posts. The houses will be heated with hot water. The returns will be under the benches. The boilers will be in a pit and the highest point of the heating system will be at the boiler end of the houses.

According to our plan, three 4-inch boiler tubes will be used as flows in each house, with a gradual drop to the farther end of the houses. Nine returns will be used in each house, five under the outer bench and four under the inner bench. In connecting the flows and returns, 1½-inch gate valves will be used. Will the piping described be sufficient to heat these greenhouses to a temperature of 60 degrees when the outdoor temperature is 15 degrees below zero? What should be the capacity of the boiler?

H. J. A. C.—O.

From the foregoing letter, it is evident that it is proposed to use three 4-inch boiler tubes as flow pipes in each of the houses, as well as nine returns, but the size of the return pipes is not stated. If they are to be 4-inch, they will furnish the needed amount of radiation. We would suggest the use of a boiler having a rating of 5,000 square feet of hot water radiation, to heat the two houses.

From the size of the gate valves mentioned, it would appear that 1½-inch pipes are to be used for connecting the flows and returns. Since each of the returns provides nearly 200 square feet of radiation, we would prefer to use 2-inch pipes for this purpose. The use of the boiler tubes as proposed will give good results if 2-inch connections are used.

This grapery was erected by us for Mrs. George Wilson of Philadelphia, on her estate at Great Neck—one of fashionable Long Island's most prominent show places.

The JACOBS full iron frame and patented cast iron eaves and sills, together with the removable gutter and leader, make this greenhouse just as perfect in every practical detail as any of the larger structures owned by professional growers.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¾ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

The Market.

The man who specializes in filling urns and goes after cemetery work found himself busy last week. The demand for cheaper grades of flowers was large, but the largest percentage of returns was from plants, particularly from the sales of geraniums, dracænas and vincas.

Beauties were of good quality and in large demand. Other roses were sufficient for the demand. Carnations were in heavy demand, the whites clearing nicely with the others. Peonies and lilacs seemed to be the features of the market, selling at $8 to $10 per hundred. Sweet peas, too, experienced a great demand. The greenhouse valley is nearly done for, but the outdoor stock is rather plentiful and sells at reduced figures. Cattleyas are scarce and in large demand. Violets are of the past for this season.

Irises are clearing daily and gladioli are selling easily. Miscellaneous stock, such as pansies, myosotis, snapdragons and daisies, acted as a relief during the scarcity of carnations. The sales of Narcissus poeticus are rather slow. The supply and demand of all kinds of greens have been about equal to the receipts and sales of cut flowers.

Various Notes.

W. J. Palmer & Son last week experienced considerable difficulty in securing Dorothy Perkins roses. It seems to be too late for this variety indoors and too early for those outdoors. Mark Palmer was at Ithaca last week.

A picturesque window was seen at S. A. Anderson's last week. In the center was a small pond with water lilies, with prettily trimmed birch baskets on the banks.

William Legg was on the jump last week filling orders for cemetery work.

Barney Meyers, of Lancaster, is sending in some extra fine Darwin tulips, which find a ready market.

The Wm. F. Kasting Co. has completed the installation of a new refrigerator, which greatly enhances the appearance of the establishment.

Thorough In Every Particular

The three things of utmost importance after signing the contract to build a greenhouse, are Quality, Speed and Economy. This is a basic truth and absolutely essential to the success of any greenhouse building operation.

Our organization is letter-perfect down to the minutest detail.

Along with many other prominent Metropolitan Greenhouse owners, Mr. Martin Metzner, for whom we built the above greenhouse on his estate at Lake Ronkonkoma, Long Island, will verify our claim that we are capably equipped to build satisfactorily, rapidly and economically.

Bay State Nurseries Use Skinner System for Their Rhododendron Stock

THIS is one of the few nurseries that import their Rhododendron stock and then acclimate it in their own nurseries before selling. If it can stand the rigors of their New England climate, it will thrive practically anywhere.

Early this spring, when talking with Mr. Wyman, the owner of the Nursery, he said that "the two greatest elements in their Rhododendron success were: semi-shady location, and plenty of water supplied just the right way by the Skinner System.

"Our general seedling fields are all equipped with it.

"When you have the water problem in your control," further said Mr. Wyman, "you control the most vital of all your growing problems."

The Market.

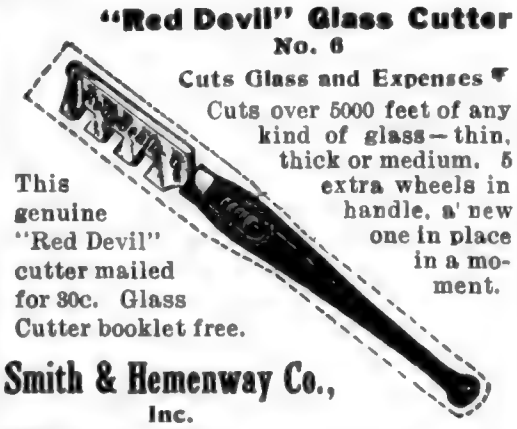
The market apparently will have a heavy supply for Decoration day. Besides the regular shipments, considerable stock has been unloaded here, which has caused a crowding of stock and some reduction in prices.

Roses are in extremely heavy supply, but the warm weather has seriously affected their quality. Carnations are plentiful. The better ones have met with a ready sale. Easter lilies are abundant, as well as peonies. Sweet peas continue plentiful and there are some fine outdoor blooms available. Cape jasmines are in a glut and do not sell well. Gladioli are excellent and move readily. Valley is rather scarce. Other offerings include orchids, irises, cornflowers, snapdragons, callas, stocks, feverfew and narcissi. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

P. J. Olinger has started to rebuild the house, barn and packing shed recently destroyed by fire on his range at Newcastle, Ind.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving some fancy varieties of irises from J. A. Peterson & Sons.



L. H. Kyrk has been offering splendid sweet williams from the range of George Klotter.

Recent visitors were Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., of New York; Frank Friedley, of Cleveland; J. T. Herdigen, of Aurora, Ind.; Fred Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Society Tulip Show.

The tulip show given by the Nassau County Horticultural Society on the evening of May 19, at Glen Cove, N. Y., brought forth a magnificent display of these popular flowers. Although Darwin tulips were in the majority, such types as cottage, breeder and picotee were well represented. Almost every class was keenly contested and the judges, James Bell, George Wilson and James Duthie, had a rather difficult task in making their decisions. John F. Johnstone, Ernest Westlake and Henry Gaut were the principal prize-winners.

The Awards.

Darwin, twelve varieties, six blooms of each—John Johnstone, gardener for George D. Pratt, first; Ernest Westlake, gardener for William H. Porter, second.

Darwin, six varieties, six blooms of each—John Johnstone, first; Ernest Westlake, second.

Darwin, nine mauve—Henry Gaut, first; Ernest Westlake, second.

Darwin, nine red—John Johnstone, first; Ernest Westlake, second.

Darwin, nine any other color—Henry Gaut, first; John Johnstone, second.

Darwin, nine blooms, mixed colors—John Johnstone, first; Harry Goodband, gardener for S. D. Brewster, second.

Breeder tulips, six varieties, six blooms of each—Ernest Westlake, first; John Johnstone, second.

Breeder, nine blooms of one variety—Ernest Westlake, first; Frank O. Johnson, gardener for Harold I. Pratt, second.

Breeder, twelve blooms, mixed colors—Ernest Westlake, first; John Johnstone, second.

Cottage tulips, three varieties, six blooms of each—Henry Gaut, first; John Johnstone, second.

Picotee tulips, twelve blooms, Henry Gaut, first.

Gladioli, one vase—John W. Everitt, gardener for John J. Pratt, first; Henry Gaut, second.

Hydrangea, not more than 6-inch—Robert Jones, gardener for Percy Chubb, first.

Hydrangea, not less than 6-inch—Robert Jones, first.

Cultural certificates were awarded to John Johnstone for a vase of salpiglossis and two plants of clarkia, and an honorable mention for a specimen plant of gypsophila. Harry Goodband was given a cultural certificate for gladioli and special mention for three vases of myosotis.

The Market.

Memorial day did not come up to expectations. When advance quotations were to be made, conditions seemed to indicate that there would be an acute shortage of stock, especially carnations. But the warm weather, which came about a week before the holiday, brought on the stock to such an extent that prices broke and carnations were sufficiently plentiful to be sold at really reasonable figures. The demand for stock was large; in fact, it seemed larger than last year. All orders were taken care of, but the quality of stock in general was not so good as it would have been had the weather remained cooler.

Sweet peas arrived in large quantities and were moved only at low prices. Peonies did not come up to the standard this year. Though large numbers of them were sold, the business in this line was not entirely satisfactory. Outdoor tulips cut a big figure in the market and some exceptionally fine Darwins were to be had. The good stock moved readily, but the poorer grade had to be thrown out, as it could not be sold at any price. Roses were in big demand and the supply was just as big. Large orders were well taken care of and the stock was in fairly good shape. Plant orders were extremely heavy and enormous quantities were moved. The sale of spring stock goes merrily on and will probably continue for several weeks yet. H. J. S.

Hutchinson, Kan.—Fay Smith and Leonard Marston, who last fall purchased the business of Charles Stamm, have dissolved partnership, Mr. Marston retiring. Mr. Smith will continue the business at the present location. Cecil Wildin has charge of the greenhouses.

He is opposed to the municipal union depot plan and does not favor bond issues for more park ground unless it is for playgrounds for children.

TYPES OF FLORISTS' SPRAYERS.

Bucket Pump and Knapsack.

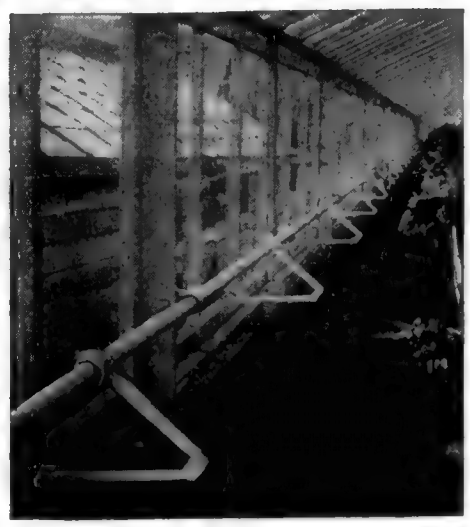
Due to the arrangement of benches in the greenhouse, spray pumps must necessarily be small, easily handled and not too cumbersome. In selecting one of these pumps, care should be taken to purchase only machines which are durable and simple, and which have an air chamber large enough to insure a steady spray. The types of pumps suitable for greenhouse spraying are briefly mentioned below:

The bucket pump is the simplest one made and can be handled easily by one man. The fact that it may be used in any ordinary bucket gives it an advantage over some other outfits. By means of a foot rest, which extends over the side of the bucket, the pump can be held firmly. This type of pump will do well where a small, convenient pump is needed.

The knapsack sprayer is a portable type of bucket pump and consists of a tank, with straps so attached that it can be carried on the back, like a knapsack. The handle is adjusted so that it can be operated in front of the carrier. This, also, is a one-man sprayer, and, although rather tedious to operate, is convenient for spraying plants on the bench.

Compressed Air Sprayers.

In the compressed air sprayer the tank is partly filled with the liquid, closed, and air pumped in. This increases the pressure on the liquid, which is forced out through a nozzle in the form of a fine spray. Some types of these pumps are now made which will empty the reservoir with one charge, and so can be carried like a knapsack sprayer. Usually these sprayers are inconvenient and heavy to carry.



The wheel sprayer consists of a tank and pump fitted into a tubular iron frame with a wheel, so as to be easily moved about like a wheelbarrow. The pump proper has a good-sized air chamber and a good mixer. This is the most convenient sprayer for greenhouse purposes where much spraying is done. It is narrow enough to be wheeled between the benches, is convenient to use and gives a good pressure.

VENTILATION

YOU know what a bother it is to have the ventilation arms on the sidewalks, sticking way out into them.

To run up against one of them with your arm, when in a hurry, certainly makes a man feel like swearing. If that's the only thing that makes you swear, you can promptly swear off swearing, because we have a special Jack Knife Vent Arm that folds up out of the way almost like the blade of a knife.

Tell-tale, that tells you exact distance ridge sash is open.

The illustration at the left is the swear-at kind. The right-hand one, the no-swear arms. We'll put them on your next house, or sell them to you separately.

For further facts about our ventilation apparatus, see pages 94 to 99 in our Supply Book.

You know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

FLOWERS AND FIGURES

By F. H. HOSSICK

Perhaps no one cause contributes more to financial success than a good system of accounts, showing distinctly the condition of the firm's affairs, with all sources of gain and loss. The system described in this article was intended for a large business, but embodies ideas that are adaptable to a business of any size.

BETWEEN flowers and figures there is, figuratively, a wide gulf, but that gulf must be spanned, for flowers must be figured. Business principles must dominate the business of a florist, surely. He must figure flowers as accurately as the contractor figures cubic yards of concrete or the number of board feet in lumber. And those who have not learned this lesson have not found flower growing profitable. Long ago the three Good brothers, of Springfield, O., learned this important thing about their business, for they have been florists all their lives. Their experience in solving unusually complex accounting problems will interest any concern that has a great deal of bookkeeping to do.

In a Modern Way.

Recognizing long ago that it paid to do things in the most modern way, these florists have developed their office work as the business grew, until now it is a model of efficiency. By letting modern office equipment do everything that could be done in that way better, the proprietors have not only reduced the running expenses of their office from month to month, but have lightened the burden of figures and routine with respect to the office employees.

One of the most important things in the business of selling flowers is that the money received be properly credited and outgoing consignments properly charged. This is especially true with the Good & Recse Co., for the company does both wholesale and retail business in a large way, many consignments going to the most distant parts of the world. Starting with this part of the office routine, the accounting work is carried on by logical steps up to a final conclusion in the trial balance.

When the Good & Reese people get an order, they make a memorandum of it on a yellow debit ticket about the size and shape of a No. 10 envelope. The amount of the charge, the name of the consignee, the date and other information are noted on this memorandum, and the memorandum is passed to the bookkeeper, who posts the proper information to the ledger.

The Office Building of Good & Reese Co.

When cash or other credit comes to the office, a notation is made on a white memorandum slip, and from this the bookkeeper posts directly to the credit side of the customers' ledger. Near the close of the day, after invoices have all been made out and credits practically all accumulated, the bookkeeper starts posting to the ledger. This part of the work is one of the most important and one of the most valuable of the office practices in respect to time-saving.

The ledger page is ruled for charges, balance, date and credit on both the right and left halves. Thus the bookkeeper may utilize the full capacity of a ledger sheet 11x11 inches.

Taking a ledger page from the post binder, the operator posts charges and credits by separate runs on an adding machine. Dates are taken care of by date keys on the machine.

The Ledger's Testimony.

While debits and credits are being posted, the amounts are accumulating in the machine, so that when the posting is finished a total of both charges and credits may be obtained from the adding machine. By checking the total of charges posted against a predetermined total of invoices, also figured on the machine, the bookkeeper may prove his debit postings for the day.

To get a proof of credit postings, the operator checks the total of credit postings against a list of credits made by the adding machine on a special form in duplicate. In other words, this is a summary of cash receipts.

In order to get greater speed in making out invoices, this work also is done on the adding machine. The invoice blank is dropped into the machine the same as the ledger page, and date, folio and amount are printed, so that an invoice bearing a number of items may be totaled with every assurance that the final figure is correct.

A Special Form to List the Day's Receipts of Cash.

A running total is carried by taking a subtotal from the machine. The grand total at the foot of the last column is a total of the day's credits. Against this figure the total credit postings, as shown in the adding wheels when all the day's credits have been posted, are checked for proof.

1,000 accounts on their books, it may be seen what it means at the end of a month to foot up the ledgers and draw up a trial balance, to say nothing about getting out statements. When it comes to making out statements, probably the biggest saving of all is effected.

Statements Out Early.

Although the old system of making out statements and taking off the trial balance was founded on the same general principles as the present method, it consumed a great deal more time because of the slowness of the pen and ink method. Seldom did the statements go out before the third of the new month, and sometimes as late as the fifth. Since they have been made on the machine, they have not gone out later than the first in a single instance.

From 350 to 500 statements are sent out each month. They are headed up by a stenographer, who writes in the names and addresses on a typewriter in leisure time during the month, so that when the rush comes on, the statements are all ready for posting.

No matter whether the items on the statement are all debits or both debits and credits, the final figure or balance is transferred to the lower counter of the adding machine, where it is stored along with balances from other customers' statements. When the operator has all the statements made out, he gets a grand total of all the individual statement balances that were previously transferred to the lower counter.

No Trouble with Trial Balance.

In this way, the operator's trial balance is ready for him as soon as his statements have been made out, and there never is any trouble about getting the trial balance to come out right.

The adding machine is also used to make out the company's bank deposit slips. By inserting a sheet of carbon paper between the forms, a duplicate of the original may be made out and kept in the office for reference.

The Good & Reese Co. claims to lead the world in the handling of roses. In the culture of peonies the concern ranks among the largest in the United States, and also specializes in the dahlia, phlox and iris. The greenhouses are under 200,000 square feet of glass. Besides disposing of its own stock, the company takes the entire output of five florists outside of Springfield. Sales last year ran up into millions. Although the stock of roses then was several hundred thousands more than had ever been grown before, the product was sold out early and orders for at least three-quarters of a million roses could not be filled.

Each day the operator posts debits and credits, at separate runs, just below the last posting of the previous day, and the machine carries the totals in the adding wheels. When the day's work is finished, the operator has a total of charge or credit posting for taking off a proof.

The company also handles an extensive mail order business. Half a million catalogues are issued each season, and shipped to all parts of the world except countries where plants are prohibited.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Montgomery, Ala.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the United States District court by H. E. Mitting. His liabilities aggregate $6,729.11, with assets consisting of stock in trade and a crop of flowers on rented land. He lists $242.90 worth of open accounts. Mr. Mitting conducted the business under the name of Morningview Floral Co., on South Perry street.

Lawrence, Kan.—The affairs of the Ince Nursery Co., which are now in process of adjustment, indicate that the stockholders will lose heavily. The assets are estimated at $6,000 and there is an indebtedness of $19,000 against the concern, according to those interested in the business. In 1911 the company declared thirteen per cent on a $20,000 valuation. It was capitalized for $10,000 common and $10,000 preferred stock, the latter bearing seven per cent interest. At this time, it is said, all indebtedness was paid and there was some money in the treasury. In the four years that followed, however, the company not only spent all its receipts but also expended $19,000 of borrowed money. One of the officers of the embarrassed company said that the smash of the cotton market and the bad times that followed were principally responsible for the present state of affairs.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

FLORISTS ENJOIN CEMETERY.

Declaring that the Wyuka cemetery and its trustees can undersell them, the C. H. Frey Co., Frey & Frey, the Landscape Nurseries Co., Hiltner Bros. and C. B. Keller, florists of Lincoln, Neb., have secured a temporary restraining order prohibiting the cemetery and its trustees from selling flowers until after the hearing June 28.

The plaintiffs declare that the state of Nebraska gave the cemetery ground for the benefit of the people, but that the trustees have devoted a portion of the grounds to greenhouses and have gone into the florists' business on a large scale. It is asserted that because of the profit from lots, and the large number of people who daily visit the cemetery, the city florists cannot fairly compete with the cemetery.

The cemetery's business is growing, the plaintiffs declare, and they say they are informed and believe that more greenhouses and other equipment are to be installed. The court will hear the application for a permanent injunction, June 28.

AN IMPORTANT PRECEDENT.

The New Jersey Supreme court handed down a decision the other day supporting the right of a florist to cancel a contract to take advertising post cards in monthly installments, when the seller broke an agreement not to sell the cards to anyone else in the trade in the same town.

Notwithstanding the defendant's breach of his contract to take more cards, because similar ones had been sold to a rival florist, in violation of the agreement, the plaintiff shipped additional installments, which the defendant refused to receive. Thereupon the plaintiff brought suit to recover for the cards. The trial court refused to sustain the defendant's defense, because the cards sold the two florists were not identical in appearance, but the higher court reversed the judgment, holding that the seller of the cards broke his agreement by selling similar cards to a competing florist. The court said:

"The meaning of the agreement was that the plaintiff should not supply cards substantially similar in type and make-up to anyone else within the prohibited territory. The most cursory inspection makes it perfectly evident that the similarity was so close as almost to amount to identity." S.

EQUALITY IN WATER RATES.

Basing its decision on the legal principle that a water company engaged in supplying water to the public in a town or city, or outlying districts, is bound to afford all consumers who are similarly situated the same service at the same rates, the Supreme court of Alabama holds in the case of Brown vs. Birmingham Waterworks Co., 67 Southern Reporter 613, that a consumer cannot enforce a contract against a water company if he would thereby derive an unfair advantage over other persons. The court declares that equality of rates is more important to the public than low rates.

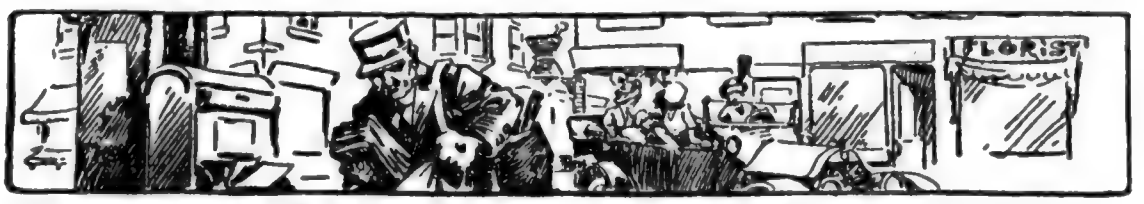
Plaintiff and a few other consumers in Birmingham were given contracts calling for water service on a metered basis, whereas consumers generally in the same class were required to pay a less favorable flat rate. The company repudiated the contract and, on plaintiff refusing to abide by the general rate, discontinued service. Suit was brought to enforce compliance with the meter contract, but on the ground above stated the Supreme court denied right to relief.

In short, this decision is authority for saying that florists and nurserymen, as well as consumers in general, are entitled to receive water service without unreasonable discrimination, and if one of them holds a contract which is more favorable than that given other consumers of water similarly situated, the courts will not enforce it. This does not mean, of course, that rates may not be graduated according to average consumption, for the validity of graduated rates is well recognized by all the courts. S.

PRIMULA POISONING.

Several subscribers having recently written as to having been poisoned by handling Primula obconica, we reprint herewith notes as to remedies which have been published when the question has previously been under discussion:

One reader writes: "As to a remedy for poisoning by Primula obconica, would say I have been poisoned several times. I used Luytie's Pinus ointment as a local application and sulphur and cream of tartar to purify the blood. I used one-third cream of tartar and two-thirds sulphur, mixed well. Dose, one teaspoonful every morning in milk. Also take good nourishment. I have never known it to fail."



Another says: "Tell the sufferer to try good, thick, sweet cream, well and frequently rubbed on as a lotion. This has with us proved a sovereign remedy."

A Connecticut reader writes: "It seems to me that the action of Primula obconica poisoning is similar to that of the poison ivy. The cure in both cases, as far as my experience goes, is a free application of tincture of bloodroot. Apply the tincture with a sponge or clean cloth to the parts affected. I have known of several cures by this tincture where the poisoning has been caused by either the ivy or the primula."

"A few applications of peroxide of hydrogen gave me relief," writes a Pennsylvanian.

An alcohol solution of sugar of lead is recommended by the Department of Agriculture as an antidote for rhus poisoning. It will probably cure primula poisoning as well. An application of the juice of Impatiens fulva is said to cure rhus poisoning.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

REGEL'S PRIVET RECOMMENDED.

In The Review for May 25, on page 71, a subscriber asks for a hardier privet than Ligustrum ovalifolium, a variety that would be better suited to the cold latitudes than the California privet. I recommend Ligustrum Regelianum to the inquirer. This variety is as hardy as L. Ibota and has a brighter green foliage, with branches that bear a resemblance to a fern frond. I think it likely that L. Regelianum is a sport of L. Ibota, as I once had a batch of Ibota seedlings of which some of the branches had the leaf arrangement peculiar to L. Regelianum. Regelianum is unusually compact and bushy and therefore desirable in a hedge.

There are two plants of L. Regelianum at Eaton, O., nine feet in height and of greater width. Recently the plants were covered with a great profusion of white buds.

Amoor river privet, or Ligustrum Amurense, is quite hardy in our location, Preble county, Ohio. It has, however, a decidedly upright growth and does not form so compact a hedge as the California privet. My observations lead me to conclude that a plant of L. ovalifolium becomes hardier as it grows older. E. Y. Teas.

PASTE FOR RED SPIDER.

I read with interest the article in The Review for May 11 and 18 on how to fight the red spider. I have had fifteen years' experience in making the paste remedy and am pleased to give the trade an account of my method. First, I do not use cheap flour, but the best, as it makes more paste and a clearer and more effective remedy. Secondly, I do not boil the paste. At the start I add enough cool water to the flour to make a thick mixture and then stir it until it is even and free from lumps. Then I thin it to the consistency of cream and pour in boiling water, stirring the mixture lively so that it will not cook in lumps. The water must be boiling, or the paste will not cook thoroughly. I can have a pail of the finest paste I ever saw five minutes after the boiling water has been added. There is no need of making the paste over a hot fire, a method that frequently results in scorched paste.

General Views in the Tent Show of the International Garden Club, Pelham Bay Park, New York.

NEW YORK'S TENTED SHOW.

Few Trade Exhibitors.

The "open air" flower show June 1 to 4, at the Bartow mansion, Pelham Bay Park, New York, under the auspices of the International Garden Club, was a gratifying success to those concerned, although the number of exhibitors was less than one would have supposed in view of the extremely liberal premiums, aggregating $3,250 in twenty-four commercial classes. The attendance, however, was ahead of expectations and most encouraging to the originators of the project.

A more beautiful park than Pelham Bay, and a finer mansion than the Bartow it would be hard to find. The weather was ideal. The show was staged in and around a large tent. The first day of the show the admission was $5, an innovation in values that met with the anticipated recognition of "The Four Hundred." In fact, there were close to 400 autos on the grounds and the cream of New York's society circles attended. The admission was $1 the second day and 50 cents the third day, while the grounds, mansion and flower show were all free to the public on Sunday.

Arthur Herrington was manager of the show, assisted by H. A. Bunyard and J. H. Pepper. The schedule was arranged by a committee of the trade consisting of Harry A. Bunyard, chairman; F. L. Atkins, Leonard Barron, John Canning, W. H. Duckham, M. C. Ebel, Benjamin Hammond, I. S. Hendrickson, John E. Lager, W. A. Manda, F. R. Pierson, Wallace R. Pierson, P. W. Popp, Julius Roehrs, George E. M. Stumpp, Charles H. Totty, David Ward and J. Harrison Dick, secretary. The prospectus said the affair had the "cooperation" of some twenty trade and gardening societies, and of many leading firms, naming them, but there were only seven trade exhibitors for the $3,250 in prizes, and only about as many private gardeners and amateurs.

The Awards.

The judges were C. H. Totty, chairman; F. H. Traendly, A. T. Bunyard, W. H. Duckham, Peter Duff, J. Everitt and George Critchley. Their awards to trade exhibitors were:

Group of rhododendrons, covering 100 square feet—W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., first; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y. second.

Group of hardy ornamental flowering trees and shrubs, covering 200 square feet—Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., first; W. A. Manda, second.

Group of orchids arranged for effect, covering seventy-five square feet—Julius Roehrs Co., first; Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., second.

Group of stove and greenhouse foliage and flowering plants, covering 100 square feet—W. A. Manda, first; Julius Roehrs Co., second.

Group of ferns and selaginellas, covering 100 square feet—W. A. Manda, first; F. R. Pierson Co., second.

Rock garden, covering 250 square feet—Julius Roehrs Co., first.

Bay trees, pyramidal or columnar, two plants, not less than ten feet in height—Julius Roehrs Co., first.

Bay trees, standard, two plants, head not less than five feet in diameter—Julius Roehrs Co., first.

Box trees, pyramidal, two plants, not less than seven feet high—W. A. Manda, first; Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., second.

Box trees, standard, two plants, head not less than four feet in diameter—W. A. Manda, first; Julius Roehrs Co., second.

Box trees, bush, two plants, not less than six feet high—W. A. Manda, first.

Box trees, six trained plants—W. A. Manda, first; Julius Roehrs Co., second.

Conifers, collection of twenty-five plants, twenty-five varieties, in pots or tubs—Isaac Hicks & Son, Westbury, N. Y., first; F. R. Pierson Co., second.

Group of bedding plants arranged for effect, covering 200 square feet—Julius Roehrs Co., first.

Display of peonies, 100 square feet—John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y., first; Bobbink & Atkins, second.

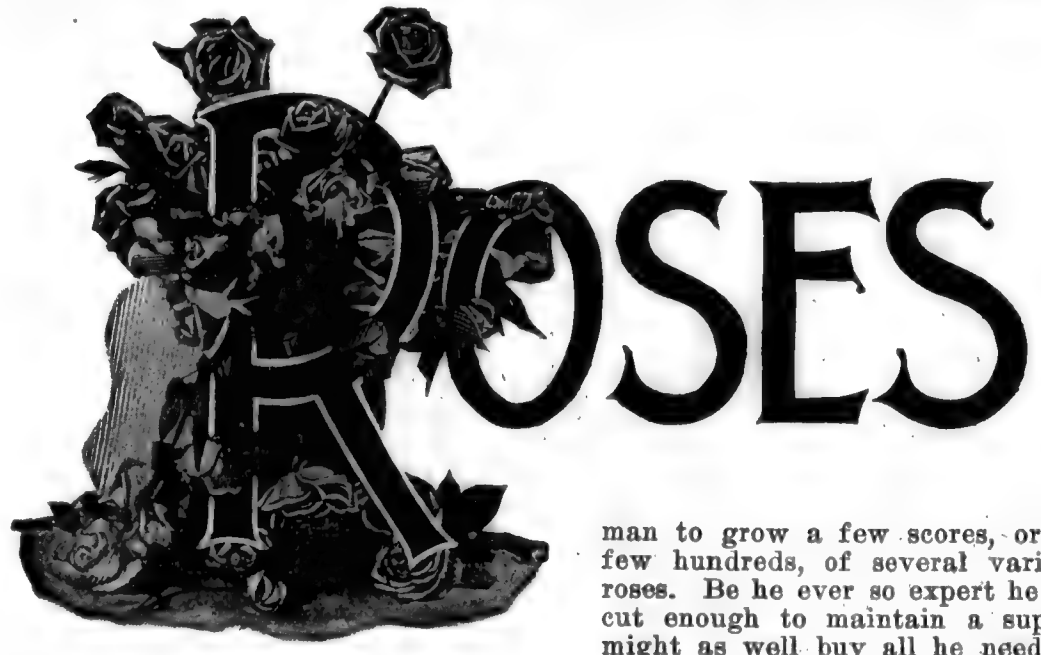
Display of cut hardy flowers, 100 square feet—Bobbink & Atkins, first.

Display of cut sprays of flowering trees and shrubs, 100 square feet—Isaac Hicks & Son.

Display of cut roses—F. R. Pierson Co., first.

The premiums in the gardeners' classes were awarded to George N. Sullivan, gardener to Mrs. W. G. Nichols, Rye, N. Y.; J. F. Mossman, gardener to Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J.; James Linane, gardener to Mrs. George D. Barron, Rye, N. Y.; E. Fordel, gardener to Mrs. A. M. Booth, Great Neck, N. Y., and the gardener for Mrs. J. H. Flagler, Greenwich, Conn. Honorable mention was accorded a number of exhibits not for competition, including hemerocallis from John Lewis Childs and a collection of cut flowers from H. A. Bunyard Co.

J. Canning, superintendent for Adolph Lewisohn, Ardsley, N. Y.; Adam Peterson, gardener for Miss Scheffler, Saugatuck, Conn., and P. Sorenson, gardener for Wm. Shillaber, Essex Falls, N. J., were among those who showed good stock but did not compete.



Ghent, Belgium.—Mails from neutral countries are slowly trickling through the double censorship, British and German, but in many cases delivery was so delayed that shipment of stock was impossible. In spite of the proximity of the fighting front, conditions usually are quiet here and nursery stock is being produced in greater volume than necessary to fill orders with many markets closed and transportation chaotic.

Newtownards, Ireland.—Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., have a new rose called Climbing Irish Fireflame, of which it is said: "In all respects, excepting growth, identical with the normal type, from which it originated with us three years ago. The growth is vigorous and of true climbing habit. This will prove a most valuable and important addition to the climbing section; one that is certain to be much in demand." It will be sent out this year.

Haarlem, Holland.—Much interest is taken here in the colored freesias developed in America. Several growers in various parts of Holland and in southern France had been working on bright-hued freesias prior to the war, but reports from travelers who have seen the Fischer and Frey stock in America indicate Europe has not equaled their results.

Hamburg, Germany.—The areas of valley pips in the district east of this city that has produced the greater part of the world's supply are considerably reduced this year. The difficulty of exporting last season's crop, with the prospect of still greater obstacles next season if the war continues, has resulted in food crops being planted instead of valley. The pips are grown in small areas by a large number of gardeners, who sell the crop to a dealer before harvest.

FORCED ROSES IN THE FIELD.

Would you consider discarded stock of forcing roses, grafted or budded, as being of any value for outside ground if the stock is well ripened off and planted out about April 1 to 10? Can a good crop of blooms be expected the first summer? L. S. K.—Mass.

Forced roses, if gradually cooled off and planted out in your latitude about April 20, will give a good crop of flowers the same season. They prefer somewhat light but rich soil and, if given a summer mulch of old manure and an occasional watering, will well repay you for the additional labor. C. W.

ROSE SLUG AND LADY BUG.

My roses are being infested by a small green bug that simply takes possession of the buds, which soon turn black and die. I also am bothered with lady bugs, which give me considerable trouble in shrubbery, etc. Can you give me a formula for making an effective solution with which to spray?
W. S. R.—Fla.

The pest referred to is probably the rose slug, which is destructive to leaves and buds of outdoor roses. It is best to anticipate its arrival and spray a short time before its appearance. Use a generous tablespoonful of white, powdered hellebore to three gallons of warm water, stir thoroughly and spray when the liquid has cooled. Direct the sprays below and above the foliage. Usually one application will suffice. Lady bugs are friends and destroy great quantities of aphis; do not destroy them on any account. C. W.

A MIXED BENCH OF ROSES.

Can the Mrs. Charles Russell rose be grown in the same house with Killarney, Richmond and Sunburst? I am to start resting my plants early in June. Can I bench the Russells in the same house and start them while the others are resting? I would like any information you can give in regard to growing a mixed bench of roses.
A. J. P.—Ia.

While the temperature for Killarney is all right for Russell, the man whose space compells him to grow a "mixed bench" of roses will do well to use space for some other crop and order his roses from larger source of supply. The day has gone by when it will pay any man to grow a few scores, or even a few hundreds, of several varieties of roses. Be he ever so expert he can not cut enough to maintain a supply; he might as well buy all he needs, as he must buy most of them anyway.

Mrs. Russell is a rose for a specialist, not for a "mixed bench." In the hands of the average grower it is slow and the quality nothing to brag of. The specialist gets both quantity and quality by the judicious use of extra heat, extra fertilizer and extra water after a fashion impossible to the man with a "mixed bench."

INSECTS IN THE ROSEBUDS.

My roses are infested with tiny, mite-like insects which cause the flowers to blight. The plants are luxuriant and they bud well, but about the time the buds should mature they begin to blight, and when they are examined and torn to pieces it is seen there are numerous white-looking, mite-like insects at the base of the petals. Please tell me what to do. B. D. C.—Ark.

Probably the mites you refer to are the white thrips or hoppers which often attack roses, particularly during spells of warm, dry weather. The best preventive or remedy is to spray your plants freely with the hose, using a spray nozzle, so as to secure a good force, and directing it below as well as above both foliage and buds. Once the thrips have appeared, it is difficult to clear them out. Red spider is another small pest which is liable to attack your roses during hot weather, if the plants are indoors and if too arid an atmosphere prevails. C. W.

PRIMULAS FOR IDENTIFICATION.

Under separate cover I am sending a leaf and blossom of three primulas. Please give me the correct botanical name of each. W. H. G.—Wis

The flowers were much withered, but one variety, with the largest flowers, appears to be a form of Primula Polyantha. Another, with small yellow flowers, looks like P. veris. The third variety may be P. cortusoides or P. rosea, but is too withered for positive identification. C. W.

Anaconda, Mont.—According to Charles Blank, Anaconda is not the best place in the world to grow stock. Said he one day last week, perhaps while feeling a little blue or out of sorts: "After having grown stock successfully at Anaconda for four years, I feel quite safe and competent to tackle floriculture anywhere outside of Hades. The winds from the west mean frost and snow; the winds from the east bring smelter smoke. Between the two of them it's an uphill job winter and summer. I shall be glad to get back to some country where things will grow of their own accord, at least part of the year." At the time of writing Mr. Blank expected to visit his home at Orange, N. J., and then locate on a place of his own in the central west.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Gloxinias.

Gloxinias are among the most beautiful of our summer tuberous-rooted pot plants. The erect-flower types are far the best and have all but displaced the old drooping varieties. Gloxinias are more tender than tuberous begonias. They will do well in an ordinary greenhouse in summer, but they appreciate a little more warmth than the begonia. They must not have direct sunshine, or they will burn badly. Be careful not to wet the foliage. If the foliage is damp and the sun strikes it the plants are likely to become disfigured. In order to secure strong tubers the first season, try the plan of planting out any seedlings you may have in a coldframe, placing them in a light, but well enriched compost. An old hotbed will be ideal. Shade the sashes and keep them tilted at top and bottom. Fumigate the plants occasionally to keep down the thrips. Much finer tubers may be had by this method of culture than by pot culture alone.

Cyclamens.

This is a busy season and cyclamens and other plants needed for early winter blooming are liable to be neglected under the pressure of other duties. Try to find time to keep them potted along, using a compost of equal parts fibrous loam and flaky leaf-mold, with one-fifth or one-sixth of the whole of dried cow manure. Cyclamens can be successfully grown either in greenhouses or coldframes through the summer. If kept in greenhouses, spray them freely in hot weather, fumigate them once a week to keep down aphis and thrips and ventilate the houses freely. If placed in coldframes, tilt the sashes at both ends and use lath shades during bright sunshine. The sashes can be removed on dark days or on nights when there seems no likelihood of heavy rain. Be sure to spray the plants freely with the hose on all clear days.

MAYWOOD, ILL.

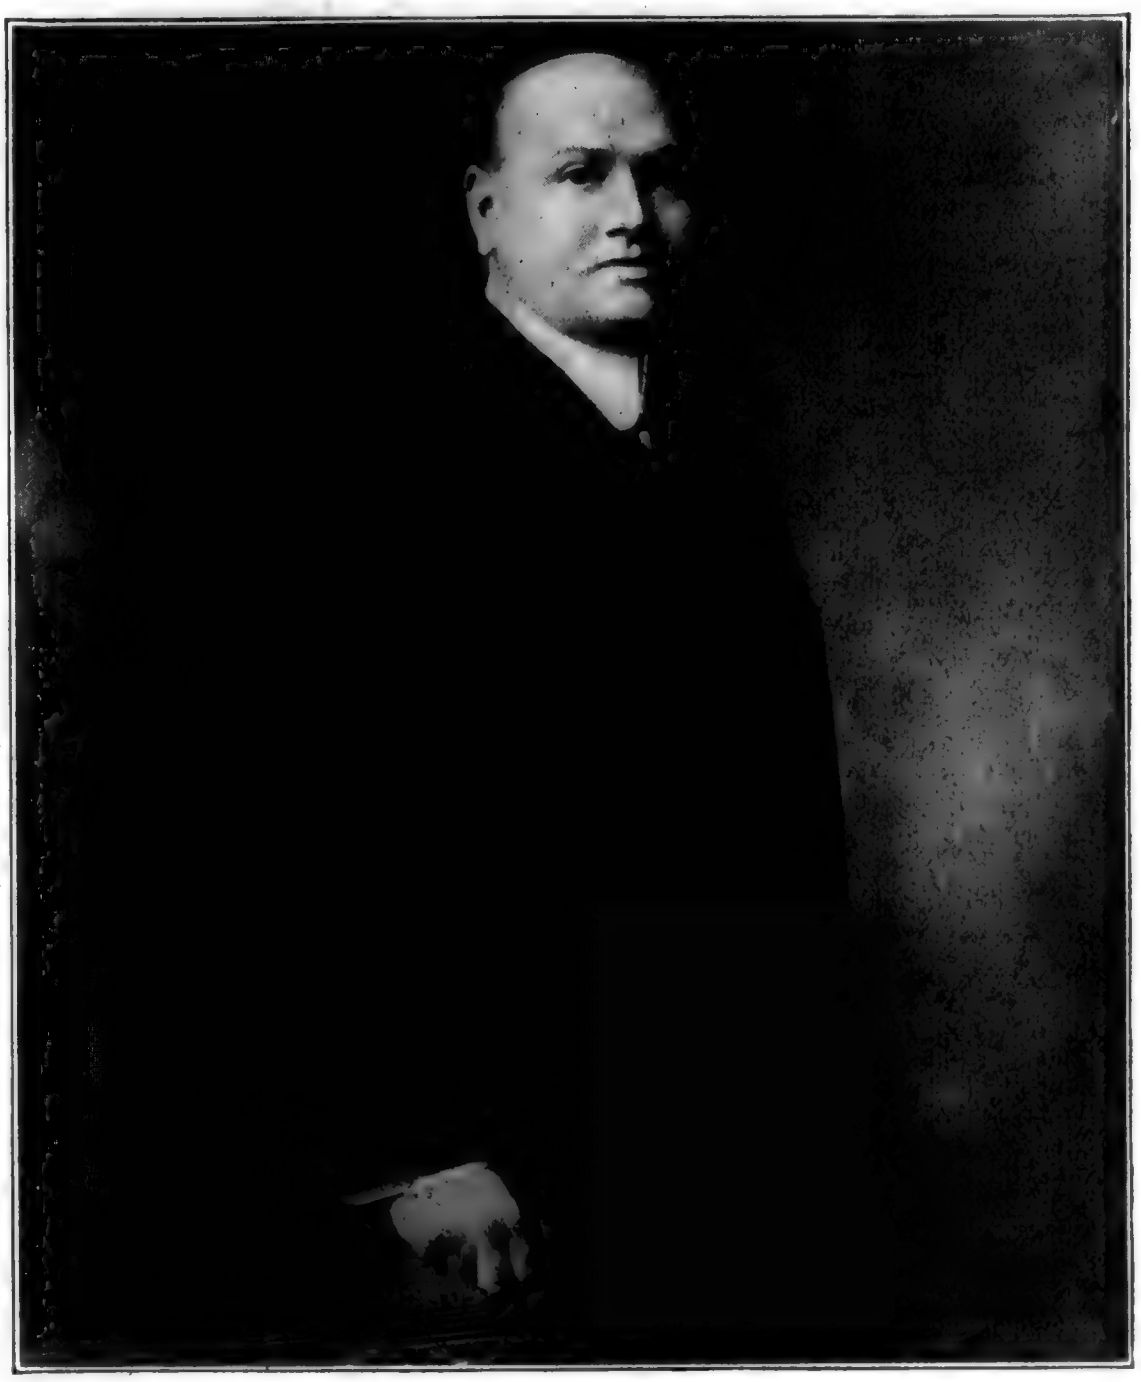
Close of a Successful Season.

On the whole the season now closing for most of the Maywood growers, all of whom look to the Chicago market, has been the most successful in years. A few growers still are cutting quite a few roses, but active preparations for another season are under way and by the end of June or early July shipments will be at the low point of the year. Maywood is a rose town. Several establishments produce only mums and sweet peas, but there are only a few carnations; the three largest places have roses only. The general situation is apparent from the fact that at practically every place building of some sort is going on—greenhouses, chimneys, garages, etc.

The Maywood growers' colony is located about two and one-half miles northwest of the town itself. Albert F. Amling was the pioneer and most of the activities as well as the other places center around the "Company's" range. Its motor truck hauls the cut to market for most of the others and brings their supplies from the city; its teams also haul the coal for most of the community, which is quite a job. Also, most of the growers are either members of the Amling family or graduates from the original Amling establishment and follow its successful methods, one of which is to buy young stock rather than propagate its own; scarcely anyone in Maywood propagates roses or mums.

The "Company's" Activities.

The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. is bringing to a rapid close the work of erecting nine steel frame houses, each 44x550, on the north side of the original range of the Albert F. Amling Co., and right on the heels of the builders the planters have been at work. The establishment now consists of nearly half a million feet of glass and is devoted exclusively to roses. The planting list is of interest because of the small number of varieties. At the beginning of the year the following schedule was made for the whole place:



Mrs. Charles Russell	80,000 plants
Ophelia	45,000 plants
Mrs. Aaron Ward	35,000 plants
White Killarney	30,000 plants
Killarney Brilliant	15,000 plants
Milady	5,000 plants
Mrs. George Shawyer	5,000 plants
Sunburst	5,000 plants
Mlle. Cecile Brunner	5,000 plants
Space for others	10,000 plants
Total	235,000 plants

The difficulty of getting stock of certain varieties at the time wanted has caused some changes. Shawyer and Brunner were dropped and this with unassigned space given to Milady and Sunburst. The planting list for the 144 benches, approximately 4x270, in the new houses is:

Mrs. Russell	40,000 plants
Ophelia	35,000 plants
Killarney Brilliant	10,000 plants
White Killarney	10,000 plants
Mrs. Ward	9,000 plants
Milady	10,000 plants
Sunburst	15,000 plants
Total	129,000 plants

The new greenhouses are practically finished, and in the benches first planted the stock is taking hold nicely, but the addition to the service building remains to go up. It is to house two big Kroeschell steam boilers with mechanical stokers. A new Heine chimney, 175 feet high, also is to be built.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

HENRY PENN.

THIS is the Penn that put publicity into the retail flower business in Boston. Like many of the most skillful advertisers, Mr. Penn is of unassuming disposition—it is his business, not himself he advertises—and it required no little diplomacy to obtain the photograph necessary for the purposes of this note. Mr. Penn was born in Boston, March 27, 1877. He started in the flower business as a boy of 14 and had his own store when he was 21. Since his brother, William, obtained an interest in the business it has been conducted under the title, Penn the Florist. No other retail florist seems to understand so well converting one dollar spent for newspaper space into two to put back in the cash register; certainly no other retail florist spends anything like so much money for newspaper advertising and few ever have enjoyed so large an increase in business as that which has come to Penn these last few years.

Albert Amling, accompanied by Mrs. Amling, went to the Battle Creek sanitarium last week for a rest, so that Otto Amling and William Collatz have plenty to occupy their time for some weeks. There are some 6,000 tons of coal to be hauled in from the railroad half a mile away.

At W. H. Amling's.

Although the planting of 40,000 mums has begun, W. H. Amling, with a pick of 25,000 sweet peas daily, still is three or four weeks away from the end of the most successful sweet pea season he ever has enjoyed. Mr. Amling is at Defiance, O., this week, "where I got my wife," as he puts it. He takes life considerably easier than he did, for he has three sons who take the greater part of the work and responsibility off his shoulders. Walter, who has charge of the separate range of five houses in roses; Herbert, who looks after the mums and sweet peas, and Martin, 19 years old but weighing 180 pounds, who has the carnations and the two families of canaries rearing their young among the flowers. At the rose range a 75-foot Heine stack has been completed; the 6x16 Kroeschell boiler that shortly will be installed was ordered by telephone. W. H. has a new Paige in the old garage and Walter has just bought a Ford, so a new garage is being built at the rose range. Its size, 20x24, is not prompted by the size of Walter's car, but by the foresight that suggests a refrigerating plant at the time the three or four more houses go up to make the two places one. The addition would have been made this year but for the high cost of materials.

Ernst C. Amling.

The roofs of the Ernst Amling establishment shelter three strong boys, the baby of six months just happily recovering from a rather severe attack of measles; 20,000 Mrs. Russell, 5,000 Ophelia and a quite new Moline-Knight car, not to mention Sport, the shepherd dog, also glad to see visitors. So it is no wonder Mr. and Mrs. Amling are thoroughly content. This range was one of the first to try Russell and the original plants are still there. The proprietor thinks he has done better with it this season than any of his neighbors have done with other varieties and the plants are in such good condition he is going right on with most of them, only drying off a few benches of the oldest. But Mr. Amling admits the space occupied by Ophelia has brought more money per foot than has the space in Russell, even if Russell has done splendidly. He says the Ophelia plants will average thirty flowers each for the season, the present cut being the best yet. Ophelia has brought better prices than any other rose of its size this year.

The Beauty Growers.

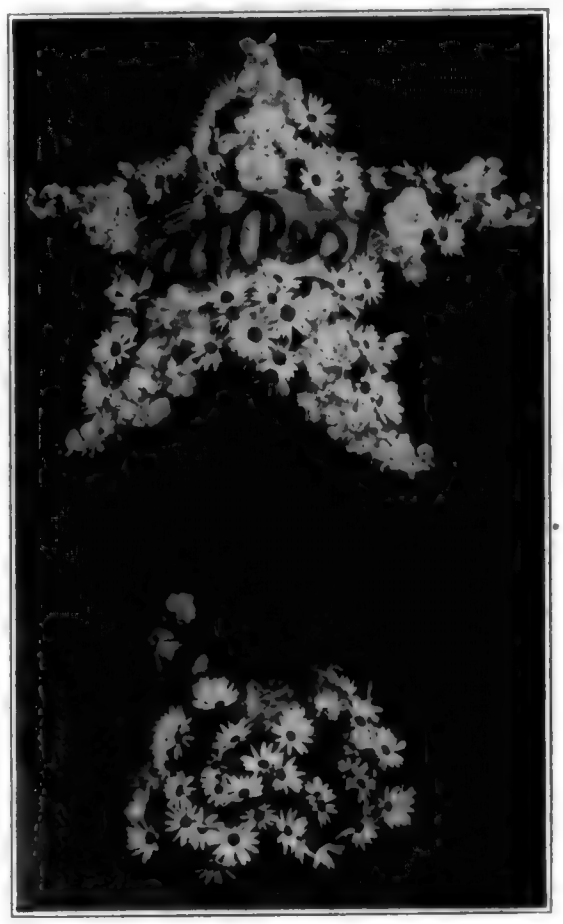
The one exception to the general satisfaction with the season, so far as the Maywood growers are concerned, is the Weiss & Meyer Co., which devotes all its space to Beauties. None of the Beauty growers for the Chicago market seems to have done specially well this season. The Weiss & Meyer Co. did splendidly with its Beauties up to Christmas and it looked like a banner season, for the heavy cut was realizing good prices, but then black spot swept in, the same disease, by the way, that gave the Russell growers of the neighborhood some anxious moments. Since then there have been few Beauties to cut, only one house now being in crop. About half the place has been replanted with young stock, part from Poehlmann Bros. Co. and part from the Batavia Greenhouse Co. The other half is being replanted with old stock dried off and cut back. There will be 35,000 Beauty plants on the benches when the work is done. A big artesian well has been put down a little over 300 feet and a new water supply system is being put in.

Everybody Busy.

The winter-blooming Spencer peas in Henry Wehrman's south houses are a sight, for picking ceased some days ago, when the crop of spring bloomers became so heavy it occupied all attention. Mr. Wehrman never has had a better season than the one now closing, the pick having been steady and prices the same. Preparations are now in progress for filling the houses with mums, for the usual autumn crop.

Walter Burhop is industriously picking sweet peas while preparing to plant mums for a fall crop. The peas have held out unusually well this season because of the cool weather and the present pick is heavy.

Hugo Luedtke is one of the few Maywood growers who has neither roses nor sweet peas; his specialty is the old-fashioned flowers. At present his principal cut is double stocks that make a sheet of snow of the benches not already emptied.



A 50-foot Heine chimney is William Wichtendahl's spring addition. He has his place in excellent order.

Felsch Bros., on the south side, are busy with bedding plants, the season having started late.

The Albert T. Hey Floral Co., in the west end of Maywood, is having an active retail season.

RESOURCEFULNESS.

In these days we hear a great deal of talk about preparedness and little about resourcefulness, an attribute of greatest importance, especially among country florists. It doesn't take much ability to meet an unexpected demand if one has at his back the resources of a big city, but with the country florist it is quite a different matter: It is impossible to be prepared, as business does not warrant carrying much stock, and resourcefulness must frequently be called into play when a hurry-up order comes in. In such a case the hamper of prepared magnolia leaves usually is called on, but sometimes it is not acceptable. Such was the position of J. J. Utter, of West Branch, Mich., the other day; the belated customer would have nothing if not a star on a base, while the stock at hand was a bunch of carnations, two bunches of marguerites and a little swainsona. The illustration shows the result. Many a man has done worse with more.

When Stock Was Scarce.

BLIGHTED NARCISSUS BUDS.

We have a clump of double narcissi, albus plenus odoratus, which were set outdoors in the fall of 1913, but never have bloomed satisfactorily. The flowers develop partly and then dry up, as you can see by the enclosed specimen. Can you inform us as to the cause? E. B. H. & C.—N. J.

The double white gardenia-scented narcissus, N. albus plenus odoratus, acts in this way with the majority of growers. Its requirements are a deep, moist, but well drained soil. In such a soil it will still throw some withered buds, but will give a good crop of flowers. The best crop of this fine narcissus I have ever seen was growing about three feet above the water level of a large pond in grass land. It is possible, however, to get a good lot of flowers in any deep soil. Cover the bulbs to a depth of four inches. Replant once in four years, taking up the bulbs when the foliage has matured. It is well to state that it is much easier to grow foliage than flowers on this beautiful narcissus. C. W.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Memorial day in the Buffalo cut flower market will not be remembered as a holiday of record-breaking business or as a holiday of scarcity of stock. Weather conditions were against the day and more business was anticipated in cut flowers. The sales of plants, however, made up for it. Decorative work for school commencements is in full blast.

Beauties were more than sufficient for requirements and other varieties also were more than plentiful. What little funeral work there was cut no figure in moving the supply. Carnations were held back for several days and Memorial day all varieties in quantity were available. The sales were rather slow. The peony situation was much like that of the carnations. Practically the entire market was ruled by the large quantity of lilac, which was substituted for other flowers. The supply of valley fluctuates from day to day. Cattleyas, as usual, were scarce. Eastern lilies were abundant and considerable difficulty was experienced in moving them. Callas are gradually receding. Baby gladioli and sweet peas enjoyed a ready sale. Irises and yellow daisies were in eager demand. Miscellaneous stock did not move with much celerity. Greens of all kinds were plentiful. The supply of fancy ferns is smaller.

Various Notes.

F. Baum found himself more than busy Memorial day and he cleared all pot plants.

Miss A. A. Erckert is working early and late filling porch boxes and urns. Although the force has been working overtime for the last two weeks, it has not caught up with the orders.

The strike of the express drivers has not had a bad effect on the Buffalo florists, although there is some trouble in receiving and sending shipments on certain routes.

On visiting the greenhouses of the city and suburban towns, I found in many cases that there had been a complete clean-up of spring stock; sometimes all orders had not been filled.

Harold Taylor, who is with John Breitmeyer's Sons, of Detroit, was in town June 4.

L. H. Neubeck has been busy filling window boxes and urns. Memorial day he was on the jump. A. E.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The wholesale cut flower market is subject to the usual conditions of June and the coming hot season. Fortunately, the spring to date has been exceptionally cool, but the anticipated reaction after Memorial day arrived promptly. Rose shipments especially increased and prices fell, even $5 per thousand being accepted at times for the lower grades. June 3 was exceptionally dull, the market being overwhelmed by the peony shipments. From $1 per dozen the price receded June 3 to $20 per thousand. Many thousands are being put in cold storage daily. The quality of the arrivals is generally good. Carnations find the flood of peonies and roses too swift to stem and prices have fallen to one-third the quotations of a week ago; June 3 $5 to $20 per thousand was the range; even the novelties could be bought as low as $1.50 per hundred. Lilies have fallen to 4 cents each; a few touched 5 cents, but many were sold at $3 per hundred. Valley also is weak, owing to the great quantity of the outdoor crop. Even the best valley sold no higher than $3 per hundred.

The lilac has fulfilled its mission and practically disappeared. Immense quantities were sold. The street men, with loaded carts, were much in evidence at the end. These sidewalk merchants will have to do their share also in the peony distribution.

The orchid supply is ample and prices for the best gigas do not advance. In fact, some were sold as low as 25 cents June 3. Last week's tulip offerings were light, but the quality was superb. The Spencer sweet peas were in good demand and sold readily, but anything off quality was unsalable. Few irises remain. Callas are abundant and so are daisies, gladioli, snowballs and Rambler roses.

The week opened with sunshine and cool temperature. A fine volume of June business for the retail florists is anticipated.

Various Notes.

The final meeting of the season for the Florists' Club will be held June 12, at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, West Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. Exhibits will be welcomed, and the essay committee promises to have much of interest on its program.

The field day at the establishment of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., will be held June 21. Among the invitations sent out are those to the members of the National Association of Gardeners and the American Association of Park Superintendents.

Gustave C. Mickley, of the Warendorff force, leaves this week for Wauchula, Fla., to remain until September.

Eugene J. Keenan, for eight years with the Greater New York Florists' Association, Brooklyn, has resigned his position and will soon be enlisted with one of the New York wholesalers.

Goldstein & Futterman say they disposed of over 20,000 peonies for Memorial day.

Samuel Woodrow has the contract for the decorations at the Grand Central Palace, during the continuance of the great bazaar in behalf of the Allies.

B. Rosens and family and A. Warendorff and wife again are located at their summer homes at Averne by the Sea.

Wm. P. Ford spent June 4 at his farm in Pennsylvania, where his peonies are in full bloom.

The George W. Crawbuck Co. opened its store at 57 West Twenty-eighth street June 1 and had a busy Saturday as an encouraging send-off. Mr. Crawbuck and his associates are well and favorably known in the trade.

William Kessler's rebuilt store is complete and in the future will be devoted exclusively to his wholesale cut flower trade.

The Greek-American Florists' Association will hold its annual outing early in July, at College Point, L. I. A boat has been engaged that will carry over 1,000 safely.

The showing of tulips in over 100 varieties, recently seen in the display windows of Stumpp & Walter Co., has attracted much attention. The Darwins, especially, have created comment and many orders for autumn have been booked.

J. Austin Shaw.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Last week was a good one for the trade here, as it was commencement week in the schools. This is the best flower event of the year, not considering the regular holidays. The express drivers' strike in Chicago inconvenienced the trade here not a little, as shipments to meet the increased demands were not delivered promptly. As a result, everything worthy cleaned up, each florist accommodating the others in every way he could. There was a better spirit of coöperation than ever this spring. It is a help to all in the end.

Both the national Decoration day and the Confederate Decoration day received attention this year, and these, together with the preparedness parade June 3, helped to clear every item.

Roses are fairly plentiful now. Most of the winter varieties have been put to sleep for their summer's rest. Russell easily holds the middle of the stage at present and this variety will be more largely planted this year. Carnations are coming in freely. The quality is better than is usual at this season. There are a few English and Siberian irises in the market and they sell well. These varieties deserve more attention from the trade, as both come late, when there is need of flowers of their type.

This has been a great season for outdoor roses. I have seldom seen better stock outdoors. Bedding plants are of the past, and as soon as the June weddings and commencements are over the trade can take a good nap until the fall work starts. If summer business is not what it should be, why does not some one work up a business of delivering flowers to the various summer resorts near the city?

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. last week made the largest blanket it ever executed. It comprised roses and valley, with a huge cross of lilies in the center.

The Hillcrest School Farm expects to begin digging tulip and narcissus bulbs next week. These have ripened earlier than usual this year.

McIntyre Bros. say they have moved more good boxwood this season than during any other year. They have the best lot of home-grown specimens I have seen in the south.

Birmingham, Ala.—The stork left a young florist at the home of Hugh Seales last month.

Birmingham, Ala.—Harry Miles, florist for the Greene Drug Co., has acquired a motor car.

Roanoke, Va.—After a month of serious illness from typhoid fever, Frank L. Wertz is convalescing and planning to be out in a few days.

Prescott, Ark.—W. T. Hart, who heretofore has grown vegetables for the market, is having a try at the growing end of the florists' business.

Greenville, Miss.—L. A. Waas is developing so good a cut flower trade that he is preparing to equip himself with facilities for carrying stock at all times.

Jonesboro, Ark.—P. L. Graves, "the largest plant and cut flower grower in northeast Arkansas," has erected another house, 30x140 feet. Mr. Graves is planning for a large crop of chrysanthemums.

Oneco, Fla.—Reasoner Bros., who trade as the Royal Palm Nurseries, are busy building up retail trade. This season they have spent nearly $8,000 in advertising in the general periodicals circulated exclusively in the south.

Muskogee, Okla.—Two greenhouses, each 28x186 feet, are being erected by the Muskogee Carnation Co. When completed, the company will have 50,000 square feet of glass. Robert Beeb is the owner and his son, M. R. Beeb, a graduate from the horticultural department of the University of Illinois, has charge of the greenhouses.

High Point, N. C.—Frank Ford, of Frank Ford, Flowers, has purchased five and one-half acres of land within the town limits, on which he will erect a Metropolitan house 13x100 feet, an office building and a residence. His other house, 25x100 feet, and coldframe will be moved to the new location. "Business has been good," says Mr. Ford, "easily double that of the corresponding period of last year."

garage and Walter has just bought a Ford, so a new garage is being built at the rose range. Its size, 20x24, is not prompted by the size of Walter's car, but by the foresight that suggests a refrigerating plant at the time the three or four more houses go up to make the two places one. The addition would have been made this year but for the high cost of materials.

Ernst C. Amling.

The roofs of the Ernst Amling establishment shelter three strong boys, the baby of six months just happily recovering from a rather severe attack of measles; 20,000 Mrs. Russell, 5,000 Ophelia and a quite new Moline-Knight car, not to mention Sport, the shepherd dog, also glad to see visitors. So it is no wonder Mr. and Mrs. Amling are thoroughly content. This range was one of the first to try Russell and the original plants are still there. The proprietor thinks he has done better with it this season than any of his neighbors have done with other varieties and the plants are in such good condition he is going right on with most of them, only drying off a few benches of the oldest. But Mr. Amling admits the space occupied by Ophelia has brought more money per foot than has the space in Russell, even if Russell has done splendidly. He says the Ophelia plants will average thirty flowers each for the season, the present cut being the best yet. Ophelia has brought better prices than any other rose of its size this year.

The Beauty Growers.

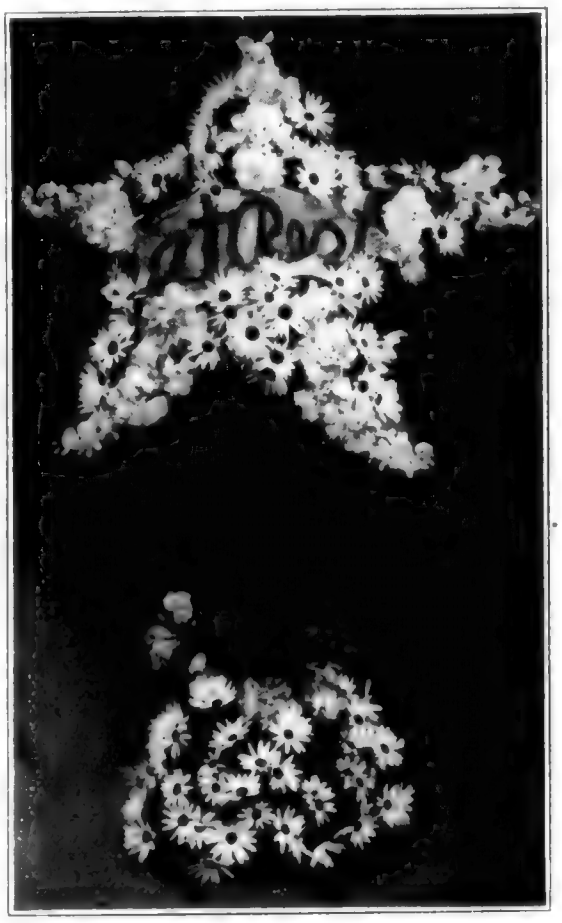
The one exception to the general satisfaction with the season, so far as the Maywood growers are concerned, is the Weiss & Meyer Co., which devotes all its space to Beauties. None of the Beauty growers for the Chicago market seems to have done specially well this season. The Weiss & Meyer Co. did splendidly with its Beauties up to Christmas and it looked like a banner season, for the heavy cut was realizing good prices, but then black spot swept in, the same disease, by the way, that gave the Russell growers of the neighborhood some anxious moments. Since then there have been few Beauties to cut, only one house now being in crop. About half the place has been replanted with young stock, part from Poehlmann Bros. Co. and part from the Batavia Greenhouse Co. The other half is being replanted with old stock dried off and cut back. There will be 35,000 Beauty plants on the benches when the work is done. A big artesian well has been put down a little over 300 feet and a new water supply system is being put in.

Everybody Busy.

The winter-blooming Spencer peas in Henry Wehrman's south houses are a sight, for picking ceased some days ago, when the crop of spring bloomers became so heavy it occupied all attention. Mr. Wehrman never has had a better season than the one now closing, the pick having been steady and prices the same. Preparations are now in progress for filling the houses with mums, for the usual autumn crop.

Walter Burhop is industriously picking sweet peas while preparing to plant mums for a fall crop. The peas have held out unusually well this season because of the cool weather and the present pick is heavy.

Hugo Luedtke is one of the few Maywood growers who has neither roses nor sweet peas; his specialty is the old-fashioned flowers. At present his principal cut is double stocks that make a sheet of snow of the benches not already emptied.



A 50-foot Heine chimney is William Wichtendahl's spring addition. He has his place in excellent order.

Felsch Bros., on the south side, are busy with bedding plants, the season having started late.

The Albert T. Hey Floral Co., in the west end of Maywood, is having an active retail season.

RESOURCEFULNESS.

In these days we hear a great deal of talk about preparedness and little about resourcefulness, an attribute of greatest importance, especially among country florists. It doesn't take much ability to meet an unexpected demand if one has at his back the resources of a big city, but with the country florist it is quite a different matter: It is impossible to be prepared, as business does not warrant carrying much stock, and resourcefulness must frequently be called into play when a hurry-up order comes in. DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Business Memorial day broke all records, both in the sale of plants and cut flowers. All the florists are wearing a broad smile. The next thing is the collection of accounts.

Peonies seem to be the favorite flowers, the prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 for fancy. Carnations are next in line. There is little demand for roses. A good many irises and daisies were seen in the market last week. The cemeteries are bright with all kinds of blooms and the cool weather has helped to keep the stock fresh longer than usual. Plants in vases have a better appearance than last year at this time.

Various Notes.

John Boehner's home is bright with a new coat of paint. He intends to build two houses this summer, and will tear down two of the old ones.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was good. There were many large orders for June wedding decorations and funeral work was heavy. The market is cleaning up better than it has in previous years. Stock is good, considering the lateness of the season, and prices are holding up remarkably well. Usually at this time of the year stock is overplentiful and there is a slump in prices.

Among the flowers given a new lease of life because of the cool weather prevailing up to the present week are carnations. The quality of these is fairly good, although the price has dropped to $5 per thousand in quantities, with better prices only for selected stock. In previous years the first week in June found them so poor in quality that they were without price.

There are plenty of roses of good quality to be had. Locally produced stock still retains its value. The roses from the north are good and in fair demand. Sweet peas were not offered in the large quantities seen the previous week. They have been in good demand for commencement decorations and bouquets. The many weddings increased the call for valley and the price remains at $5 and $6 per hundred. A considerable quantity of outdoor stock is being received from Connecticut and Rhode Island. Some of this is good and fills in well, but a large number of the receipts are not satisfactory. There are plenty of cornflowers and these sell spasmodically. Easter lilies are hanging fire, with $8 and $10 per hundred the prevailing price. There are plenty of peonies still to be had at $4 and $6 per hundred.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Carrie Monroe, formerly of Phoebus, Va., has opened a flower store at 649 H street, northeast. In the Virginia town, where she operated as the Phoebus Progressive Florist, she maintained three greenhouses. She sold her store and greenhouses to R. Hayden Smith, for fourteen years or more a prominent undertaker of that place.

There were more than 10,000 roses exhibited at the most successful rose show ever held by the Brookland Rose Society. The judges were Prof. Furman L. Mulford, of the Department of Agriculture; George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanic Gardens; I. Wessel Staalman, of Oakton, Va.

G. Milton Thomas, of the Center market, surprised his many friends last week with an announcement that he had forsaken bachelorhood May 22. The best wishes of the trade are with Mr. Thomas and his bride.

A bill has been introduced in Congress providing for the increase of the area of the United States Botanic Gardens, by attaching to the present gardens two parcels of land nearby. The Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., has recently gone on record as favoring the extension of the gardens and for the provision therein of a fitting monument to the late William R. Smith.

Gottlieb Supper, who for the last fifteen years was associated with George C. Shaffer, died June 1 of erysipelas. Further details will be found in this week's obituary column. C. L. L.

William F. Gude is chairman of a committee of three appointed to make plans for Washington's preparedness parade, to be held Flag day, June 14. Mr. Gude and his associates called at the White House and invited the President to review the parade. The President replied that he not only would be glad to review the parade but also to march in it. After this conquest the committee decided to personally ask all members of the Cabinet to participate in the demonstration for national defense. The Senate became interested in the proceedings and passed a joint resolution authorizing the district commissioners to make such regulations as may be necessary for handling the parade. Under these terms Pennsylvania avenue will be closed to traffic during the progress of the parade. Prompt action was expected by the House on the Senate resolution.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Hass, the Florist, 196 Thames street, has been making a special drive on window boxes, with considerable success.

At a meeting of the Gardeners' Assistants' Union last week forty-nine new members were elected.

Percy Huxley, greenhouse foreman for H. A. C. Taylor, was married May 20 to Miss Jessie Weatherby, who made the long trip from London, England.

John T. Allan has just purchased a touring car.

Four greenhouses are to be erected on the J. J. Van Alen estate, Lawrence avenue, to cost $8,000. There will be three, each 25x50 feet, and one 27x50 feet.

Edward R. Hass was married May 31 to Miss Esther E. Baxter, at the home of his parents. The house was decorated with Easter lilies, white roses and palms. After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Hass left for New York for a two weeks' wedding trip. W. H. M.

HOUSTON, TEX.

The Market.

We had some good old summer weather last week, the warmest for this time of the year for several seasons. It has been a dry spring, with only occasional light showers and cool days and nights. As a result the cape jasmines were slow to open, not giving the dealers enough stock to fill out-of-town shipments for Memorial day. Three days prior to the holiday the temperature ascended, and directly after the day there was an abundance of cape jasmines.

The Decoration day business was unusually good, clearing the market of both plants and cut flowers, which were in large supply for the day. Shasta daisies now are coming in freely and there is a good sale of them. Sweet peas are singing their swan song for this season and the few that arrive are short-stemmed and faded. Outdoor roses are replacing the greenhouse stock. Gladioli are coming to the front and the indications are for a good cut.

Funeral work and decorations for school commencements were plentiful last week and most items were well cleaned up. G. R. L.

Westboro, Mass.—Charles Nichols has been appointed florist of the Lyman school.

Concord, Mass.—An agency of the Fairhaven Greenhouses has been started here by John H. Snow.

Lewiston, Me.—The Gardeners' Union is preparing to hold a flower show here August 24 and 25.

Wellfleet, Mass.—Mrs. J. A. Marsh will discontinue the business left her by her husband, who died March 18, after an illness of eleven days from brain fever.

Manchester, N. H.—A contract for furnishing plants and shrubs to the city park department has been awarded to F. J. Bixby, who was the only one to submit a bid for the business.

Bennington, Vt.—Burt, the Florist, has taken a lease on a store at 433 Main street.

Marlboro, Mass.—Axel Sorenson has acquired the greenhouses formerly conducted by W. L. Lewis.

Lenox, Mass.—Plans have been made by F. Augustus Schemerhorn for the erection of three greenhouses this summer.

Danbury, Conn.—The backfiring of the engine set ablaze the delivery automobile of Edwin E. Mathewson, one day last month. C. Classendorf, who was driving the car at the time, made efforts to extinguish the blaze, but the flames spread toward the gasoline tank too rapidly to please Mr. Classendorf. The car was destroyed beyond repair.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Albert Rahn.

Mrs. Martha Rahn, wife of Albert Rahn, of the Rahn & Herbert Co., Clackamas, Ore., has passed away. Her illness was reported by The Review's correspondent at Portland, Ore., a few weeks ago. Her funeral was held May 31, the date that would have been celebrated as her forty-third birthday, had she lived. The funeral was largely attended, especially by members of the Portland Floral Society. Besides her husband, she leaves three children, all of school age.

Miss A. L. Wilson.

Miss A. L. Wilson, of Montgomery, Ala., who, with her sister, conducted a florists' business at Mildred and Pleasant streets, died Memorial day. Although she had been in poor health for some time, the end came unexpectedly. For thirty years she was a successful grower of bulbs, selling at wholesale as well as retail.

William L. McKay.

W. L. McKay, 61 years of age, a prominent nurseryman of Geneva, N. Y., where he did a large business under the name of Van Dusen Nursery Co., died of heart failure on the morning of May 25, while working on his grounds west of the city. Mr. McKay was born at Warsaw, N. Y., in 1855. He was a graduate of Cornell and completed a course in law at the University of Michigan. In 1882 he married Miss Edith Van Dusen, of Geneva, and moved to Geneva to engage in the nursery business. Outside of his business interests, Mr. McKay's principal activities were in connection with the New York militia. He enlisted as a private in 1892 and was later made lieutenant. During the Spanish war he served with his company.

The deceased is survived by his wife, two sons, who were associated with him in the nursery business, three daughters and three sisters.

Gottlieb Supper.

The death June 1 of Gottlieb Supper, who for the last fifteen years was connected with the retail establishment of George C. Shaffer, of Washington, D. C., came as a great shock to his many friends in the business. He had been ill but a short time, suffering from erysipelas, and hope had been expressed for his recovery. Mr. Supper was born in Germany about thirty-five years ago. He was brought to this country by his parents when an infant and after completing a common school education he started in to learn the florists' business under the tutelage of his father, who now conducts an establishment at Lakewood, N. J. It was from that place that Mr. Supper went to Washington to engage in the business. He worked for a short time for the Washington Florists Co. and for Henry Pfister, prior to joining Mr. Shaffer.

Mr. Supper is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nettie Supper, who for some time has been employed by Mr. Shaffer. Interment was at Walker's Chapel, Va.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Memorial day business was the best ever. Peonies were the leaders, the supply being 100 per cent larger than last year. Next in demand came mixed flowers, such as daisies, pyrethrums, cape jasmines and other outdoor flowers. Carnations were a trifle high in price and only a few were used in boxes of mixed flowers. The cheaper grades of roses were in great demand and a large quantity of pot plants was moved. Any kind of plant with a flower on it sold well. Wagons loaded with flowering plants were to be seen at the entrances of all cemeteries. The excellent weather and the easier financial conditions were important factors in the large business done. The cemeteries were crowded. Retailers report large increases in business for the day. Cut flowers now are cheap.

Various Notes.

A. F. Barbe had an unusually large business Memorial day. He sold 5,500 peonies, besides other seasonable flowers. A fine lot of geraniums in 5-inch pots cleared at 50 cents each.

Peter Martin had 500 large lights broken in his greenhouse by hail June 2. There was little damage to the stock. William Foith lost about 250 lights. Jacob Tobler, of the Bunker Hill Greenhouse, also suffered from the hail storm. He lost about one-tenth of his glass, but had little damage otherwise.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that Memorial day business was far ahead of that of any previous year. Out-of-town trade was heavy. They will handle a large number of Colorado carnations.

Henry Kusik & Co. disposed of more than 50,000 peonies and large quantities of other cut stock. A car of moss has been ordered from the north.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports having had the largest Memorial day business ever, even exceeding the Christmas trade.

Dry goods stores sold cut flowers for Memorial day and all report that business this year doubled that of last year. Many of the stores were sold out by 10 o'clock May 29.

Arthur Newell was well satisfied with business, as his books show an increase of forty per cent. He says he did not have to worry about stock being fresh, as he could get plenty at any time.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports the best business in five years. Out-of-town trade was heavy.

Samuel Murray's receipts for Memorial day established a new record. Pot plants as well as cut flowers sold well.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports an increase in its out-of-town orders as well as in local sales. This concern had more cut flowers for Memorial day than for the same day of any of the years it has been in business.

W. J. Barnes sold out cut stock entirely by noon and had only a few pot plants left. He is getting his greenhouses ready for pot plants and mums for the fall.

Business across the state line was good. All report an increase over that of last year.

W. J. B.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

J. V. Laver, of Erie, Pa., said Memorial day would surpass any of its predecessors in the total amount of business done. "It was good last year, but there seemed to be a hole in the pocket. Though the volume was there, the profit was not," remarked Mr. Laver.

William Honeysett finds the tone of the market healthy. He believes this is the best season of the many he has experienced at Erie.

Charles Offerle put in a strenuous time, having some large planting orders for Erie's principal cemetery.

The Bauer Floral Co., at Erie, had no complaint to make and was in line with fine stock that the late season favored.

C. W. Zuch & Sons were cutting the last of a profitable crop of Lettuce Grand Rapids. "We have put Erie on the map from a vegetable standpoint," remarked George Zuch, in naming the various towns to which they ship. "We really have more business than we can properly take care of, hence the Lord & Burnham house going up this summer," concluded Mr. Zuch. The cucumber crop is promising.

J. H. Dann & Son, of Westfield, N. Y., have been somewhat handicapped by wet weather. Usually some 300,000 tomato plants grown for the local planters are disposed of before now. They were going out lively, however, and a good Memorial day business fattened the exchequer most satisfactorily.

F. E. Selkregg, of North East, Pa., was finishing a hasty meal when I called. "As we journey through life, we must live by the way sometimes," observed Mr. Selkregg. I left him at the entrance of a bank, where he was to make a deposit, and concluded that life for him was really pleasant.

The Tong & Weeks Floral Co., of Ashtabula, O., is experiencing a good run of funeral work. Herbert Tong, well known to many in the trade as the superintendent for many years of the Frontier Farm, at Erie, Pa., now is enjoying the fruits of his labors in a semi-independent way. He says he cannot relinquish the reins entirely.

C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, O., are adding 75,000 feet of glass, to accommodate the stock for an increasing demand. This range is intended for carnations and roses, the older range to be used for pot plants, cyclamens to figure prominently.

Carl Hagenburger, of Mentor, made an important improvement at his range last fall and is much pleased with the advantage gained. A fine lot of Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and N. Teddy, Jr., was noted, as well as a double pink geranium, Mrs. Barney. Mr. Hagenburger says this variety is as free as S. A. Nutt. It is not a new variety, but is not so well known as it deserves to be.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THERE is considerably more than the usual quantity of boxwoods in the country this season. Early sales were slower than expected, but recently the stock has been moving nicely.

THE first dahlias of the season to reach The Review arrived June 2. They came from Grohman the Florist, Saginaw, Mich., who grows the variety Camelliæflora in pots for a summer crop.

THE hustlers of Houston are keeping the trade well supplied with the printed matter the south Texas boosters do so well. If northern florists do not invade Texas during August it will be no fault of the publicity men.

AS usually is the case, the later the season becomes the more abundant bedding stock seems to be. The reason is that many growers always are behind and have quantities of stock that becomes ready after the demand has begun to wane.

IT seems apparent that the closing of the English market for bulbs and plants, of whatever foreign origin, will have the effect of insuring a large supply for America. The only difficulty in getting plenty of good stock this autumn doubtless will lie in transportation.

THE replanting of roses is practically finished for the season and there is only a small quantity of surplus young stock for the late buyers. The fact seems to be that the rose markets were so insatiable during the winter that those who generally grow considerable quantities of young stock for the trade this season did not care to sacrifice the usual number of flowers to obtain wood.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

FIVE YEARS.

Blank, Charles, Orange, N. J.

THREE YEARS.

Templin, S. C., Garrettsville, O.

TWO YEARS.

Milligan, A. D., Springfield, Mo.
Hartman, A. C., Las Animas, Colo.
Bentzen Floral Co., St. Louis, Mo.
Purnell, W. Z., Snow Hill, Md.
Herrick, W. D., Downers Grove, Ill.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

NEXT NATIONAL SHOW.

No action has as yet been taken by the National Flower Show committee of the S. A. F. with regard to the location and date of the fifth exhibition. If the new exhibition building at Cleveland will be finished so that the S. A. F. can open it with either a spring or a fall show, the opportunity will be embraced, but at Cleveland it is as yet impossible to say when the building will be ready. The success of the opening attraction is almost a foregone conclusion.

WANTED—OPINIONS.

William F. Gude, the energetic Washington, D. C., representative of the S. A. F., whose difficult duty it is to keep a keen eye on all congressional or federal legislative matters touching the trade, reports that a joint resolution was introduced in Congress June 1 for the purpose of making the mountain laurel the national flower of the United States. The bill was introduced by Congressman Stephens, of Tennessee. Is this not a matter in which the national body should have a say? Mr. Gude does not want to commit himself one way or another until he has an expression from the society. What is your opinion?

WHAT IS A FLORIST?

The question who, what or which is a florist at last seems likely to have a legal answer in Pennsylvania. It is a question many have sought in vain to cover with an inflexible rule, especially those who make an effort to grant trade prices only to bona fide members of the trade. The U. S. government, in taking the last census, counted as florists those who derived not less than twenty per cent of their annual income from the production of florists' stock, but this definition obviously will not suffice for business purposes. The sellers' rule most commonly applied is anyone who buys in trade quantities, an easy rule to apply, but not exact. The Review, in its efforts to limit its circulation, classes as in the trade those who grow to sell, those who buy to sell again, and those who work for wages at growing or selling, an elastic rule, but more exact than any other yet found.

But the courts of Pennsylvania will have to decide, because the State Workmen's Compensation Board, after long deliberation, has given it up. Under the compensation law it is necessary to know what is a farmer, a florist, a nurseryman. A ruling by the board did not exempt from the provisions of the act those engaged "in the business of fruit growing, poultry and stock raising, dairying and horticulture (which includes floriculture), as a business and not merely as incidental to general farming." This rule now has been abrogated and the courts asked to decide.

LESSONS OF MEMORIAL DAY.

An observer of conditions as they developed during the last few days of May can not fail to draw certain conclusions:

In the first place, the sources of supply have developed to the point where no general scarcity of stock is possible at this season except under most unusual circumstances. Many peony crops usually on the market for Memorial day were a few days late this year, but there were enough other flowers so that general conditions were not greatly affected.

In the second place, it is dangerous to attempt to hold stock back at this season. The only chance for old flowers to realize more than they would if marketed while fresh is in case of a general scarcity. As no general scarcity ever again is likely to appear at Memorial day, the reason for holding stock disappears. Also, more often than not there is a hot wave in the last days of May. Even if of short duration it ruins the held-back flowers, especially carnations. Therefore, while there is no longer any chance of profit by holding for Memorial day, there is excellent chance of complete loss.

In the third place, high prices are out of the question at Memorial day; they restrain trade, and restraint of trade everywhere is recognized as bad, except perhaps by the man who is doing the restraining—he has the dollar so close to his eye he can not see what is beyond. The needs of the markets at Memorial day are best illustrated by the general report as to roses; the prices of the best grades fell while the lower grades were advancing; short roses made comparatively better prices than long ones.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

With the passing of the holidays, there is a marked cessation of activity on the market. Local buying is light, but the volume of shipping orders is holding up remarkably well. To be sure, weather conditions have some bearing on the situation, for though last week ended in perfect weather, the early part of the present week was none too conducive to a large city trade.

There has been a strong demand for really good Beauties throughout the week, but first-class stock has been decidedly scarce. Of unqualifiedly poor stock there has been an abundance, but hope is seen in the increasing receipts of young Beauties. The demand for other roses is limited to the best grades. Cheap, short-stemmed stock meets with little or no call. Poor stock is overabundant and is moved with great difficulty. Perhaps the one exception to the general conditions, both as to quality and demand, is Russell, but the supply is smaller than it was and the color is off with some growers.

We Offer You Fine Russell in Quantity

BUT RUSSELL is not the only good Rose for which we are the largest source of supply—Ophelia, for instance. Order some of it; your customers will come for more. And then there are Brilliant, Ward, Sunburst, Milady, White Killarney and Killarney—we have excellent June crops of each.

CARNATIONS

Our Crops Are Heavy

The quality of this crop of Carnations is unusually good for this time of year—weather conditions have been favorable. Our supply now is so heavy we can quote the lowest prices of the season—low prices when you consider the high quality of the stock.

PEONIES

$3.00 to $6.00 per 100

There is, perhaps, greater difference in the value of Peonies than in any other flower. Given the right varieties, grown and shipped by men who know how, there is nothing that makes a better show for the money; but if from men who never learned the "how," Peonies are likely to be absolutely worthless by the time the retailer unpacks them.

Our Peonies are RIGHT in every particular—you'll make good money on them in your June Wedding and Commencement work.

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

We are headquarters for the best grade of Sweet Peas—a large supply in all colors. They are the leading corsage flower of the month.

Carnations at last have hit the toboggan. There is a large increase in the production and much of the supply is exceptionally good for the time of year, so that poor stock sells at much the lowest prices of the season, as there is enough first-class stock to go around.

Cattleyas and valley again find themselves alone on the short side of the market. Easter lilies are coming into the market in increasing numbers and, considering general conditions, are meeting with a fair demand. Callas appear to be about done. Sweet peas are plentiful, but, broadly speaking, quality is not altogether satisfactory, as the close of the season is approaching. There are quite a few daisies and snapdragons on the market and, though not clearing, they are moving remarkably well. The supply of Spanish irises is more than sufficient to meet the demand. Comparatively few gladioli are in the market, but these move readily enough.

Peonies of any desired quality, color or kind may be had in any quantity. Many of the crops that were too late for Memorial day are now coming into the market. Locally grown stock is adding its bulk to the already large volume. The stock that is in condition to hold is going into cold storage. Gardenias are receding into the background. There are plenty of cape jasmines and the quality is unusually good, but they have not been meeting with the demand some dealers anticipated for them. Candytuft has sold well.

New ferns are beginning to arrive; otherwise the green goods situation is little changed.

The Strike Situation.

The Wholesale Florists' Cartage Service is working so smoothly that Manager Fred Lautenschlager scarcely gets the credit that is due him for it. There seems to be no change in the strike situation, with no prospect that the wholesalers can give up their cartage service and depend on the express companies.

As an incident showing how business has grown, Mr. Lautenschlager managed a similar strike service for the wholesalers from April 29 to June 4, 1905, thirty-seven days. The present strike had been in progress only fifteen days at June 1, but in that time the number of boxes handled considerably exceeded the number handled in the entire time of the first strike. As the time of the year was the same, it appears the shipping business of the market must be about three times as great as it was in 1905.

As the police admitted no teams to the loop district after 9 a. m., June 3, Preparedness day, the cartage service was suspended and nearly all wholesalers closed by noon.

The Weather of May.

The weather of May always is important, both in the producing and the selling end of the business. Cool weather holds quality in the stock and keeps the supply within bounds. This year the daily average temperature was nearly 3 degrees above normal and 5 degrees above last year. The hot wave May 26, 90 degrees, was just at the wrong time, but, fortunately, did not last. The percentage of sunshine, fifty-eight, was six points below normal, but the rainfall, 2.93 inches, was slightly less than normal and growers would welcome moisture for their stock in the fields.

ties under the charter as it now stands is practically unlimited, as it covers manufacturing and merchandising in every form. Eighteen tubs of goldfish from Japan have just been received. A. L. A public garage, 59x125 feet, at the intersection of Lyman avenue and Twelfth street, Oak Park, is being built by Joseph Ziska, of Joseph Ziska & Sons. Ground was broken June 5. Mr. Ziska will devote all of his time to the operation of the garage, intrusting the conduct of the wholesale florists' supply house to his three sons, Joseph, Jr., John and Raymond. In doing this the elder Ziska is taking no chances, as the young men have proved, not only to him, but to the trade, that they are thoroughgoing and far-sighted business men.

and, now that the snaps are gone, there is a special crop of forced Gladiolus Myrtle, the first of this variety for the season.

An Overland truck, recently added to the equipment of the National Plant & Flower Co., S. Freund manager, has proved of great assistance in handling the spring plant trade.

At the Wietor establishment rose planting is well along, several houses have been planted with mums and considerable quantities of carnations have been benched. This is one of the places where excellent results have followed growing carnations indoors all summer.

The express companies still are losing considerable quantities of peonies, report Erne & Klingel, who say the trouble seems to lie with the freight-house men, who bury the boxes under non-perishable shipments.

May held many handicaps for the market, but the E. C. Amling Co. reports sales exceeding the best previous May record by $11,400.

It is the opinion of A. T. Pyfer that practically all carnation growers have cut less flowers this season than usual, but that the average price for the season has been the best ever. There have been no cleanup sales at a few cents per bunch, to pull the average down.

Downtown Chicago has more window boxes this season than ever before, possibly due to encouragement by the Association of Commerce. In most cases the Illinois self-watering box has been used.

Young rose stock has sold unusually well this year, according to Emil Reichling, who says the plants grown beyond Peter Reinberg's own needs are practically all sold at this early date.

L. H. Winterson recently severed his connection with Winterson's Seed Store to go into the real estate business on the northwest side. The firm is Winterson & Co., 4636 North Francisco avenue.

W. S. Gilbert, at Glen Ellyn, has had, and still is having, for that matter, a most successful season. His specialty is sweet peas, but he also has done unusually well with pansies and daisies.

Peter Pearson is preparing to fill some of his vacant space with mums, principally the Chieftain varieties. He has had an excellent spring season.

This is the forty-fourth year of Fred Kanst's connection with the south parks. And the parks never looked better than they do this spring.

Victor Young believes in advertising and has demonstrated to his own satisfaction that a well dressed window is well worth while. Consequently the window of Victor Young & Co. always is up to the minute and attracts much attention. Large Grecian columns of terra cotta occupy the background and make an ideal setting for plants and cut flowers.

The marriage of S. Y. Bloom, 822 East Sixty-third street, and Miss Alta Levy will take place June 18.

The lure of California proved too strong for Mrs. E. L. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn, and she started west June 5 for a month's vacation.

A visitor from a far land this week was T. W. Reed, manager of the Waco Floral Co., Waco, Tex. Mr. Reed is on his way home from a tour of Canada. He reports general business conditions in Texas the best in three years.

P. L. McKee, of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., returned from Lincoln, Ill., for the week end.

day business is reported by C. Frauenfelder, 3343 West Madison street. He says the buying public is less inclined to place advance orders than formerly, but the increased number of eleventh-hour orders, in his opinion, brings the total amount of business done to a much higher average. He is especially busy with funeral orders.

Mrs. Flint Kennicott and her daughter, Miss Alice Kennicott, mother and sister of H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., will return from their winter home in Florida, June 8. With their return, the Kennicott country home, at The Grove, northwest of Chicago, will be opened and Mr. Kennicott will motor to and from his office. He has had his new Saxon about fifteen days and in that time has covered 1,200 miles.

The week end was most enjoyably spent by Philip C. Schupp, manager of the J. A. Budlong wholesale house, far from the maddening crowd. The result of his trip will probably appear later in the collection cabinet of the Chicago Historical Society.

The wife of John Walsh, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, who recently recovered from a serious operation, has returned much strengthened from a month's visit in the country.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are cutting peonies at their place west of the city. Poppies make their counters bright.

A wreath of cycas leaves and grasses recently was made up by the North Shore Floral Co., 849 Irving Park boulevard, to be shipped with a corpse to far-away Australia.

The marriage of Charles London, with George C. Weiland, of Evanston, was announced last week.

Clifford Pruner started June 5 for his summer trip among the trade in the southwest.

The florists' club will meet at the Hotel Morrison at 8 p. m. today, June 8.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Market.

Business last week was all that could be desired. Peonies were not in time for Memorial day, but other flowers were plentiful and in good demand. Carnations were not in oversupply and prices held high for this time of the year. Roses were sufficient for requirements. Those who had a good supply of outdoor flowers found a ready market. As usual, one of the features of the Memorial day business was the large demand for flowers to decorate the graves in the cemeteries. This is becoming more general every year and florists had many out-of-town shipments for this purpose. Even people in moderate circumstances now buy flowers to decorate the graves of their departed.

Bedding stock, window boxes and baskets still are in big demand, owing to the backward spring, and florists are rushed to the limit of endurance. They will be glad when the rush is over, so that other necessary work may be attended to.

Various Notes.

Harry Bills, of Davenport, had a fine lot of sweet peas of extra quality, for which he found a ready market.

George Forber, of Forber & Bird,

Davenport, was one of the fortunate ones who had peonies in time for Memorial day.

Joseph Tuckis, of Rock Island, has been ill at a local hospital with typhoid fever, but he is doing nicely and is expecting to be in the harness in a few days. In the meantime, Mrs. Tuckis "holds the fort," as she expressed it, and is doing a thriving business during her husband's absence. W. G.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Summer, although somewhat belated, is with us at last and the warm, bright weather has knocked the bottom out of the market. Stock in general is good, but prices are down to normal and below. Carnations are in good shape and the cut is large enough so that selection may be made on all orders. Sweet peas are good and are selling well.

Roses are having a good sale and the supply is more than sufficient to take care of the demand. Some exceptionally fine stock is seen on the market, but it is bringing only fair prices. The market is long on lilies and they are moving only fairly well. The crop of outdoor peonies from this vicinity will soon be in and other outdoor stock is coming along nicely. This, of course, will have a tendency to make business more quiet, and from now on there will not be much doing in the cut flower line.

Spring stock continues to move well and this month should still show some good results in that end of the business. The supply of orchids has increased materially and they are to be had at reasonable prices for wedding decorations, which, of course, are numerous this month. The demand for funeral designs was large last week and the retail trade has been busy with this kind of work. Vacations seem to be the main topic of conversation and each one is planning his or her holiday with much fervor.

Various Notes.

Mrs. A. Goebet, of Third and Wright streets, last week announced the engagement of her daughter, Pearl, to J. Van Deusen.

F. H. Holton, whose automobile was struck by a street car recently, as yet has not received any settlement for damages. Mr. Holton is going on a short trip to the western part of the state for a few days on private business.

The committee in charge of the annual outing of the Milwaukee Florists' Club has not completed its arrangements, but it is said the picnic will take place sometime during the early part of July. H. J. S.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The wet weather undoubtedly is responsible for the dullness of trade. It has been disagreeable and business in all ways has been much affected. A large quantity of outdoor work still remains to be done, but the ground is thoroughly water-soaked. The planting season has been much hindered.

There is an immense quantity of cut flowers in the market and the sales are not at all brisk. Prices consequently are low. Carnations are plentiful and of good size, but they do not move fast. Calla and Easter lilies are in fine condition and sell well. The demand for valley is about as usual for this time of the year and the quality is quite good. Orchids are quite plentiful, but do not move readily. The supply of roses is satisfactory, and meets all demands. American Beauties are not extra good, but then there is no large demand for them. Maryland, Sunburst, Ward, Taft, Kaiserin and the Killarneys seem to have a steady sale. Outdoor peonies are coming in slowly. There is a profusion of yellow, white and purple irises, which move fairly well. There was no great call for snapdragons during the last week or so. Some fine America gladioli and baby types arrive daily and sell nicely. Good marigolds reach us daily. Wallflowers move somewhat slowly, but lemon lilies and lilacs sell well. Some extra good hydrangeas and Boston ferns are seen at the wholesale houses.

Various Notes.

Walter Mott, of Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, was a visitor last week. He reported business as good.

William Ehmann, of Corfu, is cutting some good America gladioli, which find a ready market here.

Cecil Lester, of the Geo. B. Hart store, has been home for a few days with an attack of the grip.

George T. Boucher has a good selection of bedding plants at his store. Mr. Boucher says trade is good.

A. C. Arend recently purchased from Frank McLuis the flower store at the corner of Clinton avenue and Main street. He is doing fairly well and is working up a good patronage.

The wholesale house of which George B. Hart is proprietor is undergoing extensive alterations. Erected about two years ago, with an up-to-date refrigerating system, it has proved itself to be inadequate to meet the needs of the business, which is growing rapidly. The icebox will be built double its

James Vick's Sons are experiencing a wonderfully busy time just now at their Stone street store. An unusually large call for bedding plants of all kinds is noticed and they have extra help to handle the rush. The seed business is above the average.

The city of Rochester is contemplating the erection of a curved-eave, iron-frame greenhouse, to be located on Highland avenue, next to the present houses. The new house is to be 30x100 and to have two 50-foot compartments. The Lord & Burnham Co. has been authorized to draw up specifications and preliminary plans for the proposed house. H. J. H.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Peonies broke the market the first week in June. They arrived in such tremendous numbers that the moderate call for them was wholly inadequate. They simply overwhelmed everywhere, broke the market and left it so weak that all flowers were badly depressed. It mattered little whether Pæonia festiva maxima, the smaller, but better-keeping, snow white or any of the best pink varieties were offered; they sold at ridiculously low prices if at all. Many were put in cold storage; many were left in the boxes; many were left on the plants. The wholesalers advised the growers of the bad conditions and requested that shipments cease for the present. This deplorable condition, which caused heavy financial loss, was directly due to the late season. When peonies pay, half the crop is marketed by Memorial day. This season hardly any of the local peonies arrived until June.

Beauties, orchids and valley have been in demand for weddings and commencements. They have brought excellent prices for the season; other flowers have been badly depressed by the surfeit of peonies, excepting the finer grades of roses, which are none too plentiful. A few Hadley, Russell, Maryland and Kaiserin roses have been in demand. Sweet peas were overdone; those grown in violet houses or in cold-frames are preferred. Iris is about over. There are some nice pyrethrum daisies. Good judges agree that, except for some choice varieties or high-grade flowers, the market is unlikely to recover for some time to come. There are enough peonies in cold storage to last a long while, although the height of the local crop has been reached.

noon and evening of June 3, when the Natural History Club of Lansdowne gave its seventh annual exhibition of roses and outdoor flowers. The club house is particularly well adapted to a flower show. The hall is light and well proportioned, large enough to hold a good-sized show without crowding and to set it off advantageously. A dark red curtain at the rear of the stage made an effective background for the peonies and the non-competitive long-stemmed roses and daisies that were used for decorative effect. From it, to the right and to the left of the stage, ran long tables filled with roses and outdoor flowers in the competitive classes, while in the center were tastefully arranged small tables with individual exhibits of miscellaneous flowers.

It was surprising how large and how fine a show could be held so early in the season—not so early on the calendar, but so early in the flowering season outdoors. It really seemed that everything was in perfection, though the critical noticed the green strawberries among their riper fellows and the tendency toward what might be described as buddiness in the peonies. The rose exhibit for the American Rose Society's silver medal brought out four entries in the class for twelve hybrid tea roses. They were four good entries, all well staged and named.

Dr. Robert G. Huey carried off the medal. The handle baskets were a pleasing novelty. The fair exhibitors made excellent use of garden material in these pretty receptacles. The table devoted to children's flowers, mostly wild flowers, was interesting. Competition was limited to children under 15 years of age. While this was probably strictly carried out, the exhibits suggested aid from older heads and hands in arrangement. In striking contrast to the wild flowers was a handsome exhibit of Cattleya Mossiæ opposite, safeguarded by two cautioners. Mrs. Morton Bunting displayed a well arranged table of peonies, larkspurs, irises, etc., which showed great taste. A bank of shrubbery on one side and a gorgeous vase of oriental poppies on the other were in striking contrast. The charm of the Lansdowne show was enhanced by the total absence of commercialism. It is an amateur's show pure and simple, made possible by genuine enthusiasm on the part of the members.

The attendance was small at the opening, owing to the counter attraction of a wedding in the square above, but when the wedding was over the smart set filled the flower show in all their finery, and by the time the closing hour arrived the hall was as crowded as could be. Great credit is due Samuel S. Pennock for his hard work in promoting and managing the show. The judges were Elizabeth R. Allen, W. M. Thompson, W. H. Brown, Robert Pyle and Casper Pennock.

Topic of the Hour.

There is a serious condition confronting nearly every florist today. It is how to get done on time the heavy work that usually comes at this season. The difficulty lies in the fact that the munition factories are offering such attractive pay for making their war supplies that the greenhouse establishments, in common with other industries, have suffered from the competition. Everywhere we hear the cry, "We are short of men." It is generally conceded that legitimate business cannot compete with the prices offered by these munition plants, yet the work in the greenhouses must be done if this business is to be carried on successfully. How to do it is the question. Difficult as the situation is today, it is much better than it was a year ago. Then business was bad and our product did not bring satisfactory prices. Today business is good, in the main, and we can reasonably expect that it will continue so for some time to come. The important part to keep before us in this predicament is that the work must be done in first-class shape and on time. Probably most of us have become accustomed to too great luxury in the way of being able to get all the men we needed just when we needed them. Now we cannot. This throws each one of us on his own resources. The florist who can solve the difficulty will continue to prosper. The florist who cannot will surely fall behind. Quite likely varying conditions will make different methods suit each case. The simple fact remains. Conditions are changing and we must meet them or lose ground. I do not doubt for an instant that most of us will succeed in meeting the crisis, but I know that the danger is real and pressing. The good of the business demands that we be up and doing. I believe it will be a great help to have some of our leading men tell of their difficulties and how they are overcoming them.

How Much are Dead Flowers Worth?

There is no market for them except the garbage can. And that means not only loss of sales and profits, but it represents money out, because you must pay for your stock whether you sell it or throw it away.

If you could realize on all the blossoms that now wither in stock and are discarded, think how much your profits would increase by stopping this loss. And at no additional overhead or expense.

You can do it with a

McCray Florists Refrigerator

The McCray patented system of refrigeration provides for a cool, even temperature and keeps your flowers fresh and salable, preventing loss from withered stock.

The McCray Florist Refrigerators come with plate glass doors and sides which show the flowers attractively. The different compartments vary in size to accommodate the various lengths of stems.

The woodwork of the McCray may be had in any finish to match your store's interior decoration. The linings may be had in either bevel plate mirror or white enamel, are handsome and easy to clean.

BALTIMORE.

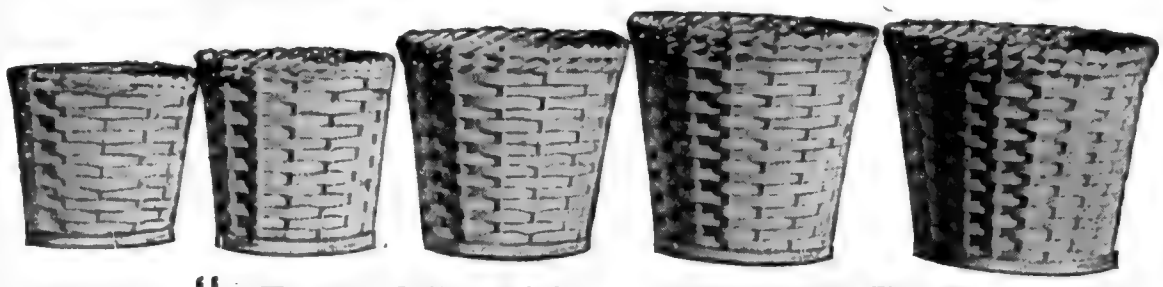
The Market.

Business conditions since Memorial day have been rather poor. There has been practically an unlimited supply of stock and prices have reached a low level. Large receipts of peonies and other outdoor stock have augmented the supply far in excess of the quantity actually needed. Roses are overplentiful and can be purchased in many instances at buyers' figures. Carnations have receded in price, although they are of good quality, considering the warm, clear days. Spanish irises, roses and peonies form the bulk of the outdoor stock, which of necessity must be low-priced to sell at all. The street boys have been handling large quantities of cut flowers at ridiculously low prices.

Various Notes.

Edwin A. Seidewitz, as reward for his efforts, was elected president of the local Rotary Club at its annual meeting and banquet in the Rennert hotel last week.

P. Campbell Erdman has been cutting quantities of greenhouse-grown gladioli of good quality and reports a heavy demand for garden roses, of which he has made a specialty this season.



George H. Cook had a heavy cut of good peonies for the Memorial day trade.

Max Fierstein, of the Moore Seed Co., Philadelphia, was a caller last week.

Edward Kress was one of the judges of the exhibits of the flower show given by the Green Spring Valley Garden Club last week.

The first annual amateur rose show, given under the joint auspices of the Women's Civic League and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, was held June 5, from 2 until 10 p. m., in the club rooms in the Florists' Exchange hall. The affair was promoted on rather short notice and those in charge deserve great credit for the showing made. I. H. Moss, George Morrison, Stevenson Bros. and Fred C. Bauer, among other florists, staged many non-competitive exhibits.

Saturday evening, about 9:30, a masked man entered the store of the Baltimore Cut Flower Co. and pointing a pistol at the manager, Thomas Barker, and William Larkins, the president of the company, who were finishing the day's business, he demanded all the money they had. Mr. Barker rushed him and the would-be bandit fired twice point-blank, but luckily missed both times. He then darted out of the store and, upon being pursued by policemen, he kept up a running pistol duel until finally cornered about ten blocks from the scene of the attempted hold-up. That no one was hurt is due only to his bad markmanship and not to the lack of bullets fired. The police officials say it is the most daring hold-up attempted in this city for many years. W. F. E.

The Market.

Since Memorial day, business has been much more quiet, though not more so than had been expected. There is a good deal of social activity, but for this an abundance of fine outdoor flowers are now obtainable. Weddings are numerous and will come more thickly as the month advances. Taken all in all, trade is not bad and the outlook for good June business is most encouraging. Roses have dropped sharply in value. The best sellers are Ophelia, Ward, Double White Killarney, Russell and Shawyer. Red varieties are harder to sell and there is an overplus of short-stemmed white flowers. Carnations continue of midwinter quality, thanks to cool nights and the absence of excessive heat. The prices are about half those prevailing for Memorial day.

Sweet peas are abundant, but sell fairly well. Yellow marguerites are inclined to be druggy. Snapdragons are of poorer quality and there are few calls for them. Darwin tulips and some double white narcissi appeared as late as June 5. Darwins never before sold in such quantities here. Fine outdoor valley is still available, but this week will finish it. For belated Memorial day crops, such as stocks, feverfew, candytuft, etc., there is hardly any demand. Lilies are much lower in price. Callas are practically over. Gladiolus Peach Blossom and Spanish iris are in heavy supply and hard to sell.

Cattleyas are going slowly. Gardenias are getting scarce. Local single peonies have appeared, but it will be another week before doubles will be in bloom. Some southern ones are available, however. Bedding out trade continues good.

Various Notes.

William Lefeber, New Castle, N. H., is one of the largest shippers of Peach Blossom gladioli and Spanish iris to the local wholesale market. He has been in business only a year, but grows excellent stock.

Norris F. Comley, of Lexington, says his Memorial day trade was excellent. He had a large house of candytuft in prime condition and another of feverfew. May 25 he started to pick from two late houses of sweet peas. His stocks made excellent money for Memorial day. He has some houses of Terrace Hall and Comet tomatoes which will soon start to ripen. The first named proves much the better here. Several houses are devoted to cucumbers. Those in beds sterilized with hot water, nearly boiling, show a vast improvement over those not similarly treated.

Owing to the lateness of the season, the annual peony and rhododendron show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, scheduled for June 10 and 11, has been postponed to June 17 and 18. Tree peonies are now in bloom. Some singles are open, but the main crop of doubles will not be well open before the middle of the month. Thanks to abundant rains and cool nights, peonies, like all other perennials, are luxuriant in growth.

Carnation Miss Theo, the new deep pink variety of Littlefield & Wyman, is not of the largest size, but takes well commercially here and proves to be a splendid shipper. Patrick Welch says no other variety has shipped to Canadian points so well as Miss Theo, and P. W. ought to know something about shipping.

The Boston Florists' Bowling Association will hold its first annual outing about the time June weddings have ceased. They have not yet decided whether it will be on land or water, but most probably the latter, as some of the bowlers are noted fishermen.

Bulb specialists all agree that last season was a most excellent one. Thanks to cool weather, the season was longer than usual. Darwin tulips have proved good sellers. Those from outdoors sell much better than the forced ones, which are not regarded as extra profitable.

S. J. Goddard continues to ship in quantities of carnations of midwinter quality. His young plants in the field are doing finely. His Memorial day trade was exceptionally heavy.

William H. Ward, of Montvale, in addition to his usual crops of carnations, forget-me-nots, etc., is cutting the finest Gladiolus The Bride I have seen in a long time. This makes a splendid flower for brides' bouquets.

In order to get the regular business finished in good season, the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club June 20 will commence at 7:30 instead of 8 p. m., in order that there may be a longer evening for entertainment and dancing. Tickets can now be had from all officers and from members of the executive committee.

Patrick Welch had a splendid Memorial day business, his shipping trade being large. He now has a fine lot of peonies, valley, roses, orchids and other seasonable flowers.

Late reports on Memorial day business are that it was the best Boston ever had. Almost every cut flower sold well and the artificial wreaths went in thousands. Some retailers had a considerable surplus, but the demand was remarkably heavy.

OF "THE FLOWERS"
936 Superior St., TOLEDO, OHIO

March, 1917, has plans for a large June show the same year, which will probably be held in marquees. Rhododendrons will be made a great feature, as they were at a similar show on Boston Common in the early seventies.

Penn is running attractive ads of his wedding bouquets in the rotogravure sections of the Sunday papers. He has an unusually large number of wedding orders for the present month.

May, while it seemed a damp and cool month, only gave us 2.35 inches of precipitation, or .65 below normal. The mean temperature was given as 2 degrees above normal, but we had only eleven clear days during the month.

W. N. C.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week's business, which included that of Memorial day, was good. There was plenty of stock on hand at the five wholesale houses to supply all wants for Memorial day. The retailers report that the general run of trade for Memorial day fell short of that of last year. Shipping orders to the surrounding towns were large and helped greatly to reduce the surplus stock on hand. The retailers say that prices asked by the wholesalers were too high for this day and that the suddenly high prices on flower days spoil a great many sales of cut flowers.

The stores handling plants report a splendid business in this line and they cleaned up long before noon Memorial day. The market afforded nearly everything in season all week. The big glut was in peonies, cape jasmines and carnations. Roses, too, were in heavy supply and demand. Sweet peas are not so plentiful as a week ago. An abundance of gladioli is expected from now on. Valley has a large demand and lilies are scarce. There are plenty of snapdragons. Greens are in good supply.

June 2, between the hours of 8 and 9 a. m. The hail was accompanied by a heavy wind and rain. After the storm was over it was found that the south end florists again were the great sufferers, but they were not alone this time. Kirkwood and Webster Groves, in the county, suffered great losses, and in some cases not a good pane of glass could be found. In the south end they had hardly gotten over their shock of ten days ago; some had already repaired their damage. Among these were John Held, Meier Bros. and W. H. Kruse. Their loss this time is even greater than before. Frank Fillmore and William Schray & Sons lost what was left by the last storm. John M. Walther and Charles Beyer also suffered loss. Benjamin Albers, in the extreme southern part, lost heavily, also John Knoll and Emil Loewman.

The Bourdet Floral Co. and the Missouri Botanical Garden were caught this time with quite heavy losses. The greatest loss was sustained by H. J. Weber & Sons, George B. Windler and all the market gardeners and cemeteries who had more or less glass. In Kirkwood W. A. Rowe's loss will reach eighty per cent. Others suffering damage from the storm were A. S. Cerny, Oscar May, W. J. Pilcher, F. Ude & Son, Wm. Winter, Oakland Floral Co., Deutschmann Bros., W. J. Edwards, Philip Goebel, Jr., A. F. Kopp, Hartman Bros., Hugo Gross, Frank Vennemann, L. Armstrong, Charles Meyer and H. Meier. At Webster Groves the Connon Floral Co. lost more than one-half of its glass, as did Joseph Hauser. At Old Orchard John Steinicke lost heavily.

The loss of the glass alone in Kirkwood and Webster Groves will reach nearly 100,000 feet, with over half of this insured by the Florists' Hail Association. Together with the loss of the city florists, it should amount to 60,000 to 75,000 feet more. The damage of the county florists was not only to the glass, but also to field stock, which was beaten down and broken off by the heavy wind, especially the gladioli and carnations. The heavy crop of gladioli expected this summer now will be greatly reduced. According to the daily press of today, the loss from the storm in the city will reach $100,000.

Various Notes.

The five wholesale houses have agreed to keep open doors until 5 p. m. Saturdays this summer and to remain closed Sundays, as usual. Beginning June 12, from 12 o'clock until 5 p. m., they will make no deliveries of goods, this rule only to be in force until September 16.

T. Pfister, of New York, called on the trade last week, taking orders for natural preserved butterflies for floral use. Mr. Pfister says his novelty has taken a good hold with the florists.

From the reports of the local florists, Memorial day business was not so good as expected, but some report quite a large business, especially the plantsmen, who say that business was heavier than usual for this day.

Fred H. Meinhardt, state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern Missouri, says now that the biggest part of the planting rush is over, he will get at the duties of his office. Any florist wishing to become a member of the society should advise Mr. Meinhardt.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. reports a splendid run of business for Memorial day and had a steady demand for cut flowers from Monday on. Paddy Patton is over head and ears in work in the supply department.

Grimm & Gorly and the Mullanphy Florists, the two large downtown stores, had their large force working overtime Monday and Tuesday attending to Memorial day orders. Their fine window displays attracted buyers in large numbers. Foster, Siegel and Riessen also report good business.

Seedsmen say they expect quite a large party to attend the meeting of the American Seed Trade Association, which will hold its thirty-fourth annual convention at Chicago, June 20 to 22. According to the reports of the leaders, this was a most prosperous season.

Count von Hoffman, head of George Waldbart's force, says they put in a busy week with large funeral orders. A number of big weddings are booked for this month.

Joseph Matter has moved from Watson road to Walton and Olive streets, at Clayton, Mo., where he has a splendidly equipped nursery. Mr. Matter reports a good demand for landscape gardening work this season.

W. W. Ohlweiler, general manager of the Missouri Botanical Garden, recently addressed the Lindell Boulevard Improvement Association on "Flowering Plants for St. Louis."

George Angermueller says this year's Memorial day shipping business was the largest he ever had in cut flowers and supplies. It kept his working force busy packing long after working hours.

David Geddis, head of Vandervoort's floral department, says his big force had all they could do to handle the Memorial day trade. All plants had a heavy call this year.

William Ossick, of Smith's wholesale house, has sold his car and contemplates the purchase of a Studebaker pleasure car in the near future, so that he will be in position to throw a little dust at his partner, William Smith, who drives a Hudson.

ular monthly conference June 2, and prepared a suitable program for the club's thirtieth anniversary meeting this week, which will be held at W. J. Pilcher's place in Kirkwood.

A man posing as a revenue agent collected quite a sum of money from florists of St. Louis, by showing a badge as special internal revenue collector. He collected $1.25 on each automobile, as a special war tax ordered by the government. After collecting $2.50 from H. Young & Son, on Maryland avenue, he asked the way to the Sanders Nurseries. Mr. Young became suspicious and followed him to the C. C. Sanders place, where he called a policeman and had the crook arrested. Afterward it was learned that he had duped many florists throughout the city.

are arriving in quantity, particularly the white and yellow varieties. Gladioli are more plentiful than a week ago and, while there is not a great variety as yet, they are well received by the public. Carnations are plentiful and low-priced.

Sweet peas are abundant and there is a greater variety than at any other time this season. They are of fine quality and quantities are sold at low prices. Poppies have made their appearance. Thousands of baskets of pansies have been sold, but they are giving way to other flowers and plants. A considerable number of potted begonia plants are offered and there continues to be a good sale of potted geraniums. Fern baskets and porch baskets are selling quite well. There is a greater variety of hardy rose plants in bloom, the rambler roses having for the most part disappeared. Cosmos, carnations, fuchsias, cannas and many other plants for bedding purposes are abundant. Arbor-vitæ, boxwood and other shrubs are offered.

Fred P. Wolfinger has had much funeral and wedding work of late. Transient trade has held up well, considering the lateness of the season.

Philips Bros. report business unusually good, the month of May being one of the best in the history of their business. Large funerals helped to swell the total.

Henry A. Strobell had the decorations at the new Robert Treat hotel when Roosevelt visited the city last week. Because of the limited number of guests, the ballroom was reduced one-third in size by palms, ferns, etc.

Peter Penek reports that business continues good.

The name of the florists' business conducted at 435 Vose avenue, South Orange, Rogers' Floral Shop, has been changed to Rogers & Pierson. C. T. Pierson is in charge of the store.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co. reports business as being good. This spring the company has planted more stock at its new nurseries at Liberty Corners.

June 2 was floral day at the industrial exposition in the First Regiment armory, held in connection with Newark's anniversary celebration. The various exhibitors decorated their booths with flowers in honor of the day.

A flower show will be given June 15 by the home office of the Prudential Insurance Co.

The window of August Begerow, during the last two weeks, has attracted much attention. It was a representation of "Port Newark, Past and Present." Part of the window represented the landing of Robert Treat and other founders of Newark, with Indians watching from a distance. The rest of the window represented the new Port Newark terminal development, with great wharves at which are docked large vessels. There were miniature storehouses, railroads, factory buildings, etc. R. B. M.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

THE city of Los Angeles has just brought into bloom the largest man-made wild flower garden in the world. According to the press agent employed by the Chamber of Commerce, it comprises nearly five acres in Exposition park, close to the business district, and contains 230 examples of wild plant life of California. The display is so complete that it is used by the schools in horticultural class work. The cost was $5,000, borne by the county.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Memorial day business, taken as a whole, was satisfactory. Flowers were plentiful, but the demand was sufficiently brisk to move practically everything, at fairly firm prices. The downtown stores did not come in for a large share of the business, as a number of stands were maintained near the cemeteries, and people were not inclined to go downtown for flowers when they could buy good stock at the cemetery gates.

June promises to be a record-breaking month as far as the sale of flowers for weddings, commencements, etc., is concerned. There have been restrictions at the city schools for some time regarding the giving of flowers to graduates, but the ban has been lifted this season and the florists are taking full advantage of the opportunity. Several attractive windows have appeared, featuring suitable baskets and other novelties as graduation presents.

With the exception of orchids, which are really scarce, flowers still are plentiful. Some fine specimens of Sobralia macrantha appeared last week, however. The cut of roses is rather large, but everything cleans up fairly well. Fine Beauties move quickly and there is an excellent demand for the yellow varieties of roses, such as Aaron Ward, Sunburst, etc. Russell sells well and Cecile Brunner maintains its popularity with remarkable persistency, while September Morn roses are popular at some shops. Some nice poppies are coming in and they are readily absorbed. The supply of gladioli is increasing rapidly, but it moves well and the offerings have not become excessive as yet. Carnations show good quality and the supply is about equal to the demand. Sweet peas are plentiful and there is considerable shipping demand. A large cut of Lilium giganteum continues to arrive. Peonies are about gone.

Various Notes.

June is starting out auspiciously as far as wedding business for the florists is concerned. Some of the events are of particular interest to the trade for other reasons than good business, as some of the principals are members of the trade or of the members' families. Edward Goeppner, with Podesta & Baldocchi, who operates one of the leading downtown stores, was the first to fall in line. He and Miss Annette A. Nespoli were married June 1. Next comes a wedding in the Pelicano family. Miss Tillie Pelicano, daughter of Frank Pelicano, was married June 5 to A. Costa, of Costa Bros., a large importing concern of this city. Other engagements have been announced in the trade and it is expected that the nuptials will take place during brides' month.

C. F. Gutting, Los Angeles, Herewith Sustains His Fish Stories.

Many regret to hear of the death last week of Martin Petersen, who conducted a store at 488 Haight street. He was a brother of N. Petersen, of Menlo Park.

Mrs. Darbee, the Hyde street florist, says she had all the shipping business for Memorial day that she could possibly handle. Everything was in fine shape and as far as she has learned the stock reached its destinations in good condition. Counter business, she says, continues good for this season of the year.

Jack Olson, of the New Roserie, reports Decoration day business much better than it was a year ago. His house now is busy with orders for weddings, schools, etc. He is preparing to plant his greenhouse during the dull season.

Domoto Bros. had a fine cut of giganteums for Decoration day and say that shipping business was unusually good. They sent out quantities of stocks, gypsophilas and coreopsis, as well as outdoor stock.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is bringing in a nice crop of American Beauty roses, which finds a good demand. There is a fine cut of Russell, Aaron Ward, Sunburst and other varieties.

Frank Pelicano, who has been suffering from rheumatism, was back at the store of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. for a few days last week, but had to leave for the springs again.

F. J. Bertrand, of Joseph's, on Grant avenue, says business has been brisk since Memorial day.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. advertised Memorial day specialties ready to take to the cemeteries and the response was gratifying. Attractive baskets met with great favor.

Miss Rothschild, of the Bellevue Flower Shop, on Geary street, says business is keeping up well for this time of the year, with indications of a good summer trade.

A few callas were brought in for Decoration day, but the dry weather and wind practically finished them several weeks ago.

C. Kooyman reports a fine demand for Gladiolus America and Mrs. Francis King, grown for him by J. E. Branin, of San Lorenzo. Mr. Branin's stock took a prize at the San Rafael flower show recently.

Much interest was shown in the sweet pea show at the Palace hotel, June 9 and 10. It was one of the finest shows ever held here, as the flowers were in excellent condition and the competition for the prizes was keen. S. H. G.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Good stock is still scarce, but the new-crop carnations are helping the situation a little. There is no trouble in getting plenty of stock fit for funeral pieces and immediately use for decoration, but the stock fit for long-distance shipping takes some looking for. Funeral work has kept up well, many fine pieces being made during the week, but it is still the rule with many retailers to send out their pieces by boys on bicycles. If they could see the condition the pieces often arrive in, they would probably change their methods.

Among the more showy outdoor flowers this week is the light blue Delphinium Belladonna, a fine thing for decorations. Gladioli are at their best and are among the most satisfactory flowers for shipping now. Dahlias are becoming more plentiful and a few early asters are seen, but the time of the latter is not yet. Many pretty window effects have been worked out in yellow and blue, using delphiniums, cornflowers, etc., in conjunction with yellow annuals, chrysanthemums, marigolds and others. The market for greens is good and there is none going to waste. Ferns and palms are in good demand.

Various Notes.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery

Co., has just returned from a fishing trip to Bear lake. Instead of the usual stories of the big ones that got away, he has packed home photographs of his daily catches and one of the photographs is here reproduced. The new fern, he says, is selling finely.

At the store of the L. A. Floral Co. a good number of Memorial day orders had to be turned down owing to lack of sufficiently good stock for long-distance shipping.

O. C. Saakes is showing an elegant line of decorated baskets.

Good pot plants are making a fine show in the windows of Wright's Flower Shop.

Oscar Paseman, who has been with Morris Goldenson for several years, joined the force of the Broadway Florist June 1.

In addition to the nursery delivery trucks, Howard & Smith have placed a delivery car on the road to take care of the florists' end of the business.

Fred Hills reports the demand for Boston ferns so good that he has to take orders in advance and hold the stock until ready for customers.

H. R. Richards.

SAN JOSE, CAL.

The fact that large fields of sweet peas, growing for seed, are commonplace sights in the Santa Clara valley does not seem to dampen the enthusiasm of San Jose flower-lovers for the sweet pea. The San Jose Chamber of Commerce put on a three-day sweet pea show, commencing May 17. Although no prizes were offered, a large number of exhibitors participated and the daily attendance was large. Aside from an exhibit of field-grown blooms by the Braslan Seed Growers Co., all entries were made by amateurs, chief among whom was Emile Ralston, who entered twenty-seven varieties of the Spencer type, including most of the newly introduced sorts.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The cool weather continued till after June 1. Outdoor flowers were available only in limited quantities for Memorial day and the growers of cut stock were called upon to supply the deficiency. This caused an acute shortage, especially in carnations. The situation was relieved slightly by shipments of flowers from California. Blooming pot plants were in great demand and nearly everything was sold or cut. Every dealer interviewed stated that his business for Memorial day was the best for several years, and that the month of May showed a marked improvement over last year.

Dealers in bedding stock have had a brisk season so far, with prospects that the demand will continue well into the month of June. Seedsmen report their May business better than last year. One house claims an advance of thirty per cent. Shippers of cut flowers have not often been able to fill all orders from outside points since the first of the year, so the market has been slightly on the short side. Shippers of growing stock have had a normal business. Wholesale growers of cut stock have had no waste and have realized a profit from their output.

Last week brought in the first pink, white and lavender peonies, and the first gaillardias, cornflowers and outdoor sweet peas. A few delphiniums are shown.

Various Notes.

Mr. Grannis, of the Erie Greenhouses, says the season has been good for selling bedding stock.

Theodore Weddell is cutting some excellent sweet peas. Max Smith said the demand for them was good.

Mrs. Martha Rahn, wife of Albert Rahn, of the Rahn & Herbert Co., was buried May 31, her forty-third birthday had she lived. Three children, all of school age, are left motherless. Her funeral was attended by a number of members of the Portland Floral Society.

August Zitzewitz had a large cut of carnations for Memorial day.

The excursion of members of the Portland Floral Society to view H. E. Weed's peonies, at the Beaverton Nursery, planned for May 28, was postponed because the plants were not in bloom.

S. G. Lubliner has taken a contract to furnish floral decorations for some of the streets over which the principal parades will pass during the rose festival.

The Routledge Seed & Floral Co. finished moving to its new quarters, at 145 and 147 Second street, June 3. The company is to be congratulated on its business expansion.

S. Doving, of Max Smith's store force, expects to leave Portland soon. His place will be filled by O. R. Moeller.

J. Feser said his company was unable to fill some large orders for outdoor blooms.

Joseph Huserick, the wire worker, has had a strong demand for baskets from California. He said the price of wire had increased about $35 per ton.

H. E. Weed, of the Beaverton Nursery, began filling orders for peony blooms last week.

Niklas & Son report a splendid increase in their Memorial day business.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

THOMAS TOBIN, vice-president of the Missouri Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo., has been appointed a member of the city health and hospital board.

THE Mount Sterling Seed Co., of Mount Sterling, O., has been incorporated at $50,000 by I. F. Tabb, M. O. Cockrell, J. H. Smith and J. L. Brown.

CHARLES J. BOLGIANO has provided $1,200 for the erection of a mess hall and kitchen at Camp Conoy, conducted by the boys' department of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A.

SUCH mail advices as are allowed to come from European growers do not hold out great encouragement as to seed supplies for 1917 season. The indications are that the conditions of last season will be intensified.

IN the Nashville district turnip seed has been harvested, the yield being good this season. The acreage of cow peas there bids fair to be the smallest of years. The local seedsmen report that the season has been prolonged so much this year that sales have about equaled the normal, although there was no rush at any time.

THE war has resulted in the addition of another clause in the terms of sale of the European growers and wholesalers, viz.: "Delivery to be made at usual time unless prevented by war, blockade, revolution, prohibition of export, riot, civil commotion or force majeure. In such case any order or unfulfilled part of same to be canceled and no claim to be made."

MANY business, financial and fraternal organizations of Rochester, N. Y., have adopted resolutions on the death of F. A. Stecher, May 23, in his sixty-seventh year. Mr. Stecher had many personal friends as well as business acquaintances among seedsmen, as the lithographic company founded by him has made many catalogue covers and is the trade's principal source of supply on colored seed pockets.

WHAT will the pansy seed situation be this year? Of course, there are considerable quantities of imported stock carried over from late deliveries last season that, if properly stored, are as good as new seed, and there is an annual increase in the production of American seed, but the majority of the pansy seed used in the United States still comes from Germany. The British blockade is today tighter than it was last year; then parcel post shipments got through, but they are not doing so now.

IN the Bermuda onion seed business, says H. G. Hastings, of Atlanta, Ga., there is nothing like the interest the seed trade took in it a few years ago. The growing of Bermuda onions in Texas has passed beyond the speculative stage and has settled down to be a comparatively steady business insofar as the acreage planted each year is concerned and, judging from the results of marketing the crop of 1916, there will be little variation, up or down, in the acreage planted next autumn.
